WURLITZER
UNIT ORGANS

The Only Organ Whose Echo is Heard in the Box Office

A pleasant feature of the possession of a Wurlitzer Unit Organ lies in the gratifying effect noticeable in the box office check-up at the end of the day.

For the Wurlitzer Unit Organ has a tangible box office power—an attraction as definite as that of any star whose name ever graced a lobby display.

Any Wurlitzer representative or any Wurlitzer Unit Organ owner can show you in five minutes the more salient points of why this pipe organ has proved itself to be so obviously better; —the exclusive features that have made it the repeat choice of the largest as well as the smallest exhibitors.

But the important thing is not that you know the Wurlitzer Unit Organ furnishes more interpretive accompaniments, more thrillingly impressive overtures, more dependable service. The important thing to you is that is that you are installing the organ that the public knows and recognizes as the best.

HAVE you sent for the Wurlitzer Theatre Organ Catalog? It is not only a treatise on theatre organ design but a valuable guide to theatre construction and decoration.

ANOTHER good book to send for is the catalog of Wurlitzer Grand Pianos. The new antique finish and the exclusive new period designs can be secured in styles to match any decorative motif.

THAT ROYLE GIRL Says

"A girl can be annoyed by men or not—just as she pleases."

"I'm just a lot of goods which is trying to get together. You've got to give me a chance."

"I hate a man who thinks the country is going to the dogs because it's running out of ready-mades like himself."

"When a man comes from God knows where and has got his name in electric lights at twenty-four—I'm for him."

"Sure I like him. He had his pick of a flock of chickens—but he had to have me."

"You'll have Joan Daisy Royle against you in this trial, Mr. District Attorney. And that's something for which Harvard Law School gives you no preparation a-tall."

"That's what trouble's for—to make real men and women out of us."

"How can I, with a home like mine, dream lovely things about anybody or get an ambition for something big? Well—I'll show you!"

Prize Picture announced in

Paramount's

Fannie Hurst's $50,000 Prize Story and the big Paramount Picture to be produced from it will be entitled

"The Moving Finger"

YOU read in Paramount's announcements of the Liberty Special. Well, here it is: "The Moving Finger," by Fannie Hurst, author of "Humoresque."

James Cruze will produce the picture. Miss Hurst is now in Hollywood conferring with Cruze and with his scenario writer, Walter Woods.

So tremendous are the theme and the possibilities of "The Moving Finger" that its production was entrusted to the man who made "The Covered Wagon" and who has just completed an equally great epic, "The Pony Express."

"The Moving Finger" will run in Liberty Magazine as a serial. Liberty will advertise it in newspapers throughout the United States.

The Liberty Contest, to which over 100,000 stories were submitted, received nation-wide advertising in the magazine and in newspapers. The same kind of advertising will continue.

A $50,000 story; $1,000,000 worth of advertising; a James Cruze production, by Fannie Hurst.

HIGHLY EXCELLENT. TELLS A POIGnantly engrossing tale. There isn't a doubt that in it Alice Joyce and Clive Brook reveal characterizations which are the best they have ever done. Billy Kent Schaeffer does one of the best things this reviewer has ever seen—and how he can act!

—Geo. Gerhard, N. Y. Eve. World

A SUCCESS. UNIVERSAL COMPANY scores with best domestic drama ever produced.

Another success is registered this week at the Colony.

Baggot's direction is an achievement.

The cast is without a flaw! Clive Brook offers as touchy and sincere a portrait as the screen has seen. Miss Joyce makes of the wife a wholly convincing figure! This Billy Kent Schaeffer is an amazing youngster.

and CLIVE BROOK

Presented by CARL LAEMMLE

"THE HOME MAKER" IS A STUDY IN realism not often seen on the screen. It is a picture for those who like something beyond the usual movie hokum. Clive Brook does much to make Knapp's character stand out. Alice Joyce, it seems to me, cannot be improved upon. Billy Kent Schaeffer reaches a state of perfection not always found in a juvenile performance. Universal might have moralized the "papa loves mama" element and made it ridiculous, but thanks to the direction of King Baggot, there is no such catastrophe.

—N. Y. American

EXCELLENT PICTURE! A WISTFUL, human fragment from life!

—N. Y. Daily Mirror

CLIVE BROOK DOES HANDSOMELY. George Fawcett does his share of the good work.

—N. Y. Times

REGISTERS HIT! CAREFULLY DIRECTED! Efficiently acted! Baggot has created a real living family on the screen. Billy Kent Schaeffer gives every appearance of being the most talented child actor to appear on the screen since Jackie Coogan.

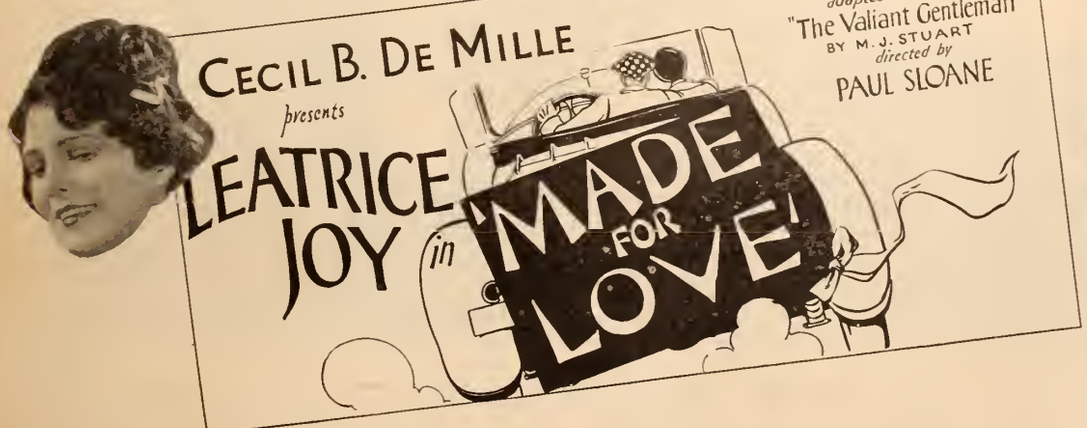
ICE JOY
Star Productions

BEAUTY, artistry, and an irresistible magnetism, are the attributes that have made Leatrice Joy a star of tremendous appeal to the public and her name a guarantee of big box office receipts to the exhibitor.

It was Cecil B. De Mille, with his unerring faculty for discovering unusual talent, who first realized the possibilities of this New Orleans beauty and made her a star.

That De Mille again demonstrated he is the "showman supreme," is proved by the distinct personal triumphs of Miss Joy in such successes as "Manslaughter," "The Dressmaker From Paris," and "The Ten Commandments."

Cecil B. De Mille is capitalizing on the tremendous popularity won by Leatrice Joy in those productions by starring her in four pictures which in story value, lavishness of production and costuming, satisfy the public demand for real entertainment.



Stories that reflect life in its colorful complexes—
Settings that mark the last word in artistic richness—
Casts of screen favorites with an established following—
A star whose name is a proved box-office magnet—
Make These Leatrice Joy Starring Productions Sure-Fire Box Office Attractions.

Four In a Row

Well, now that we are on the subject of box office successes—and we certainly are, right now—I can name you four independent ones in a row from one company. I know some more also but we are now dealing with the first four pictures for the new season from Associated Exhibitors.

To begin with, there is the picture "Headlines," a title I don't fancy much because it hasn't much lure but after all a lot of these lureful titles are falling flat on their noses and maybe, soon, the title won't be as important as the picture. "Headlines" is a story of a woman's sacrifice, not an old and ugly woman, but a woman young and sweet enough for any man's bother and happily played by Alice Joyce. Her sacrifice is for her cruelly young daughter, a flapper with all the extreme selfishness of youth in the modern manner. Virginia Lee Corbin is the best flapper the screen has presented. She teaches a lesson as well as entertains and the picture, while broad, extreme and swift, can laugh at all censors because it actually shows the unlovely side of flapperism. It's better than a sermon because it's convincing.

One of my reviewers saw this picture and praised it with faint damns. Later he told me it was better than "Flaming Youth." He was so right in his private comment that I've given him another chance because this is one of the really great pictures of ten years. It's well written, Peter Milne saw to that, it's logical, sane and with a fine and intriguing plot. It's compelling, powerful and delicate and could run at the Capitol, New York for four weeks to everybody's profit.

I think Jack Woody is a conservative when he says he's just "strong for that picture."

What it needs in every local community is exploitation, going to it in a showman's way, because it has everything that goes to make real compelling entertainment.

Well, so much for that, and now we come to the Monte Banks starring effort, called "Keep Smiling." I took the liberty of recommending some cuts which I was advised already had been made because I only saw the sample print. But here really is a great big, fine exciting picture with danger and comedy walking along side by side like the Siamese twins and very nice too, all the way. I don't know whether I regard Banks as really a comedian but certainly this is a picture of box office power and attraction value. It's the sort of thing that can be exploited and make good on the exploitation and what more can those with money hunger ask?

Then there's "Under the Rouge," running to fine and well deserved business at the Colony. Tom Moore is the star and in excellent support are Mary Alden, Eileen Percy, Chester Conklin and Carmelita Geraghty. Lewis H. Moomaw directed it from A. P. Younger's story and he has made one of the very best box office pictures of the year. It's a strong, properly sentimental play, gripping and absolutely satisfying as real entertainment. Mary Alden, the woman magnificent of the screen, contributes tremendously to the power of the play. "Under the Rouge" is a real production.

Now we come to "Manhattan Madness" an Oscar Price offering with Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor. It is delightfully preposterous and has enough battle in it to satisfy all that could have been expected from the heavyweight champion of the world. The box office power of Dempsey will ride this picture into money and there again we get into the thing that satisfies.

Four in a row! A fine start for the season. We congratulate the exhibitors who are using and who will use independent pictures.

"Headlines"

Another one of the truly big pictures that are making Associated discussed wherever exhibitors gather together

The value of this picture lies chiefly in the characterization of Virginia Lee Corbin. Miss Corbin, as the little flapper, can certainly show cards and spades to other flapper actresses. Her acting out of Some scribed by no other word than by "wonderful." Some sympathy is awakened for Miss Corbin by the fact that she comes to her senses when she finds out how much her mother was willing to sacrifice in order that she might be happy. Mr. McGregor, too, awakens a little sympathy, chiefly by the fact that he did not turn down the mother, although the mother was much older than he, and although the daughter was the sake of the daughter, although the daughter was much prettier than the mother. In this way he shows character. Miss Joyce acts well, and her appearance has in no way deteriorated despite that several nilestones have been added to her age; she looks youthful. The direction is very good, and no fault can be found with the acting of the subordinate players.

The story deals with a heroine who thinks that her young daughter has stolen from her the man (hero) she loves. But she is mistaken, for her daughter, realizing how much her mother was willing to sacrifice in order that she may be happy, comes to her senses; she reveals to the rounder's apartment was to save mother's visit to the rounder's apartment was to save her. The mother marries the hero, and the young flapperish daughter the editor of the local paper, the man who suppressed the scandal; he loved the young woman.

Unless your patrons object to high life in pictures, however well done, "Headlines" should satisfy them.

HARRISONS REPORTS

"Headlines"

Mother's Sacrifice to Save Her Jazzy Daughter's Reputation Makes Story That Should Appeal

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Two possible angles are suggested by the title of the Associated Exhibitors release "Headlines." One that it is a story of newspaper life and the other that it involves something that would make good newspaper headlines. Both of these figure in the plot to a limited extent, for the story opens in the editorial rooms of a big daily, two of the principals are members of the staff and there is a threat of a "headline" story in the big climax.

The predominating point of the production, however, is the unhesitating sacrifice of her good name by a mother to save her daughter's reputation. This occurs when the mother follows her daughter to the villain's apartment and hiding her in a bedroom comes out and faces the irate wife looking for divorce evidence. While by no means new, such a situation is always effective if well handled as it is in this instance. Of course all turns out right eventually and the mother's sacrifice is appreciated by the man she loves.

The principal character in the drama is a woman feature writer who has kept secret the fact that she has a grown daughter, but from the minute this girl appears on the scene she is the centre of interest. Posing as her mother's younger sister she turns out to be an ultra-modern flapper with exceedingly advanced ideas of independence. This introduces a decided jazz atmosphere and the sex angle is rather daringly suggested in some of the scenes.

Alice Joyce gives a sincere and thoroughly sympathetic portrayal of the mother while Virginia Lee Corbin is excellent as the jazzy, baby daughter. The male members of the cast have roles of less importance but acquit themselves creditably although Elliott Nugent seems rather miscast as the city editor.

The production details are adequate, the continuity smooth and the direction well handled, and "Headlines" should provide satisfactory entertainment. Patrons who may be fed up on jazz and sex will find that this angle is counteracted by the appeal of the mother's role.

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHEN a story is based on the theme of a woman's sacrifice of her good name and position to protect someone very dear to her you can bank upon it carrying enough heart appeal to please the average picturegoer. "Headlines" is such a story—and it tells its plot with a minimum effort, there being no beating around the bush in expressing it in terms of simple, direct action. The sponsors have not written any melodrama into it. There is surprise attending a few important situations. You anticipate scandal and a courtroom scene which could have been developed from the divorce angle.

The title never comes into the prominence suggested from the opening flash when the heroine, a feature writer on a city newspaper, refuses an assignment to cover some European question so that she might correct her flapper daughter, expelled from school. There is a good atmosphere of the "city room" with some gentle comedy, introducing the old fellow who writes the lovelorn column. The characters are well planted. The heroine has kept it a secret that she has a daughter and tries to discourage a young suitor. But the girl comes home and passes her mother off as her sister until the older woman finally declares the relationship to the ardent youth.

The subsequent action plays up the flirtatious moods of the flapper who delivers herself of romantic wise-cracks and has a giddy time with her various escorts. The girl really dominates the picture the moment she appears. And Virginia Lee Corbin is an excellent type for the flapper. Her biggest scene is when the mother, portrayed by Alice Joyce, breaks in on an engagement she is having with a wealthy idler in the latter's home. This bit of action is the climax, and it carries some effective dramatics as the man's wife surprises him while the mother, refusing to reveal her daughter's presence, takes the blame. The youthful suitor makes his entrance and is chagrined over the affair. But in the end he appreciates the woman's fine sacrifice and joins her on shipboard. So there is no scandal—and all ends happily. The picture is well treated in its continuity and directed with an eye to dramatic values.

THEME. Drama of a mother's sacrifice in bringing scandal upon herself to save her daughter's honor. Finds happiness in romance and the salvation of the girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The sincere acting by Alice Joyce, who was daring enough to play a mother role. The competent support. Atmosphere in newspaper office. The cabaret scene. The climax when the mother lies to defend her daughter. The continuity.

DIRECTION. Has brought out some fine human interest in simple story. Makes characters real and builds important scenes well. Lays off melodramatic stuff. The villain turns out to be a square-shooter. Mounts it convincingly—except for heroine's home—which is a trifle too lavish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up title—and teaser it through newspapers. Play up Alice Joyce as playing one of the most courageous roles of her career. Emphasize the love of a mother for her daughter.

DRAWING POWER. A good audience picture for the average houses. Star well known and should draw patronage. O. K. for downtown districts and small towns.

SUMMARY. A first rate picture, simple of plot, but handled intelligently. Scenarist and director have treated it sympathetically. No hokum nor any melodramatics. Just a pleasant little picture which holds the interest.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Phyllis Dale	Alice Joyce
Roberta Dale	Virginia Lee Corbin
Larry Emmett	Malcolm McGregor
Roger Hellman	Elliott Nugent
Donald Austen	Harry T. Morey
Stella Austen	Ruby Blaine

Phyllis Dale, a widow, is engaged in Newspaper work. Her flapper daughter is expelled from school and returns home. Phyllis, who loves Larry, permits Roberta to pass as her sister. Roberta flirts outrageously with Larry, and also with the city editor so Phyllis' fiancé. Eventually she keeps this goes to the apartment of Phyllis hearing of wife enters. Phyllis appears and when the rading ladies as co-respondent in the headlines of the case. She refuses explanations to Larry, who departs for Europe. But Roberta tells the truth about the matter with the result that Larry and Phyllis sail together to be married at sea, while Roberta weds City Editor Hellman.

A SOPHISTICATED tale of mother love and sacrifice is engagingly unfolded in this picture. It is scenically lavished, the action could be speeded up materially by judicious cutting. But the suspense element is well maintained and the production and the whole, offers a good deal to entertain.

There are a number of jazzy sequences depicting groups of revellers in cabarets and in the luxurious apartments of the villain, Austen. In one of these, Roberta has wine spilled on her dress and dares the host to take a shower bath with her. This he does, and we are edified by the spectacle of the two emerging from the shower, wringing wet, much to the amusement of the remaining guests.

The biggest scene is that in which Phyllis calmly steps from Austen's bedroom to face his wife and her raiding party, in order that Roberta may not be compromised. This sequence is enacted without theatrics and is irreprobable, as had both women announced their presence, even a divorce detective could scarcely "frame up" the desired evidence.

What comedy there is in the production emanates from Roberta, nick-named "Bubbs," who describes every man she meets as "masterful" and suggests to each that he marry her. Finally, Hellman, takes her at her word, and appears with an engagement and a wedding ring, only to be laughed to shame by the flirtatious flapper.

The best performance is rendered by Alice Joyce as the charmingly youthful mother of a grown-up daughter. Her fears that age may come all too soon are well portrayed, and those sequences where her heart is breaking at the mistaken thought she is to lose Larry to her daughter are rich in pathos. Miss Joyce seems more beautiful than ever since her return to the screen.

Malcolm McGregor is a satisfying hero, and Harry Morey, an excellent villain. Virginia Lee Corbin gives a realistic interpretation of an empty headed flapper, and Ruby Blaine is good in a bit depicting a divorcee seeking wife. Elliott Nugent is miscast as the City Editor and renders a colorless characterization.

The lighting and photography are up to the mark, and the settings are in keeping with the character of the production.

Make the most of the title and feature the big names in the cast. You should have no difficulty in effecting newspaper tie-ups for this one in a number of ways. For instance, offer a pass to any citizen whose name may be spelled from the letters on the front page headlines of the paper whose cooperation you secure.

Producer: Fine Arts, Inc.

As a Whole ... CERTAINLY A LIVELY ONE IF THEY LIKE THEM FAST AND FURIOUS. SHOULD BE GOOD BOX-OFFICE POSSIBILITIES IN STAR COMBINATION.
Stars ... First joint appearance since their marriage. Dempsey has a long fighting segment toward the close that should satisfy his admirers. Estelle Taylor hasn't much to do but escape pursuers.
Cast ... All unimportant. Includes George Seigmann, Frank Campeau, "Bull" Montana, Jane Starr.
Type of Story ... Mystery melodrama. It's a good thing this turned out to be a joke or you would be apt to wonder why they blamed the "madness" on Manhattan for madness it certainly would be to try and put over anything like this as straight stuff. But it works out that the whole rough and tumble was staged to furnish a wholesale with a thrill. There's a wholesale slaughter for about two reels with at least a dozen deaths recorded. Then there is a quantity of mysterious business by way of sliding panels, trap doors, trick entrances and exits and all the other mechanical devices that aid to a suspense. On top of this you have the thriving romance of the western hero who gets into all this excitement through his desire to help a lady in distress. There is also some comedy interpolations but these break in on the story abruptly and are never sufficiently amusing to warrant the interruptions. So much happens in these last reels that it would be difficult to attempt a short synopsis. It works around to a surprise finish however, with the hero discovering he was just being shown a good time by some of his friends who wanted to cure him of his pet habit of "roasting" New York. The surprise works out very well and will help to appease whatever ire they may feel for the preceding absurdities. The surprise covers it up pretty well. ... No doubt but what you'll find this a good drawing card due to the recent marriage of Dempsey and Miss Taylor. They'll want to see them co-starred in a picture. ... With the recent publicity acquired by the stars it should be an easy matter to get your lobby in good shape. ... Tie-up with Manhattan Madness. Their joint appearance should bring in a crowd of fans who follow up the private affairs of screen stars as closely as they do their professional careers. Men ... will be interested to know that the champion has plenty of fighting to do.
FILM DAILY

"Manhattan Madness"—with Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor
(Ass'd Exhibitors, Sept. 20, 5,620 ft., 65 to 80 min.)
This is an out-and-out melodrama. And it is the kind that should find favor with the fans who enjoy a rollicking good story for the reason that there is some humor woven in the fabric. Mr. Dempsey acts surprisingly well. Miss Taylor appears charming. The production is good, and the setting beautiful.
The story is the same one in which Douglas Fairbanks appeared several years ago—when Triangle was in existence. It deals with a cowboy who leaves his ranch to go East for the purpose of collecting money for stock he sold to the German Government. In the East he is met by many of his college chums and because he insists that the West beats New York for thrills, his friends proceed to give him real thrills. With some friend actors, they stage an affair in which the pretty heroine is made to appear as being held forcibly by some mysterious persons. She asks for his help, but just as he goes to help her she disappears behind some sliding wall, being dragged behind it by some mysterious person. Several fights are staged, in which the hero engages many persons at a time. After many thrills, his friends appear, and inform him that everything was framed for his benefit. The hero feels humiliated, but he decides to turn the tables on them; by aid of his two Western chums, he holds his friends at bay with guns, and then carries the heroine away; he had already fallen in love with her, and was angered to think that the kisses she gave him during the time he was trying to rescue her from her captors were insincere. He finds out, however, that she, too, loves him. And so they marry.
HARRISON'S REPORTS

DEMPSEY FEATURE
"MANHATTAN MADNESS," Associated Exhibitors' Photoplay. Stars, Jack Dempsey, Estelle Taylor. Director, John McDermott. Length, 5,620 Feet.—Jack Dempsey, it appears, has not given up the fighting business altogether, for while the prizering has not been honored with his stalwart presence in many a moon, he is now appearing before the camera in his first feature picture. The youngsters, as well as the adults, will undoubtedly evince enthusiastic over this picture, and the name of Dempsey and Estelle Taylor will draw a large audience.
The story is woven about a man who comes out of the West convinced that the East is a pretty tame place. His friends see to it that he shall not suffer from ennui during his stay in New York, and plan a series of entertainments that keep him pretty much on the qui vive. He is kept busy trying to round up a gang of crooks who threaten his peace of mind as well as that of a girl he has met on his trip East. It all turns out to be a harmless and innocent hoax planned by his thoughtful friends. He is called upon in the course of the seven reels to stretch horizontal at least fifty antagonists and needless to say Mr. Dempsey is right at home in this role.
He is supported, if one may use such an expression in connection with a champion, by Estelle Taylor, who gives a pleasing performance. The remaining cast is satisfactory.
MOTION PICTURES TODAY

Manhattan Madness
(Price-Fine Arts—Associated Exhibitors—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)
IN looking over the market for a suitable picture for Jack Dempsey, his sponsor, Oscar Price, turned to one of Douglas Fairbanks' most popular stories, "Manhattan Madness," which was made back in the old Triangle days. The new star being an active fellow like Doug, needed an action picture. And the former vehicle was just made to order for him. It has been completely re-written and certainly affords Dempsey forty minutes of solid excitement as well as the audience out front.
To the old-timers who remember the Triangle releases (they certainly haven't forgotten this one) it won't appear as much of a novelty. But a new generation of picturegoers have come along since the original. They should like it. Moreover they'll be interested in Dempsey—and that goes for the old-timers. Of course they'll all agree that it is a hokum picture which is built entirely on the premise of surprise. It is a surprise as much for the hero as it is for the patrons—but the latter must belong to the new generation to profit by it.
It is well done allowing for some colorless comedy relief expressed by a pair of eccentric cowpunchers—and some repetitious incident leading up to the climax. We see Dempsey as a westerner bound for New York. He scoffs at the big town—says it lacks excitement and thrills. So his friends proceed to show him his judgment is all wrong. They lure him into a mysterious house and put him through all kinds of stunts. It is planted that the friends and their hired "roughnecks" are taking it as seriously as the hero. Dempsey uses his famous left—and his equally famous right fired on, is forced to defend himself against a dozen men—or more. His footwork is agile too. He plunges through trap-doors, is squares accounts by kidnaping the heroine and compelling her to elope with him. The players are forced to work hard here. Dempsey has them frightened now and then. But it is easy to see that he "pulls" his punches so as not to punish them too severely.
THEME. Adventure romance of westerner who comes to New York and belittles the city. His friends surprise him with plenty of excitement.
PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The episodes of adventure when westerner is lured to suburban house and compelled to fight for his life. The speed of the incident.
DIRECTION. Has speeded up the episodes leading to climax, but gets off to a rather slow start. Might have dispensed with some of the comedy relief—which is not funny.
EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Fans should be interested in Dempsey—and his name well exploited should bring business. Also feature his wife, Estelle Taylor, who is co-starred with him. Bill as a snappy, action picture.
DRAWING POWER. Most everyone is interested in the champion and his bride. Suitable for average houses.
SUMMARY. This is a new version of the Fairbanks picture—the first being made several years ago. It affords Jack Dempsey an active role in which he has occasion to "clean up" the boys, but to anyone who saw the original there isn't any suspense.

Motion Picture News

VOL. XXXII ALBANY, N. Y., AND NEW YORK CITY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1925 NO. 10

Connecticut

WITH such facts as we have before us, before going to press, it is evident:

That producers, distributors and Connecticut exhibitors are agreed to take, if necessary, a very serious step, namely, the withdrawal of films from a State where legislation, confiscatory or equally unjust, has been imposed. This will be done in Connecticut when existing contracts between distributors and exhibitors have expired, several months hence;

That a revolving fund has been created by the M. P. T. O. of Connecticut and the New Haven and Boston Film Boards of Trade to take care of the payment of the tax in the meantime;

That exchanges are already closing in Connecticut; and there is talk of opening a distribution point at Port Chester, N. Y., just across the State line.

It is too early to make definite comment upon the Connecticut situation. We can only speak of its larger aspects.

This is the most flagrant instance of unfair legislation that has thus far confronted the industry. It combines censorship and a confiscatory tax. The leading newspapers of the State are of one voice in outspoken opposition to it. The Waterbury American characterizes the law as "simply one of those cases which are all too common in this free and unterrified land where a group of legislators saw what they thought was a chance to pluck a luscious plum from an overloaded tree and proceeded to do so."

Which quotation, in turn, lays bare the issue confronting this industry. There are forty-eight States in the Union and their legislators are not unlike those of Connecticut. If Connecticut can reap this tax harvest, so will other tax-anxious States. The Connecticut law, even after reading it a dozen times, is still vague to us, but assuming that it levies ten dollars a reel on every copy of a picture entering the State, a law of this kind adopted by all the States or a good measure of them would take away at one blow all the possible profits of the producing and distributing branches.

In passing we can't overlook a significant phrase in the Waterbury American editorial: "a luscious plum from an overloaded tree." What a pity it is that every legislator in the land, every politician, every statesman, let alone the public at large, still believes this to be a business swollen with easy profits and that no figures are ever issued to prove the contrary and true facts!

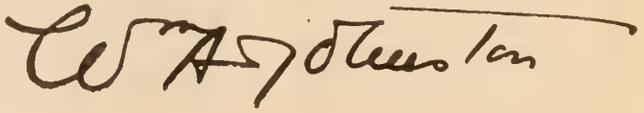
But there's the situation: confiscatory legislation, then, may well be national in scope and, if so, ruinous beyond any doubt.



What is the industry to do?

A boycott of films against a State is a radical step. But, also, decisive action is imperative—of some kind. What is there to do?

A most interesting fact to us is that the Connecticut papers—outspoken against the tax—are equally outspoken against a film boycott. "Silly," says one, "and causes offense." Don't punish the people of the State, say several, in effect; they pay the taxes anyway. Go after the legislators.

But how can you reach legislators except through the sentiment of the people they are supposed to represent? And how is that to be done so quickly and effectively as the urgency of the case demands? Bear in mind the fact that this is a national, not merely a State situation, so far as the interests—no, the life—of the industry is concerned.

We believe the sentiment of the industry, at this early day at least, favors a boycott. We can only hope that some other and better argument, plus an early and special session of the Connecticut legislature, will undo this arrant and ignorant injustice.

A Letter From Glenn Harper

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON, editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, is in receipt of a letter from Glenn Harper, secretary of the California Division of the M. P. T. O. A., which is reprinted below, without editorial comment, because the letter is itself an editorial. It follows:

"DEAR MR. JOHNSTON:

"I wish to compliment you upon your editorial of August 15. It is the most sensible manner of reporting our activity in Detroit that I have read, and should receive the admiration of every Director of the M. P. T. O. A.

"Too much recognition is always given by the trade press to factional arguments, which results in no good to all concerned, and too often clouds real accomplishments of all our meetings.

"Your unusual departure is certainly to be commended in the very highest terms.

"Yours very truly,
"GLENN HARPER".

What of the Future?

ALONG what lines will the future great developments in production come? This vital question is engaging the thought of the progressives in the industry. Cecil B. De Mille has some interesting ideas on this subject.

"The purely mechanical side of motion pictures has about reached its apex", he said the other day. "We are near the limit of the great advance in the technical lines of trick photography, strange lighting, unique sets and startling effects.

"We still have far to go, however, in the development of deft, new, subtle ways of transferring thought of the screen; of inventing unusual methods of driving home situation and ideas of especial importance.

"In the next three or four years there will be astounding advances made in the methods of screen translation. Every day directors and writers are discovering new points of 'technique' whereby a thought or an emotion will be registered with more surety and less effort.

"It was only a few years ago that if we wanted to have a man do one bit of action in his home and another at his office down-town we saw him go out of the door, out of the house, enter his car, get off at his office building, enter the elevator, etc. Now we simply go from one scene to another with no tedious, footage-wasting, intermediate steps. And, because of this 'tightening up' tendency, our stories will condense in action and increase in interest.

"The day of the purely butterscotch girl and peppermint boy love story is gone. The 'theme' photoplay that has something to say; something to add for the general good of the world, in addition to its entertainment values, will continue to advance and increase in popularity and importance.

Short Subject Titles

WHAT are known as box office titles in relation to feature pictures have been given weighty consideration for years by all branches of the industry, but at least one side of the trade, the exhibitor, seems to have forgotten that the growing importance of short subjects can be further extended by taking advantage of the undoubted box office titles which have been appended to many of the one and two reelers up for current release.

An excellent example of this is to be found in the Fox two-reeler "Failure," based on O. Henry's great short story of the same title.

"O. Henry's Failure" in lights or bold face type certainly would be a box office asset to even the smallest theatre. The public's curiosity, if nothing else, can be aroused if they see the name of America's immortal writer and the title of the picture, a word which is the common bugaboo of every normal man or woman.

And there are many other short subject titles that possess the same undoubted exploitation possibilities, not only on the Fox program, which, by the way, seems to be especially attractive in this connection, but also in the productions by other distributors who have attractive line-ups for the 1925-26 season.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Mary Philbin and Hizzoner, Mayor John L. Davis of Oakland at the Greater Movie Season parade in that city, which was a great success.

THE NEW FEATURES

FIVE new pictures on Broadway this week, Constance Talmadge in "Her Sister From Paris" at the Capitol; Thomas Meighan in "The Man Who Found Himself," at the Rivoli, Ricardo Cortez and Greta Nissen in "In The Name Of Love," at the Rialto; Leatrice Joy, in "Hell's Highroad," at the Colony, and "Siegfried," the Ufa German production, at the Century.

Of these the Talmadge feature had the merriest appeal, with the inimitable Constance playing a dual role and proving herself, as ever, a mistress of the art of refined, sparkling comedy. Tom Meighan, as a self-sacrificing hero who takes another's guilt upon his shoulders and does time in Sing-Sing, hadn't a very original plot to back him up, but the Meighan personality always wins, and there was many a wet eye among the Rivoli audiences as Thomas suffered in silence behind bars, lost his sweetheart, got her back again and finally emerged into the sunshine of happiness.

Both Ricardo Cortez and Greta Nissen were excellent as the leads of "In The Name Of Love," a very entertaining attraction, with a French small-town atmosphere. Cortez is an extremely persuasive and, in a sense, pathetic lover, while Miss Nissen, the blonde beauty from Norseland, more than lived up to her reputation as a foreign star. "Hell's Highroad" proved to be a good audience film, replete with the luxurious settings for which every Cecil De Mille production is celebrated, and Leatrice Joy a fascinating figure as the girl in pursuit of wealth.

"Siegfried," with its beautiful photography, massive effects and wonderful orchestral score, for which latter Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, who fitted the opera music to the film version, was given an enthusiastic reception at its first night showing, and certainly registers a triumph for the producers in this invasion of the hitherto shunned field of grand opera. Music-lovers in general will undoubtedly welcome the coming of "Siegfried," what the average fans will think of it, time only can tell.

Sam L. Warner, of Warner Bros., and his bride, formerly Lina Basquette of the Follies, on their arrival in Hollywood on their honeymoon.

A piquent pose of pert and pretty Alberta Vaughn, registering a come-hither look in "The Adventures of Mazie" (F. B. O.).

This is Eleanor Boardman as she appears in "The Exchange of Wives" (Metro-Goldwyn), but it's hard to see why anyone would want an exchange.

Spencer Bennet, who directed "Play Ball" for Pathe, and is now utilizing another type of sport in "The Green Archer" (Pathe).

Emanuel Cohen, editor of Pathe News and Pathe Review, was a recent visitor at the Hal Roach studios, where he was formally initiated as a member of "Our Gang."

George O'Brien, Fox film star, and the "O'Brien Smile," are great favorites with the kiddies. This is a new way of "picking 'em up on the beach."

Alexander Carr and George Sidney, who will again appear as Potash and Perlmutter in "Partners Again" (United Artsits), in which they will be directed by Henry King.

DESANO MAKES GOOD

EVEN the hard-boiled critics who attended the projection showing of B. P. Schulberg's "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work", the other day, were loud in their outspoken praises of the hit scored by Director Marcel DeSano. It was the latter's initial effort in the directorial field, a fact which made the results achieved all the more surprising, for no veteran could have done better, and probably many an old-timer not nearly as well.

DeSano showed remarkable judgment in the careful building up of the story, the various situations interlocking smoothly and action moving at a fast clip. The work of the entire cast was excellent, with Lionel Barrymore and Marguerite De La Motte giving splendid performances in the leading roles. The sex problem entered into the story but was so delicately handled that no opportunity was given either censors or ultra-moralists to register objections. The picture fairly radiates sympathy, the human touch is ever in evidence and all in all can be listed as a credit to both director and players.

GLORIA AIDS GOVERNOR

GOVERNOR HOWARD M. GORE of West Virginia, went to Moundsville on business the other day, and incidentally became the unexpected guest of Gloria Swanson, who is making scenes for her new Paramount picture, "Stage Struck" at New Martinsville, W. Va. The Governor was returning to Charleston, capital of the State, and when he wired ahead to friends to get him a room at the Riverside Hotel, learned that the house was filled to the roof by the Swanson company and hosts of folks whom the picture-making has drawn to New Martinsville. Miss Swanson then stepped into the breach by inviting the Governor to be her guest at the Noll residence, her temporary home, during a four-hour wait between trains. The invitation was accepted and the State's chief executive was the star's guest at dinner, and afterwards accompanied her to a local picture house to see "Manhandled."

And that isn't all! For while the Swanson company is at New Martinsville, an enterprising local printer is publishing a four page daily paper giving all up-to-date news of production activities. In view of which glories we ask—what has become of the old-fashioned party who was won't to spring the familiar crusted gag about an "industry that is still in its infancy?" Looks like the infant had learned to walk, anyhow.

SAY IT WITH SILK

CHARLES J. GIEGERICH writes that in the coming Cecil De Mille production—"The Wedding Song," starring Leatrice Joy, there will be seven dancers with only one veil, instead of the traditional one dancer with the famous seven veils. At first sight this looked like an economy note, designed to show that Mr. De Mille, in view of the high cost of silk, and repenting his lavish expenditures of the past; was beginning to "hedge," as the racing fans would put it. But not so! The real facts of the case are that Adrian, De Mille's Parisian designer, has developed an idea whereby seven dancers gracing a cafe scene will appear in one sweeping silk veil—"draped to make a sketchy and startling costume!" We quote verbatim from our correspondent, whose judgment in such matters is universally recognized as frightfully accurate.

HER MUSICAL SALARY

YOU will probably find it hard to believe that Wanda Hawley, the well-known star, once worked for a wage so small that if we were telling about it, we'd speak in a whisper. For Jake Rosenthal, of the Rose Theatre in Troy, N. Y. dug up an old payroll recently on which Wanda's name was set down as receiving the magnificent stipend of seven dollars per week, for services rendered as pianist at the Majestic Theatre in that city. How times have changed!

Incidentally, it's worth mentioning that Miss Hawley originally came from Troy, and what's more the Trojans haven't forgotten that fact. With result that whenever a picture featuring Wanda is shown her townsmen turn out and pack the theatre to capacity.

THE BELLS WILL RING

CONGRATULATIONS are in order to Lilyan Tashman, now playing in Metro-Goldwyn's "A Little Bit Of Broadway," on the announcement of her coming marriage to Edmund Loew, as soon as her part is completed. The congratulations, of course, go double. Miss Tashman recently came out boldly and made the important declaration on the set, stating that she expected the event to take place wihin a few days.

GOLD THAT GLITTERS

CHARLIE CHAPLIN was recently presented by the Brunswick Company with a gold-plated phonograph record of two ballads "With You Dear In Bombay" and "Sing a Song," both composed by the comedian while he was producing "The Gold Rush," and which have just been placed on the market.

We furthermore learn that during the making of the records Charlie not only played the violin solo part, but conducted Abe Lyman's Cocoanut Grove Orchestra which did the recording. The old phrase—"Jack of all trades," might as well be revised to read—"Jack of all arts—so far as the renowned Charles and other celebrated screen stars are concerned. Not content with camera triumphs, they wander a far into other fields of endeavor, exploring the trails of fiction-land, poetry, music, painting, sculpture, etc. Maybe some day the intellectual stunts will become so commonplace that a wily publicist will stimulate fan curiosity by stating that his principal hasn't a single interest in life outside of a moving picture studio. To be "different" isn't such a bad way of making a bid for fame.

THE IRISH SHEIKS

EUGENE O'BRIEN, featured in Producers Distributing Corporations' "Simon The Jester," discoursed on the shiek question the other day. "Even though they used a different name," says O'Brien, "the most alluring lovers, fellows we now call shieks,

Miss Helene Sardeay, Belgian sculptress, sculping the trophy which will be awarded on September 10th at Atlantic City to the girl in the beauty pageant who screens best, who will also play the title role in "The American Venus" (Paramount).

originated in Ireland. Outside of the name, the devil a bit of change has there been in those conditions, for I'll book a bet any time that you care to take the average Irishman and, for persuasive lovemaking he'll come in first over the wire anywhere and everywhere."

Many years ago Charles Lever, the Irish author, expressed himself as follows:

"Oh, I never cared much for hard work,
Sure it isn't the gift of the Bradies,
But I'd make a most elegant Turk
For I'm fond of tobacco and ladies!"

Perhaps Mr. O'Brien is right, maybe he found his inspiration in the above lines, but, not caring to argue with him, we leave the fascinating subject to our readers' judgment.

KLAUSSEN CARRIES ON

ALTHOGH Vitagraph has passed away, some of the talent that distinguished that pioneer company is still to the fore. Among these is Dick Klaussen, the chap who for fourteen years handled titling, decorative effects and general artistic finishing-off touches of product for the concern. Dick is now in the business for himself and the many friends he has in the industry wish him all the luck in the world.

John C. Flinn, Marshall Neilan, P. A. Powers and Cecil B. De Mille at the De Mille studios after signing the contract under which Neilan becomes a contributor to the Producers Distributing Corp. program.

WOOING THE BLARNEY STONE

THE latest report from Ireland, transmitted to us by the industrious M. B. Blumenstock, conveys the startling tidings that Tom Meighan has kissed the Blarney Stone. To those not wise in Celtic lore this information may appear of scant consequence, some may even wonder why Mr. Meighan should waste caresses where no ardent return can be looked for. Wherefore, it seems fitting right here to insert the ancient Irish distich:

"If the dear girls you'd always please
And win them" quoth Dan Carney,
"There's but one way, Iv'e heard them say—
Go kiss the Stone of Blarney!"

From now on we can expect Tom Meighan to be a bigger matinee idol than ever. But isn't he taking a rather unfair advantage of his screen rivals who have never been helped by legendary magic? We may look for a swift exodus of male stars to the shores of the Emerald Isle in the near future when this news becomes public. In passing, it might be mentioned that to our certain knowledge Mr. Sidney Olcott, who has made many trips to Erin, never stepped on his native soil without paying tribute to the celebrated Stone. And yet—Sidney is a director, without any ambitions in the matinee idol direction. What could have been HIS object?

Universal chartered the S.S. Chauncey M. Depew the other day and all the employes of the home office, the Big "U" exchange and the laboratory, went up the Hudson river to Indian Point, where a good time was reported by one and all.

Marilyn Mills feeding a half dozen of her pets to be used in her next picture. She has just completed "Tricks" for the Davis Distributing Division.

Marion Davies, Cosmopolitan star, now working at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, likes the Coast so well that she has purchased this handsome Beverly Hills home.

Richard Talmadge, star of "The Prince of Pep" F. B. O.), demonstrates the titular pep in a strenuous athletic performance caught in mid-air by the camera.

DAN MASON'S BOOTS

THE only original "trooper boots" in captivity! That's the claim made by Dan Mason the Pa MacBirney of Fox's "Thunder Mountain, for he is willing to take oath that the boots he wears in the picture are the same he has utilized for more than twenty years.

It seems he first bought 'em to wear in the old musical comedy, "It Happened in Norland," in which he played the leading comedy role. They are now weatherbeaten, wrinkled and caked with Santa Cruz mountain mud, but he sticks to his ancient friends, stowing them away carefully whenever he is through using them, only to rout 'em out once more for "just another film."

We don't wish to cast a shadow upon Mr. Mason's veracity and accept his statement with child-like confidence. Only one thing—we wish he would give us his bootmaker's address.

Another of George Kuwa's remarkable character interpretations is given in "Silver Treasure" (Wm. Fox), in which he has a colorful role.

Leatrice Joy, Cecil B. De Mille star, is a great believer in golf for keeping in form. She has started on "Her Wedding Song" (Producers Dist. Corp.).

A NEW EDITION

CHARLES E. McCARTHY, Paramount publicity director, is busily engaged answering phone calls these days, as stars, directors and executives ring him up incessantly to offer their good wishes on an extremely important event—the birth of a baby daughter! It is worthy of note that this is the third time Mr. McCarthy has starred in the father role, and THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS herewith joins his numerous friends in extending hearty congratulations.

Lou Tellegen, appearing in William Fox pictures, used to be the debonair hero, but look at him now, as the deep, dark and dastardly villain.

Howard Chandler Christy, the magazine illustrator, turns author and pounds out a few sequences for Jackie Coogan at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, assisted by his wife, while Will H. Hays keeps a judicial eye on the proceedings.

Mada Gann and Laty Florene, formerly of the Imperial theatre at Moscow, signed by B. P. Schulberg to act and direct for future releases.

Hays Now Announces Drastic Action in Connecticut

Exchanges Being Closed; Boycott Is Foreshadowed

Text of Official Statement by Will H. Hays on Connecticut Situation

FOLLOWING is the statement issued August 26 by Will H. Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., on the Connecticut situation:

"The Connecticut Law which provides for a one-man political censorship of a method of expression and for a tax of a confiscatory nature is as unjust in its provisions and conception as it is impractical in its operation.

"The exhibitors, producers and distributors are united and unanimous in their conclusions as to the impossibilities of the situation.

"It is a most unfortunate condition, placing an entirely unnecessary and expensive burden on the amusement of the people and placing in the hands of one man the determination of what much of that amusement shall be. It is a serious economic problem. There is left for the motion picture theatre owners, producers and distributors scarcely any option. Producers and distributors will carry out their existing contracts: they will immediately remove their exchanges for the distribution of films from the State of Connecticut; and for the time being they will not make further Connecticut contracts."

DRASTIC steps were taken this week by the industry in the Connecticut tax situation. Official announcement was made Wednesday by Will H. Hays that producers and distributors will carry out existing contracts with theatres. No new contract will be made. And the distributors are closing their exchanges in New Haven and leaving the State.

The carrying out of this program will mean a virtual film boycott of Connecticut and the result will inevitably be the eventual closing down of the theatres, of which there are about 200.

Meanwhile, an appeal is being prepared to the United States Supreme Court, the Special Federal Court having decided last week that the Connecticut ten-dollar-a-reel tax was constitutional.

Existing contracts with theatres will expire in most cases, it is believed, about February, but theatres which have not booked films ahead will be without product.

To meet the tangled situation brought about by the tax law, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut and the New Haven and Boston Film Boards of Trade have arranged a revolving fund of $60,000 to meet tax payments under the law.

This step followed a mass-meeting of exhibitors in New Haven and a meeting of the exhibitors committee with officials of the Hays organization in New York. The Board of Directors of the Hays organization met on Tuesday, and there was also a conference of the exchange managers comprising the two Film Boards of Trade with Charles C. Pettijohn.

The tax, which imposes a heavy burden on the industry, is the first State levy of the kind to be made, and it is felt that drastic action is necessary in order to make an object lesson of Connecticut.

A statement issued by Joseph W. Walsh, President of the Connecticut M. P. T. O., following the meeting with the Hays officials, declared that the revolving fund had been created to pay the tax on films now in Connecticut under contract for exhibition. "After existing contracts have been completed," said Mr. Walsh, "the exhibitors will leave to the distributors the problem of paying the tax."

The Franklin Film Company was the first exchange in New Haven to close. Instructions were issued from the main office in Boston to ship all prints out of the state and cease operations. Similar instructions were being issued by other distributors when MOTION PICTURE NEWS went to press. It was said all the 16 exchanges in New Haven would probably be closed down by the end of the week.

Distributors will ship film to complete existing contracts from outside of Connecticut, and in this connection a central distributing agency at Port Chester, N. Y., just across the line is being discussed. Tax Commissioner Blodgett of Connecticut has ruled that express companies and mail service are not liable to taxation.

Present at the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Hays organization were: Mr. Hays, Major Edward Bowes, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn; William Fox; E. H. Goldstein, treasurer of Universal; D. W. Griffith; E. W. Hammons, President of Educational; Arthur Kelly, United Artists; S. R. Kent, general manager of Famous Players-Lasky; Raymond Pawley, Producers Distributing Corporation; Saul Rogers, of Fox; Richard A. Rowland, general manager of First National; H. C. S. Thompson, managing director of F. B. O.; Nicholas M. Schenck, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn; Harry M. Warner; and Adolph Zukor.

The exhibitor group, headed by President Walsh, included: Louis M. Sagal, C. M. Mansfield, N. J. Fournier, L. J. Hoffman and others.

Mr. Hays, after the conference with the exhibitors, declared that in many cases the tax on the picture would amount to six times the rental value and that it was physically impossible for the theatres to continue business under such conditions.

Request Annual Movie Season Drive

St. Louis Exhibitors Urge Campaign Be Made Yearly Event; Hays Announces Judges of Essay Contest

WILL H. HAYS, president of the M. P. P. D. A. this week received the first official request by an organized body of exhibitors for a Greater Movie Season Campaign next year. A wire to Mr. Hays from Joseph Mogler, president of the Exhibitors League of St. Louis, declared that the members of that organization at a special meeting to discuss the results of the Greater Movie Season Campaign, decided that the event should be made an annual affair.

The Hays organization reports that while this is the first official action by an exhibitor's organization, general managers of campaigns from "Los Angeles to Atlantic City, and from Atlanta to Seattle" have declared that their campaigns are giving the theatres the best August business they have had in years and report that exhibitors favor a Greater Movie Season drive every year.

Contest Judges Announced

Mr. Hays announced the names of those who will make up the board that will judge the essays submitted in the National Greater Movie Season Contest. These are Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, president of the Federal Council of Churches; George Barr McCutcheon, president of the Author's League of America; Richard Washburn Child, former United States Ambassador to Italy and Alice Duer Miller, noted author.

The contest has been conducted by leading newspapers throughout the United States to select the best essays on "What the Motion Picture Means to Me" or "What the Motion Picture Means to my Community." The three national prizes to be awarded by the judges are a trip for two around the world on the Red Star Liner Belgenland; a trip for two to Miami, and a trip for two to Los Angeles.

Forty-two newspapers participated in the contest. In addition to the national prizes there will be many local awards of great value.

The Louisville, Washington, Tulsa and Minneapolis campaigns opened on August 15th. With the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania, Inc., D. A. Harris, president, backing the campaign, Pittsburgh opened the season on August 24th.

Oklahoma City is advertising now the Season which will open there on September 7.

A feature of the Tulsa campaign was an eight page Greater Movie Season section issued by the Tulsa Tribune.

Taxis Carry Streamers

Charles W. Krebs, general manager of the Louisville Campaign, reports that 500 taxicabs in Louisville are carrying streamers reading, "Greater Movie Season. Let's Go." Mr. Krebs says that Louisville used practically every form of advertising suggested by the Greater Movie Season book, including 30 foot banners over all the main streets.

The cooperation of the taxicabs in Louisville is equalled in Spokane by the coperation of the street railway company, according to Ray A. Grombacher. All the street cars carried on their front fenders large banners reading "Greater Movie Season—Now. Go by Street Car."

The banner championship of the United States seems to be held by the Los Angeles Greater Movie Season campaign, of which Jack Retlaw is the general manager. The committee stretched sixty huge banners across the streets of Los Angeles and forty more in nearby towns.

One hundred thousand Greater Movie Season blotters were distributed in Los Angeles and adjoining towns by a dozen colored boys dressed as Arabian sheiks. Girls in chic French maid's costumes distributed 25,000 buttons. Not satisfied with the 100 banners, the committee stenciled every principal highway in and leading to Los Angeles. The street cars and interurban trains carried banners and a check up showed more than 100 theatres were elaborately decorated. Laundries distributed 50,000 circulars in the packages. More than $4,000 was spent in newspaper advertising.

Warners Aid Greater Movie Season

WARNER BROTHERS made a material contribution to the Greater Movie Season campaign in New York last Tuesday, when they broadcasted a program of music and speech making from the steps of the United States Sub-Treasury, in Wall Street.

Major Andrew White was master of ceremonies, while among the speakers was a representative of each of the three leading religious faiths.. These included Rev. Mr. Phillips assistant pastor of The Little Church Around the Corner, Protestant; Father Leonard, pastor of St. Malachi's Roman Catholic Church and Dr. Issac Landman, editor of The American Hebrew and Rabbi of Temple Israel. Mrs. Martin W. Littleton, wife of the former Congressman, was also a speaker.

The program was started at noon by the Vincent Lopez orchestra. They were followed by Vaughan De Leath, "the original radio girl," who sang, and Mae Breen and Peter De Rose, a versatile vaudeville team. The program was broadcast throughout the country.

N. J. Theatre Owners Combat Blue Laws

THE New Jersey Theatre Owners under the guidance of President Joseph M. Seider are enlisting the services of women's clubs to combat the blue law advocates. A number of women's clubs in Jersey last year endorsed the bill for local option on Sunday pictures.

The women will be welcomed to the Jersey theatre owners meetings so that they might be further informed regarding the problem of exhibitors. Last Thursday President Seider escorted a delegation of school teachers to the First National studios, where they were given first hand information on present methods of production. Milton Sills, Doris Kenyon and Lloyd Hughes cooperated with the Jersey president in enlightening the visitors.

New Junior Orpheum House for Seattle

Erection within the next year of a $1,500,000 theatre in Seattle to house the Junior Orpheum vaudeville circuit, with its accompanying motion picture policy, was considered decidedly within the realm of possibility last week, following the visit of Marcus Heiman, president, and Joseph Finn, vice president of the Orpheum Vaudeville Circuit, to the Western city. It is understood that plans have already been prepared for the house, and that a site of an entire block in the northern business district of the city has been selected.

According to the present reports, the house would have a seating capacity of not less than 2,500 and probably closer to 3,000. The house would be operated as a combined vaudeville and motion picture theatre, running continuouly from noon until midnight. Feature length pictures, short subjects, Junior Orpheum vaudeville and musical specialties would constitute the program.

Clark Robinson Joins Roxy in New Theatre Project

Clark Robinson, scenic artist and stage director, has resigned from the staff of the Capitol Theatre and will join the S. L. Rothafel organization in connection with the new Roxy Theatre which is to be built in New York City this fall. Robinson will accompany Mr. Rothafel to Europe when the latter sails on September 5th.

Decatur Theatre Managers Form Organization

The theatre managers of Decatur, Ill., have formed an organization to be known as the Decatur Theatre Managers' Association. Elmer Jerome, of the Empress, is president; E. Sigfried, of the Bijou, vice-president; Harry J. Wallace, of the Lincoln, secretary; and Paul Witte, of the Bijou, treasurer, of the new association.

Exhibitor Will Give Away $6,000,000

A VERY interesting news story about an exhibitor comes from Winnipeg, Manitoba, in the announcement that A. R. McNichol has decided to give away his fortune before he dies. Mr. McNichol is credited with having just $6,000,000 which he made in real estate and in moving picture theatres. He is 63 years of age and a bachelor so he has started to distribute his investments.

Not long ago he gave $250,000 to the hospital at Winnipeg and he has made other large donations, including gifts to relatives. He is the owner of a chain of Western Canadian theatres, including the Lyceum, Starland and College Theatres in Winnipeg.

Exibitors Logical Salvation of British Film Making

No. 6: Government Interference of Doubtful Value

By L. C. Moen

LEAVING behind the economic and financial considerations of last week, and getting down to brass tacks on the British film situation itself, we have this picture: An industrial nation where motion pictures are so well liked that, despite acute depression, business at the theatres thrives and American pictures easily gross $25,000 to $40,000 each, with specials rising much higher—yet a nation where production has waned to almost nothing and where domestic producers find difficulty in surviving.

Obviously, then, exhibitors are by far the healthiest branch of the British industry, and it is with them that any plan of production revival should start. After all, the future of better than three thousand exhibitors is of much greater moment than the prospects of a half dozen producers, and any scheme adopted, governmental or otherwise, should be primarily geared up to the needs and desires of the theatre owners themselves.

If the plan adopted gives British exhibitors good pictures on which they can make money, and which the public will like—well and good. But if it merely means that the goverment, by artificial and uneconomic means forces the production of a certain number of British pictures, willy-nilly, then the whole industry will suffer, exhibitors and all.

What is needed, in plain English, is not a method of forcing the production of British pictures, but of making possible the production of really good British pictures. Such pictures will stand on their own bottom anywhere, subsidy or no subsidy. Make no mistake about that. And a subsidized industry, unless it makes such pictures, will fall as soon as the prop is removed and the subsidy ceases.

Any plan of government paternalism that provides money and studio facilities and leaves out the factors of brains, creative imagination and temperament is fundamentally unsound, and will ultimately fail.

As outlined last week, the memorandum of the Federation of British Industries suggested four moves: A tax on the showing of foreign pictures to apply toward the subsidy of domestic production; a finance corporation to aid producers; a national studio; and the enforced showing by exhibitors of a definite number of British-made pictures.

Exhibitors Would Pay

The tax provision would mean, in effect, that exhibitors would furnish the money, through an indireet and involved channel, for the making of the pictures, and would presumably later pay rentals for those same pictures equivalent to those they pay on pictures which they have not financed. If it is rebated to them in amusement tax, the government will have furnished the money.

The more British pictures are made, the greater the sum of money which will be needed—yet under the proposed system, the greater the number of British pictures played by exhibitors, the less revenue will be available for production in the form of duty.

Obviously, then, either the exhibitors or the government, or both, will furnish the money in the end—and how much more sane and practieal it would be for either or both to put up the money directly, without wasteful and irritating taxes, duties, tariffs and what not! If exhibitors are to pay the piper, let them do so voluntarily, through a franehise plan or similar arrangement. If the government feels that motion pictures are sufficiently important as a propaganda and advertising medium, let it subsidise directly the making of such pietures as meet that need. But why, sinee it is a simple business problem, handle it in the most involved and eircuitous manner possible? While it is true that the tax on the showing of alien pictures would tend to increase the number of British pietures played, the quota or contingent feature would assure an outlet for all the British films to be made for some time to come.

Studio Over-Stressed

The erection and equipment of a national studio is important, but is being stressed out of all importance to its moment in eertain quarters. A studio, after all, is only a means to an end. The finest studios in the world ean, and do, turn out some pretty bad stuff occasionally, and by the same token there are several memorable pietures on record that were made with utterly inadequate facilities. A gold-plated fountain pen does not make a gifted novelist.

In the last analysis, and assuming that subsidy will be but a temporary cruteh, the British industry must accept one of two possibilities: 1. The making of pictures at a cost within the possible return from the British Empire market. 2. The making of pietures on a free and adequate seale, designed for the international market, with the government making up the deficit until sueh time as the income equals the outgo.

Swedish Plan

The first plan would be somewhat similar to that carried out with considerable success in Sweden. The Swedish industry, of its own volition, deeided that it was desirable to keep natonal production alive. A certain number of productions were made at a cost within the possible revenue from the domestic market—and each picture was made just as entertaining and meritorious as eould be done for that sum of money. Exhibitors voluntarily supported these pictures—and twenty-five of them took away the market for perhaps a hundred Amerian pietures, sinee they played on the average four times as long in a given theatre. Thus Swedish production which was waning, was put back on its feet through a sane and healthy view-point. And this despite the fact that the best directors in Sweden had gone to America or to Germany.

If British exhibitors will pay rentals on sueh pictures equivalent to those they pay for American pietures, an average film might gross $25,000 in Great Britain. The remainder of the empire, including Canada and Australia, might perhaps return another $25,000. In the British market alone then, the sum of $50,000 might be grossed on eaeh picture, provided that exhibitors were wholeheartedly back of the move to support British production.

Low Cost Necessary

It is true that not much of a picture ean be made at a cost whieh will return a profit from a $50,000 gross, but it is absurd to say that it is impossible. Pictures of a certain type can be and are being made at such costs. One important Ameriean company has turned out outdoor program pictures at a figure as low as $8,000—and this is a national distributor. It can be done, but it means mixing large quantities of imagination, talent and showmanship with the money and materials.

The only other avenue is the making of pictures on a lavish and free-handed seale, planned for the world market and of such quality as that market demands. And that means a vigorous re-organization of British production from top to bottom. It means new blood, new talent, new ideas—and adequate financial backing. If such pictures are to be made, it means, first of all, studying the methods by which other countries have accomplished the same thing. It means, in other words, the absorption, tem-

HENRY KING
Signed by Samuel Goldwyn

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made that Henry King, one of the most prominent of directors, has been signed by Samuel Goldwyn to produce a series of features, the first of which will be "Stella Dallas."

He will next direct "Partners Again," which will be the newest Potash and Perlmutter story to reach the screen. Both will be released through United Artists, and it is expected that "Stella Dallas" will be ready for distribution early in the fall.

Henry King's most widely known successes are "The White Sister" and "Tol'able David."

M. P. T. O. A. Showing Activity

Various Committees Are Functioning on Many Problems Being Presented

A WIDE variety of activities is being carefully handled by the different committees representing the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ameriea, accoraing to a statement issued by President R. F. Woodhull.

A business manager is being sought by the Administrative Committee, which is composed of A. Julian Brylawski, Nathan Yamins, Harry Davis, M. E. Comerford and Jake Wells. A report from them on this matter will be made at a meeting to be held in New York City September 2nd.

The Contract Committee of which Mr. Joseph M. Seider is Chairman, has had several meetings and on Monday, August 24th, met with representatives of the Independent Motion Picture Association of America, with the purpose in view of fostering a simple equitable contract. A contract is being drawn up at this time for submission to a further meeting of the committees of both organizations.

The Legislative Committee has been busy laying out a program for various taxation relief to present to Congress when it convenes in December. These plans will require the cooperation of the theatre owners of the country and their intercession with their representatives at home.

Regarding the organization activities, President Woodhull said:

"We have been rendering practieal business service through the Summer to exhibitors, including the securing of product for some of them, adjustments with accessory people, etc., and rendering aid in several Blue Law campaigns now under way in a number of states.

"A real evidence that theatre owners appreciate the necessity of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America continuing to function for their protection is the fact that with the direct membership in the National Organization we have members from every state in the Union, men who have paid their dues and are rendering us support and cooperation. This is most gratifying to our officers.

"With the functioning of the Business Manager, as has so long been recommended but which the lack of finances heretofore prevented, it is believed that theatre owners will feel the benefits and results of an even greater Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, the Organization which has so consistently fought the cause of Independence in their behalf, labored and secured taxation relief and been a bulwark against the encroachment of the forces bent on monopolization and control."

Radio Talking Picture is Broadcasted

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in cooperation with the Los Angeles Examiner, West Coast Theatres and KFI radio station conducted a unique stunt in connection with the radioing of motion picture lines last week.

They broadcasted the speakng lines of a specally prepared film for the occasion with Norma Shearer and Lew Cody in the featured roles. The lines were read as the picture was shown on the screen in fourteen West Coast Theatres in and about Los Angeles. The lines were picked up and broadcasted by loud speakers to the audiences, giving the effect of radio talking pictures. It was necessary for each projection operator to grind by hand and with precision in order to properly maintain the synchronization of the picture and the lines.

New West Coast Theatres House for Los Angeles

West Coast Theatres is to build a handsome new theatre to cost $350,000 on the southwest corner of Wilshire Boulevard between La Brea and Sycamore Avenues in Los Angeles. Construction is to start immediately. The lease rental, it is said, will total over $1,000,000. The plans call for a class A fireproof structure with a 2000 seat theatre and many modern stores as part of the building.

Lichtbildbuehne is Launching New Trade Paper

Germany's leading film trade paper, "Lichtbildbuehne," will launch a new illustrated film trade paper starting October 1st and invites production stills, photos of leading players and all other interesting subjects from producing companies. These stills should be sent to Lichtbildbuehne, Friedrichstrasse 225, Berlin SW 48, Germany.

Iowa Exhibitor is Building New Theatre Chain

Clifford Niles, exhibitor of Anamosa, Iowa, is stepping into the magnates class. It is his desire to aequire a considerable string of theatres. He has just purchased the Caseade Theatre at Caseade, which was owned by R. J. Lane, the Princess Theatre at Monticello which was bought from V. Landis, and the Opera House at Wyoming which has not been operating as a theatre for some time.

Niles has options on eight or nine more theatres, but does not wish to give further information regarding these deals until the options are closed on September 1. Mr. Niles plans to operate twelve or thirteen theatres.

Edward Flanagan Funeral in St. Louis

Funeral serviees for Edward Flanagan, 41 years old, of Hollywood, Cal., motion picture actor and vaudeville performer were held in St. Louis, Mo., Monday morning, August 24. Services were conducted at St. Mark's Church and interment was in Calvary Cemetery.

Flanagan left St. Louis twenty-four years ago to go into vaudeville. Later he was one of the members of the "Hall Room Boys" motion picture comedies. He is survived by his wife and two children.

Skouras Has Organized New Operating Company

George P. Skouras, St. Louis, has organized the Columbus Amusement Company to operate his theatres. He recently took over the Congress Theatre owned by Hector M. E. Pasmezoglu and is also interested in the Aubert and Chippewa theatres, St. Louis.

Selznick Trustee Files $14,000,000 Suit

MARK HYMAN, and Ralph B. Ittleton, lawyers; William J. Doolittle, formerly vice-president of the Utica Investment Company, and Walter Jerome Green, formerly of the Savage Fire Arms Company, have been made defendants in a suit for $14,000,000 damages brought by Arthur Y. Dalziel, as trustee in bankruptcy for the Selznick Distributing Corporation.

The suit charges a conspiracy to wreck the business of the company for the purpose of diverting assets and defeating the rights of the creditors. The action grows out of the reorganization in 1923 of various motion picture corporations owned or controlled by Lewis J. Selznick, the corporation being at the time embarrassed through lack of ready cash. The good will and net assets of the combined companies, it is alleged, had a value of $14,000,000.

The defendants, it is alleged, without any previous experience in the motion picture business, had themselves elected as officers and directors of a reorganized company and assumed absolute control of the new organization. It is charged that by reason of the acts of the defendants the assets of the corporation were dissipated, the confidence of motion picture producers in the company lost, the good will destroyed and the entire business wrecked.

Crandall Circuit Taken Over By Stanley Co.

Washington Deal One of Most Important of Year

OFFICIAL announcement has been made of the sale of the controlling interest in the Crandall Circuit to the Stanley Company of America. This deal has been foreshadowed for some weeks, but it was denied by the parties concerned until the papers were signed. Then Mr. Crandall himself made the announcement.

It is understood that between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 was involved in the deal. Mr. Crandall retains 25% interest, and operations will be continued by the Crandall Corp., which has been formed.

The Crandall First National franchise is not affected by the transfer, according to reliable information. The Strand Theatre, Cumberland, Md., was not included in the sale, according to a letter to MOTION PICTURE NEWS from Robert Slote, general manager. Thirteen Crandall theatres in Washington, D. C., and houses in Maryland, West Virginia and Virginia were included.

The Stanley-Crandall deal is one of the largest circuit sales on record. In a year of big chain acquisitions, it takes rank with the operations of Balaban & Katz in the Middle West; the First National control of West Coast Theatres, Inc.; purchase by William Fox of 40% interest in that circuit; the extension of the Paramount holdings in several parts of the country; Universal's acquisition of the Hostettler chain in Iowa and Nebraska and the Sparks Enterprises in Florida; and others.

While the Crandall-Stanley deal was foremost in the news this week, other important deals were also noted. It became known that Paramount is completing work on a 4,400 seat house in Boston, to open in October, as part of a 12 story office building. This will give Famous Players-Lasky eleven houses in that city.

It was also reported, but not confirmed, that Paramount has taken over the Strand in Newport, R. I.

The Loew interests were also active. The Colonial Theatre, Reading, Pa., has been acquired from Carr and Schad. It has been the Paramount first-run house there, and it is reported the latter company is now seeking another outlet.

A contract has been signed by which the Loew interests secure control of the Empire Theatre, a famous West End house in London, which has been the home of many notable legitimate productions. It will become the principal Metro-Goldwyn first run theatre in the British capital.

Going back to Pennsylvania for a moment —announcement is soon to be made of plans for a new theatre to be built in Carbondale, Pa., by the Comerford Amusement Co. It will replace two small houses, the Victoria and the Majestic. The Comerford chain already controls the Irving, a modern house in Carbondale.

In Port Arthur, Texas, the Jefferson Amusement Co., of Beaumont, a subsidiary of the Saenger Amusement Co., New Orleans, has taken over all the picture houses. The seven acquired are the Cameo, Liberty, Strand, People's, Pearce, Green Tree and Victor.

What is believed to be the foundation for another Texas chain is found in the announcement that C. C. Lindsey, operating houses at Lubbock, has formed a partnership with H. C. Houston of Sherman in the operation of the Gem and Travis theatres in the latter city. They plan another house in Memphis, Tex.

It has been announced that the Louis Marcus theatrical interests, Salt Lake City, have leased the Alhambra Theatrical Company of Ogden, Utah, for a period of ten years. The Alhambra Theatre has a seating capacity of 2,200. It is estimated that $20,000 will be spent in improving the theatre, during the next two weeks while the house is shut down. They propose to open September 5th, in connection with the Paramount Empress and Victory theatres in Salt Lake. This transaction has been confirmed by Louis Marcus, Division Manager for Famous Players-Lasky.

A deal that has been pending for some time was consummated the past week between Messrs. D. R. and C. B. Wilson, prominent manufacturers of Pontiac, and Col. W. S. Butterfield, president of the Bijou Theatrical Enterprise Company, Detroit, whereby the Messrs. Wilson plan the erection of a new theatre in Pontiac for Mr. Butterfield at a cost of $260,000.00.

The new theatre will be located on Saginaw Street, on a plot of ground sixty by one hundred forty-five feet, across from the Oakland Theatre which was recently purchased by Mr. Butterfield and the occupancy of which he will secure in about a year and a half's time. Plans call for a fire proof building with a white cut stone and brick front to occupy the full extent of the property mentioned above. The theatre will be fully equipped with a stage, etc., so that it can be adapted for vaudeville and road attractions as well as pictures.

The seating capacity will be approximately thirteen hundred.

The Pryale Construction Company have been given the contract for the erection of the theatre while George Bachman of Flint will be the architect in charge.

Ground is to be broken this week and it is planned to have the theatre completed about February 1, 1926.

At the same time, Col. Butterfield announces that Articles of Association for the Bay City Theatre Company have been filed with the Secretary of State at Lansing, and all arrangements have been made with contractors for the building of a new theatre in Bay City.

John Eberson, the well known architect of Chicago, has completed plans for the erection of the new theatre which will be known as the Capitol Theatre in Bay City, Michigan. The estimated cost of this new theatre will be $350,000.00 and it will be the largest theatre and auditorium in Bay City, and when completed will be one of the most beautiful play houses in the State of Michigan.

The Capitol Theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,040 on the main floor and 620 in the balcony making a total capacity of 1,660. The theatre will have a front on Washington Avenue of 75 feet and will extend back to Adams Avenue, a depth of 220 feet. There will be two stores on either side of the lobby with a suite of four offices above each store. This theatre will be modern in every respect and furnished throughout with the latest equipment.

The theatre will have a large stage which will accommodate the larger road attractions as well as vaudeville and it is expected that it will be completed some time during the early part of the New Year.

The Bay City Theatre Company which will build the theatre has the following officers:

President, W. S. Butterfield, Battle Creek; Vice-Presidents, William L. Clements, Bay City; E. C. Beatty, Detroit; Secretary and Treasurer, Arthur C. Harrison, Bay City; Directors: The officers and Herbert A. Rowles, Battle Creek; Edwin S. Clark, Bay City; C. L. Kendrick, Port Huron.

Mr. Butterfield announces that during the coming year he will build several other theatres in Michigan cities, and increase his holdings in many of the smaller towns. The Butterfield Circuit now comprises some forty-six theatres in Michigan.

Examiner Makes Report in Federal Trade Commission Case

E. C. ALVORD, examiner in the case of the Federal Trade Commission against Famous Players-Lasky and others, rendered his report to the Commission this week. His findings of facts in the case are against the respondents.

Copies of the examiner's report, which finds in effect that the so-called Famous Players group sought to secure control of the industry, will go to the respondents, and it is probable that oral arguments will be held before the whole Commission before that body hands down its decision.

The case is now in its third year. Testimony was taken in cities throughout the country. It appears likely that the decision of the Commission will not be rendered for two or three months.

The respondents in the case are: Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Realart Pictures Corporation; the Stanley Company of America; the Stanley Booking Company; Black New England Theatres, Inc.; Saenger Amusement Company; Southern Enterprises, Inc.; Adolph Zukor; Jesse L. Lasky; Jules E. Mastbaum; Alfred S. Black; S. A. Lynch and E. V. Richards, Jr.

First National Holds Session

Sales Executives Are Enthusiastic at Three-Day Conference Held Last Week

WHAT was declared to be the most successful and enthusiastic gathering of sales executives ever held by First National, was the three day convention held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week at the Roosevelt Hotel in New York City. It was attended by every branch and district manager. They returned Thursday night and Friday morning to their respective territories keyed up to undertake what they say will be the biggest selling campaign the industry has ever seen.

E. A. Eschmann, director of distribution, who called the convention, imparted to his men his own enthusiasm for the product scheduled for the next fifty-two weeks and outlined to them the sales policies which he has worked out with the aid of his assistants and company executives for the new product.

On the first day of the session the managers were addressed by Mr. Eschmann, C. M. Steele, A. W. Smith, Jr., Stanley Hatch and C. W. Bunn of the distribution department on sales policies and problems, and by C. F. Chandler of the advertising department and Allan Glenn, supervisor of exploitation on advertising and exploitation possibilities of the new product. After dinner at the Hofbrau Hause the visitors were entertained at "Louis XIV" by Leon Errol, recently signed by First National to star in a series of pictures, the first of which will be "Clothes Make the Pirate."

Richard A. Rowland, general manager of production, and Samuel Spring, secretary and treasurer, were the principal speakers at the Thursday session, following a three-hour round table conference on selling problems and other important angles of operation.

A letter was read from President Robert Lieber regretting his inability to be present.

Other speakers at the conferences were Earl Hudson, production manager at the Eastern studio; Mrs. Florence Strauss, scenario editor; R. W. Perkins, general counsel; W. C. Boothby, financial comptroller; Mark Kellogg, director of advertising and publicity; E. B. Johnson, manager of foreign distribution; Bruce Gallup, manager of advertising; Lynde Denig, manager of publicity.

Among those who attended the Convention were:

A. J. Herman, Albany; C. R. Beacham, Atlanta; T. B. Spry, Boston; F. J. A. McCarthy, Buffalo; F. P. Bryan, Charlotte; C. E. Bond, Chicago; R. H. Haines, Cincinnati; G. L. Sears, Cleveland; Leslie Wilkes, Dallas; J. H. Ashby, Denver, E. J. Tilton, Des Moines; F. E. North, Detroit; Floyd Brown, Indianapolis; T. O. Byerle, Kansas City; N. H. Brower, Los Angeles; Paul E. Krieger, Louisville; H. J. Fitzgerald, Milwaukee; L. E. Davis, Minneapolis; M. H. Kelcher, New Haven; J. C. Vergesslich, New Jersey; L. Connor, New Orleans; S. W. Hand, New York; E. D. Brewer, Oklahoma City; J. S. Abrose, Omaha; W. J. Heenan, Philadelphia; R. S. Wehrle, Pittsburgh; C. W. Koerner, Portland; Harry Weiss, St. Louis; William F. Gordon, Salt Lake City; Charles H. Muehlman, San Francisco; Fred G. Sliter, Seattle; Robert Smeltzer, Washington; E. H. Teel, Calgary; A. Gorman, Montreal; William J. Melody, St. John; B. D. Murphy, Toronto; W. H. Mitchell, Vancouver; J. C. James, Winnipeg; Fred Rodriguez, Mexico City; R. C. Seery, Chicago; H. A. Bandy, Cleveland; W. E. Callaway, New Orleans; Joseph S. Skirboll, Los Angeles, H. T. Nolan, Denver; C. J. Appel, Toronto.

McKean Made Officer in Military Society

Major S. H. MacKean, news editor of International Newsreel Corporation, was elected secretary of the Society of Military Intelligence Reserve Officers of the United States Army, an organization formed in New York last week. The purpose of the organization is to keep before the public at all times the defensive needs of the nation.

Hays Announces Drastic Connecticut Action

The Connecticut theatre owners committee were instructed by the mass meeting in New Haven "to fight to the last ditch to keep the theatres open." However, this appeared to be doubtful in view of the drastic action taken by the distributors. As an indication of what may be coming, all the Hartford theatres wth the exception of the Poli group, have given two weeks' notice to operators, stage hands and musicians, as required by union rules. This was done as a precautionary measure.

The statement issued by Mr. Walsh, on behalf of the exhibitors, follows:

"A committee appointed by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut at a mass meeting held in New Haven last Sunday night met with the committee of the New Haven Film Board of Trade and the Boston Film Board of Trade whose members distribute all the motion pictures shown in Connecticut. The uncertainty and the ambiguity of the Connecticut Tax law have aggravated the situation, which this very unpopular and unnecessary law created.

"Benedict M. Holden, general counsel for the producers and distributors, has advised his clients to remove their film exchanges from New Haven, and to ship all films into Connecticut by United States Parcels Post or the American Railway Express. Anticipating the confuson which wll inevtably result when the New Haven exchanges are moved and delveries are made through interstate commerce carriers, and to enable the exhibitors to keep open and show the pictures they have already contracted for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut, the New Haven Film Board of Trade and the Boston Film Board of Trade have arranged to borrow sufficient funds for the payment of the tax by theatre owners on the films now in Connecticut under contract for exhibition there. After existing contracts have been completed, the exhibitors will leave to the distributers the problem of paying the tax.

"This action was taken to relieve distributers who might be the first to receive films from interstate commerce carriers and be obliged to pay the entire tax before exhibiting them, as the tax on the film is several times the rental of it. Many theatres in Connecticut, not having pictures under contract for exhibition, will not come under the operation of this fund, and there are a great number of exhibitors who will be compelled to close their theatres and suffer a total loss on their entire investment."

Roxy Wins Popular Radio Entertainers Contest

RADIO WORLD, a fan publication in the radio field, has announced that S. L. Rothafel has won the Popular Entertainers Contest, which that magazine has been conducting for the past four months. The contest was open to announcers, singers, pianists and vocalists.

Roxy received over 3,000 votes more than his closest competitor, Ben Bernie. The Happiness Boys finished third. The prize, a gold medal, will be presented to the winner on the eve of Rothafel's departure for Europe.

Warner Brothers Take Over Theatres

Acquire Metropolitan in Baltimore and Circle in Cleveland for First Run Houses

WARNER BROTHERS now have first run houses in Baltimore and Cleveland, as a result of transactions concluded during the past week. They purchased the Metropolitan Theatre in Baltimore and took over the Circle in Cleveland. The houses go into immediate possession of Warners and they will inaugurate the same class of entertainment as planned for the New York Piccadilly.

The Metropolitan is situated in Baltimore's busiest section on Pennsylvania Avenue and was built about two and one-half years ago. It has a seating capacity of 1,800. Warners not only purchased the theatre, but the building in which it is located and the ground. Plans for improvements are already under way. It is intended to put in a new lobby and front. Bernard Depkin, the present manager will remain in charge.

Depkin is an efficient manager, up-to-date in every respect and every house that he has managed in his highly successful career since he started with Howard Bennett at the Little Pickwick Theatre (now extinct), in 1908, has been a success with the public.

When the Parkway Theatre was opened in 1912, Depkin was offered the management of it by Harry Webb, president of that company. At that time competition was extremely keen between the New and the Parkway due to their being the largest film playhouses in Baltimore. Louis A. DeHoff, was manager then of the New Theatre and the battle for bookings continued for many years until the Parkway was bought out by the Whitehursts who then and still do own the New Theatre.

Depkin then managed a number of other houses and when the Metropolitan was ready to open, he was appointed manager of that playhouse by Dr. Frederick W. Schanze, president of the company. Dr. Schanze is also a pioneer in the industry in Baltimore. He built Schanze's theatre, just across the street from the Metropolitan on Pennsylvania Avenue and operated it for a number of years before selling it to Harry Reddisch, who now operates it.

The Circle in Cleveland is a 2,200 seat house situated at 101st Street and Euclid Avenue in a lively neighborhood. Built five years ago, it was recently remodeled and enlarged into an up-to-the-minute house with all the latest improvements for the comfort of its patrons. With the addition of Warner Entertainment, which means an eight unit, high-class program, with an augmented orchestra, the Circle will be ready to compete with any theatre in the city. Martin Printz, the former owner, will remain as resident manager.

George H. Dumond, general manager of all the Warner theatres, stated that it was the intention of the company to put the same class of entertainment in all the Warner first run houses.

The Metropolitan in Baltimore will be known as The Warner; the Circle in Cleveland will be Warner's Circle Theatre.

Moberly Repeals Sunday Closing Bill

THE City Council of Moberly, Mo., on August 17th, by a vote of five to three decided to repeal the ordinance barring Sunday amusements, including motion pictures, despite the protests of ministers and others of the reform element.

The Ministers brought much influence to bear in connection with petitions circulated by them, but were able to secure only 3200 signers. Opposed to these Mayor Jefferies was presented with a petition bearing the signatures of 4200 persons who wanted Sunday shows. Whether the Mayor will sign the veto is problematical, but it seems certain the bill will pass over his veto.

The fight for Sunday picture shows was organized by William Cotter, owner-manager of the Fourth Street Theatre, who is given full credit for the victory.

Student Theatre Men Start Classes

Paramount Training School Opened August 17 With Lectures on All Phases of House Management—42 in First Class

THE forty-two students registered in the first class of the Paramount Theatre Managers Training School, began their studies on August 17th, when the classes were opened with lectures at the Theatre Auditorium in New York.

The course, which covers a term of six months, will prepare men for positions as theatre managers. Instruction in all phases of theatre management, from the selection of a site for the theatre to the proper presentation and exploitation of pictures, will be included in the lectures and studies prescribed for the course.

The opening session was devoid of ceremony. There was an address welcoming the students by John F. Barry, director of the school. After reading some telegrams expressing the good wishes of those interested in the school, the work mapped out for the students was outlined by Mr. Barry and then lectures on certain of the subjects which will be a part of the course were given.

There were lectures on the History of the Motion Picture by Robert E. Welsh, editor of "The Moving Picture World," and by Joseph Seidleman, assistant manager of the foreign department of Famous-Players-Lasky who spoke on The History of the Motion Picture Abroad.

The trade papers were distributed and studied as night assignments with quizes on the following day.

Mr. Robert E. Welsh, editor of the "Moving Picture World," explained how this trade paper can be used effectively by managers.

Editors of the other trade papers will carry on this series during subsequent weeks so that members of the class will realize the part played by the trade papers in guiding their future work and how every section of these trade papers can be of service to the wide awake manager.

Norman Collyer, assistant secretary of Famous-Players-Lasky, lectured on "The Position of the Motion Picture in the Economic Structure of American Business."

Edmond Raeburn explained the United States Theatre Map and the economies which justify the theatre circuits.

Edwin Porter who directed the first motion picture, "The Great Train Robbery," explained how direction twenty-five years ago differed from the methods of today.

Lectures on the "Development of the Motion Picture Theatre Structure" were given by Lacey Johnson, by Robert E. Hall, who handled the technical phases of this development and by O. S. Geyer who spoke on theatre structures abroad.

The Organization Chart of the Famous-Players-Lasky Theatre Department was explained and the members of the class were introduced to the file systems used by the Theatre Departments.

The principles of choosing the theatre site and how these principles affect theatre management were explained by T. C. Young, Louis Cohen and Lacey Johnson of the Theatre Realty Department of Famous-Players-Lasky.

The students visited two of the Class A theatres on Broadway and each department of these theatres was explained by experts in charge.

Five days of each week there are seven full hour periods with three full hour periods on Saturday. Each evening a definite assignment is given the members of the class on the material of the day.

Several Illinois Houses Added to B & K Circuit

The formation of the Great State Theatres, Inc., is announced, whereby Balaban & Katz secure an interest in theatres located in a number of cities outside of Chicago. All the houses involved are already affiliated with the Balaban & Katz Midwest circuit. They include the Strand, Fox and Rialto, Aurora; the Orpheum, Crystal, Prince and the new Rubens-Rialto in Joliet; the Crocker, Rialto and Grove in Elgin; the Orpheum and Majestic in Springfield; the Orpheum in Galesburg; the Majestic in Bloomington; the Midway in Rockford; and the De Kalb Theatre in De Kalb. The officers of the new corporation are: Sam Katz, president; J. J. Rubens, vice-president; Morris Rubens, J. J. Rubens, vice-president; Marris Rubens, secretary, and Barney Balaban, treasurer.

Fifty Theatres in New Buying Circuit With Cooney Brothers as Nucleus

AFTER several months of work, Joseph Hopp announces that a new buying circuit has been formed with the Cooney Brothers theatres as a nucleus, and that an operating company which will handle its business, the American Theatres Corporation, has been chartered under the laws of Illinois.

The new company will open offices on September 1st, on the fourteenth floor of the new Straus Building, according to Hopp, who will be general manager. He states that fifty theatres in Chicago and down state are interested in the corporation, through which they will buy film. A feature of the organization is that the corporation is owned and controlled by the interested theatre owners and will act as their agent in the purchase of the film, and on their recommendation.

Hopp further explained that the American Theatres Corporation will have no hand in the operation of the houses, except for an exchange of ideas and information at the meetings of the theatre men which will be held at frequent intervals. It is understood that a number of important Chicago houses have become affiliated with the new organization, but that the majority of the fifty theatres already signed up are down state. The names of the interested theatres will be made public in a few days.

Labor Trouble in Many Cities

Atlanta Operators Get New Contract—Conferences Continue in Denver and Baltimore

LABOR difficulties face theatre operators in several cities in the United States. Conference between exhibitors and representatives of operators' and musicians' unions over proposed new working schedules and increased wage demands are being held in Atlanta, Denver and Baltimore.

The Atlanta theatre men have settled with the operators, a new 2-year contract providing for the continuance of the existing wage scale and working conditions for the period from September 1, 1925 to September 1, 1926, and an increase of $5 per man for the following year, having been signed last week. This contract disposes with the most serious aspect of the labor troubles which have existed in Atlanta for some time. So far no change has come about in the situation regarding the musicians. The orchestras are still out of all Atlanta houses. Conferences between the musicians and the theatre managers continue.

The attitude of the Atlanta exhibitors this year has been opposed to wage increases. The operators demanded a $60 a week scale in the contract to replace the one expiring the first of next month. The new agreement which will give an increase next year of $5 per week over the present scale of $50 per week represents a compromise move on the part of the theatre men and the operators both.

Union musicians, projection machine operators and stage hands of Denver and the local theatre managers who employ them are still very far from reaching an agreement on terms and conditions of the new contract which is to become effective September first. Several attempts have been made to settle their differences, but up to this time no progress whatever has been made. The union employees have steadfastly insisted on a six day a week working schedule and 30% increase in pay. They have declared their intentions to strike in case these conditions are not granted. The theatre managers, on the other hand, have just as firmly refused to grant these conditions and it is reported they have made arrangements to fill all vacancies resulting from a general walk-out. The situation in Denver at this time is very bad.

Representatives of the Baltimore Operators' Union, Local 181, G. Kingston Howard, president; and those of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, Inc., Walter D. Pacy, president; were scheduled to meet and confer on the increase in wages and better working conditions asked by the Union, on Friday, August 21, but this failed to happen because of a misunderstanding.

The meeting was then scheduled to take place on Monday morning August 24.

The committee representing the Union will not confer with representatives of the Theatre Owners unless they have power of attorney for all moving picture theatre owners in the city it is reported.

Exhibitors of Ottawa, Ontario, have been having a serious labor problem through the demands of both the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and the Motion Picture Projection Machine Operators Union for substantial wage increases. The new scale demanded by the Operators is as high as 10 per cent over the agreement for 1924-25 while the Stage Employees are asking as much as 20 per cent more.

Quarterly Dividend for Loew's Inc.

THE Board of Directors of Loew's, Inc., has declared a quarterly dividend of fifty cents per share on the capital stock of the company, payable September 30th, 1925, to stockholders of record at the close of business September 12th, 1925.

Stanley Company Has Signed Tetrazzini

Jules E. Mastbaum, president of the Stanley Company of America, who is now in Europe negotiating for the appearance of internationally prominent musical stars, has signed Madame Luisa Tetrazzini, noted operatic star for three one-week stands at the Stanley Theatres in Philadelphia, Atlantic City and Camden, at a salary said to be $27,000 for the three weeks.

Mastbaum will remain abroad until the latter part of September, but Frank Buhler, managing director of the Stanley Company, who accompanied him, is expected home shortly.

In and Out of Town

EMANUEL COHEN, Editor of Pathe News and Pathe Review, has returned to the home office in New York after a five weeks' tour of the country.

EDGAR B. HATRICK, vice-president of Cosmopolitan Productions, returned late last week from a four weeks' trip to the West Coast.

J. CHARLES DAVIS, 2nd, left on the "Century" Monday for Chicago en route to the Coast.. He will be joined by David R. Hochreich, president of Vital Exchanges, Inc.

PANDRO S. BERMAN, son of the late Harry M. Berman, general sales manager of F. B. O., has returned to Hollywood to resume work as assistant director at the F. B. O. studios.

LEE MARCUS, general sales manager of F. B. O., is on a tour of Southern exchanges. He will visit New Orleans, Dallas, Oklahoma City and Memphis.

THOMAS A. CURRAN, special representative of Rayart, sailed last week with Mrs. Curran for a six weeks' visit with his mother and friends in Australia.

PAULA GOULD, general press representative for F. B. O., left Friday for a three weeks' trip to the Coast studios.

Business in Montreal Shows Increase

The moving picture business in Montreal, Quebec, during the past summer has been good and the theatre managers cannot deny it. Figures have just been issued by George Crump, chief inspector of amusement tax for the City of Montreal, for the month of July, which show that patronage has been far ahead of the corresponding month of last year, the difference being 374,879 more admissions at local theatres with a corresponding increase of $9,800.18 in the city's amusement tax revenue.

Local moving picture theatres are divided into two classes, those which give guarantee bonds by reason of which they are enabled to pay the amusement tax in lump sums according to their own box office records and the others at which the civic administration requires the actual use of amusement tax tickets in addition to the theatre's own ticket rolls.

In Montreal theatres holding the bonds, the number of patrons during July, 1925, was 1,079,623, with an amusement tax revenue of $33,406.62, as against an aggregate patronage of 890,054 admissions during July, 1924, giving a tax revenue of $30,142.15.

In theatres where tax tickets are issued, 450,341 persons were admitted as patrons during last July, bringing in a revenue of $8,333.54.

The total paid patronage at the Montreal theatres during July was therefore 1,529,964, as compared with 1,155,085 during the month of July, 1924, these being the official statistics of the local tax department as announced.

Marguerite Steppling in Cast of "Memory Lane"

John M. Stahl has cast Marguerite Steppling, sixteen year old daughter of John Steppling, screen character actor, for a role in "Memory Lane," which he is now filming for First National release. Miss Steppling is attending college and though she hopes to make a screen career will first complete her studies.

Another youthful actress, famous some years ago as a "baby star," in the cast of "Memory Lane" is Thelma Salter, who is returning to the screen after a long absence during which she attended school.

"Freshman" Premier Given in Jersey

"The Freshman," Harold Lloyd's newest comedy for Pathe, was given a world premier presentation in the Auditorium at Ocean Grove, New Jersey, last week. The picture was treated as a road show with prices ranging from 25 cents for children and 50 cents general admission to 75 cents, $1 and $1.50 for reserved seats. One performance a day was given starting at 8:15 P. M. The attraction drew summer residents and vacationists from a wide area.

Al Green Under Contract With First National

Alfred E. Green has signed a long term contract to direct for First National. He will begin work under the agreement as the director of "Spanish Sunlight," co-starring Barbara La Marr and Lewis Stone, which is to be filmed on the coast.

Nineteen Completed By Fox

Production Schedule Moving Rapidly With Several Others Well Under Way

NINETEEN leading attractions for the coming season have already been completed by the Fox Film Corporation, with several more in the course of production at the company's west coast studios. Five of the nineteen, "The Iron Horse," "As No Man Has Loved," "The Fool," "Lightnin'" and "The Lucky Horseshoe" have already had successful advance presentations on Broadway and elsewhere.

John Ford, with five completed productions to his credit heads the list of directors. Among these are, "The Iron Horse" and "Lightnin'." In addition he has completed "Kentucky Pride," a racing drama, with Henry B. Walthall, Gertrude Astor and J. Farrell MacDonald: "Thank You," a John Golden stage success, with Alec Francis, George O'Brien and Jacqueline Logan in the principal roles, and "The Fighting Heart," with George O'Brien and Billie Dove.

Victor Schertzinger has completed "The Wheel," with Harrison Ford, Claire Adams and Mahlon Hamilton, and "Thunder Mountain," taken from another Golden success, "Howdy Folks." Alec Francis, Madge Bellamy and Leslie Fenton are in the cast.

Frank Borzage's first contribution to the program is "Lazybones," with Charles "Buck" Jones in the starring role. Roland V. Lee, with "Havoc" and "As No Man Has Loved" to his credit is at Catalina Island preparing for "The Silver Treasure."

John Griffith Wray is cutting "The Winding Stair," which has Edmund Lowe, Alma Rubens and Mahlon Hamilton in the leading roles. Emmett Flynn is completing "East Lynne," with Alma Rubens, Edmund Lowe, Lou Tellegen, Frank Keenan, Belle Bennett, Marjorie Daw and Leslie Fenton in the cast.

Reginald Barker has completed his initial picture for Fox, "When the Door Opened," from the James Oliver Curwood story. Henry Otto is filming scenes for the sea fantasy, "The Ancient Mariner," based on the Coleridge poem, and Buck Jones has completed "A Man Four Square," based on William MacLeod Raine's novel. He had previously finished "The Timber Wolf" and "Durand of the Bad Lands."

Three Additions to "La Boheme" Cast

Three additions have been made to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer cast for "La Boheme," starring Lillian Gish, with John Gilbert in the leading male role. The newcomers are Tony D'Algy, Karl Dane and Leo White. Roy D'Arcy and Renee Adoree were previously announced for important roles. The production has just gone into rehearsal under the direction of King Vidor.

Malcolm McGregor Leading Man for Corinne Griffith

Malcolm McGregor will play the leading role opposite Corinne Griffith in "Caesar's Wife," the star's next vehicle for First National. The story is by W. Somerset Maugham and will be directed by Irving Cumings from a scenario by Albert Shelby LeVino.

Exhibitors Logical Hope of British Film Making

porarily at least, of American production methods, right or wrong.

An excellent parallel is suggested by Mr. Cranfield, of Cranfield & Clarke, in the matter of Japanese shipping. For many years, while the Japanese navy and merchant marine were being built up, every important Japanese ship had a British captain and a Scotch chief engineer. The Japanese were not too proud to go to those who had accomplished results in that particular line, and to bring them in to teach their own men how to run ships as they should be run.

Even the American motion picture industry, remember, has never hesitated to do that same thing. Some of our earliest studios were built by Frenchmen who came here to erect them in the light of their wide experience at that time. The American industry has never hesitated to reach out across the sea for a foreign director or player who might bring some new contribution to the screen.

England, if she wants to produce in a big way, must do the same. Until she can develop new talent of her own, let her assemble a central production unit composed of the finest talent available anywhere in the world.

Let one strong central company be organized, as a beginning. Improve the equipment of the best existing studio. Bring from America a Chaplin or a De Mille or a Louis B. Mayer to direct and supervise the work of organization. Bring to Britain an American director of the very first rate. Bring one or two cameramen of the type who command $500 or $750 a week. Bring lighting experts and scenic artists from Germany. Bring a few selected players from other countries to fit the stories chosen.

Then take the best British stories and put this one central unit to work with a free hand. Throw overboard all antiquated ideas of technique, continuity, camera angles and settings. Finance the series on a franchise plan among British exhibitors, plus a suitable government guarantee against deficit.

And you will have pictures worthy the name. You will not give employment to the maximum number of British artists at the outset, but you will build for the future. Gradually, British artists and technicians will grow and develop, and their pictures will need neither contingent nor subsidy. But not otherwise.

Weil Heads Universal's Exploitation Dept.

UNIVERSAL has announced the appointment of Joe Weil as director of exploitation. Weil has been in charge of the Universal exploitation for the past five months and his appointment as director of the department, the Universal announcement states, is a reward for his accomplishments during that time.

For the past two years Weil has handled all of the Broadway showings for the company. A year ago he has detailed to put over "The Hunchback" in Paris, which he did in record breaking manner.

New Laboratory for New York

United Color Pictures to Offer New Process on Definite Commercial Scale

PURCHASE of a plot of ground in New York City last week by the United Color Pictures, Inc., for the erection of a three-story laboratory and factory building brought to light the fact that a new color process is soon to be offered to the industry on a definite commercial scale.

The new color process is the invention and development of Joseph Shaw, well known in the industry as a photographic expert, and until recent years, when he started to work on his color plans, associated with the Eastman Company for a period of twelve years. Mr. Shaw is authority for the statement that the new factory will be in operation by the middle of November and that orders for work are already being taken.

The process sponsored by the newly-organized United Color Pictures, Inc., was originally financed by George J. Gould, the nationally famous railroad man and capitalist. Since his death the interest of the estate has been taken over by the Barnes Finance Corporation, a strong Mid-West organization, which is now associated with Mr. Shaw in the United firm.

Representatives of the Barnes organization interviewed during the week were enthusiastic over the preliminary demand for the process in which they have become interested, and very optimistic regarding the probable market. More business has already been offered by concerns who have seen samples of the work than it will be possible to turn out at the start.

Virtues claimed for the new process include an exceptional range and softness of color; unusually close registering, and the fact that the process aids the blending with the black and white. The inventor, previous to his association with Eastman, was prominent in photographic circles in England and Germany, and entered motion picture work with a background of firm scientific knowledge.

Concerning his new process, Mr. Shaw was reticient to speak preferring to allow the many samples of his work that have already been seen by picture experts to do the talking. "It is not for the inventor," he declares, "to proclaim the strong points of his own creation, for the parent is naturally enthusiastic. But practical picture producers who have viewed the United Color company's work are unanimous in telling me that at last it looks as though the picture industry is getting the color process for which it has been looking.

"Commercially practicable price and fineness of quality have been the demands. We will meet the market in price, thus putting natural color within reach of all, and as far as quality is concerned I feel confident that any picture men who view the new process on the screen will agree that we have finally got away from the jarring notes and limitations of color film work of the past."

James Mason in Cast of New Harold Lloyd Feature

James Mason will play a heavy role in the Harold Lloyd feature which is now in production for Paramount distribution. Mason will add to the group of underworld characters in the film, the group now including also Noah Young, Leo Willis and Constantine Romanoff, a heavyweight wrestler.

Kane Proposes Photoplay Chair

Offers $5,000 Annual Endowment for Picture Department in University

SUGGESTING a photoplay department for universities as the means of attracting to the picture industry college men trained in various phases of photoplay production, Robert T. Kane, head of the production company bearing his name, has offered an annual $5,000 endowment for that purpose.

In making this proposal Mr. Kane expressed the hope that other producers would share his views and lend their support toward establishing a photoplay chair in one of the larger universities of this country. Announcing his plan, Mr. Kane said:

"There is no other profession or business in the world, wherein the financial reward is so great as in ours. I can name at the moment eight young men earning on an average of $1,000 a week in New York studios, and not one of them would be able to last a week if pitted against college trained, highly specialized and serious minded contemporaries. We must have creative thought and competent counsel. This is the only way of obtaining it.

"I have felt for years that we in the industry are paying genius prices to mediocrity. This must be curbed."

Kane restricted his annual gift toward a photoplay department to the following universities: Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Univeristy of California, University of Pennsylvania, University of Wisconsin, Uuniversity of Chicago and Columbia.

Tearle Signs Contract to Star for Asher

Conway Tearle will be presented as the star in several productions to be made by E. M. Asher, of Corinne Griffith Productions, it was announced this week. A contract calling for Tearle's services as a star was signed on the coast by the actor and Mr. Asher.

The Tearle pictures will be an enterprise separate from the activities in which Asher participates with Corinne Griffith. Releasing arrangements will be announced soon, the producer said. The pictures are to be filmed at the United Studios in Hollywood. The first production will be "Good Luck," a London melodrama.

Rayart Companies Busy With Production

Three Rayart companies are busily engaged with production work on the west coast. Harry J. Brown Productions last week completed work on "The Patent Leather Pug," a five reel prize fight story starring Billy Sullivan, and will start next week on "The Windjammer," also featuring Sullivan. The same company also has in production "The Danger Quest," featuring Reed Howes, with a cast that includes Ethel Shannon, J. P. McGowan and Billy Franey.

Jack Perrin, another Rayart star, is working under the supervision of Harry Webb of Webb Productions, on a five reel western titled "Dangerous Fists."

Three Signed for "Sally, Irene and Mary"

Karl Dane, William Haines and Joan Crawford have been signed by director Edmund Goulding for three of the important roles in "Sally, Irene and Mary," a spectacular screen production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The picture will be an adaptation from the Broadway stage success of three seasons ago by Edward Dowling. It was adapted for the screen by Louis Lighton and Hope Loring.

Dorothy Mackaill Signed by First National

Dorothy Mackaill has been placed under a five-year contract by First National. The agreement was signed by Miss Mackaill and John E. McCormick, western general manager of production for First National, recently. Her next appearance will be in "Joanna With a Million" to be produced by Edwin Carewe, producer of "Mighty Lak' A Rose," the photoplay in which Miss Mackaill achieved screen prominence.

Betty Bronson in Paramount's "A Kiss For Cinderella."

F. B. O. Presenting New Stars

Company Also Appointing New Directors in Building Up Its Production Forces

IN AN effort to present new talent on and back of the screen, F. B. O. has added to its personnel five stars and directors hitherto unknown in these capacities. Tom Tyler, new to stardom, is being guided by James Gruen, former Los Angeles newspaperman, and Robert De Lacey, who was for many years a star cutter. They are now filming "Let's Go, Gallagher," a western picture.

In the supporting role with Alberta Vaughn in "The Adventures of Mazie," is Larry Kent, a young juvenile with but little experience before the camera. James Wilkinson, formerly head cutter for F. B. O. is working with Director Ralph Ceder on the same series, and will probably be given his own unit in the near future.

In discussing the move for the presentation of new stars and directors, B. P. Fineman, general manager of F. B. O. studios, said:

"It is a sort of financial cowardice that has prevented the inculcation of new ideas and new blood to any appreciable extent heretofore. It is natural enough, in a way, but it is unfortunate. Producers have been afraid to 'gamble' with untried talent in almost any line, and have waited for talent to prove itself before accepting it as such. With no chance to prove itself, the situation has resolved into a vicious circle; men with ambition waiting to try and break in and show what they can do, while the producer says 'show me what you can do before I sign you.' I believe personally that the time for that sort of business conservatism is at an end. It is as archaic as Sanskrit. And I think, furthermore, that it is no gamble to utilize more or less unknown talent provided the men themselves are known and studied as individuals."

Six F. B. O. companies and ten independents are at work on the F. B. O. lot, keeping up the brisk production pace in Hollywood during the past several months.

Among the more important F. B. O. pictures now in the course of completion are "The Last Edition," Emory Johnson's newspaper melodrama; "Three Wise Crooks," Evelyn Brent's new vehicle; "Heads Up," the latest Lefty Flynn opus being produced and directed by Harry Garson; "Ridin' The Wind," the most recent Fred Thomson picture under the co-direction of Del Andrews and Al Werker; Dick Talmadge's "Dr. Jim," "Let's Go, Gallagher," and "The Adventures of Mazie," Alberta Vaughn's two reel starring series.

Douglas McLean is one of the outside companies which has just started work at this studio, beginning "Seven Keys To Baldpate." Other independents who are busy include the Hoffman company, the Sanford Productions, Howard Esterbrook Productions, Spitzer-Jones Pictures and Larry Semon.

Gotham Will Make Third Thunder Feature

A third Thunder feature for the Marvel Dog will be included in the program of twelve features by Gotham Productions for release through Gotham Productions. The new one titled, "The Phantom of the Forest" will take the place on the program previously announced for "The Forest of Destiny" and will be released early in the Spring as one of the final pictures of the current program.

Immediately upon his return from Germany, Thunder will start work on the second picture of the series titled, "The Sign of the Claw". The story was written especially for the dog by Lon A. Young. The third picture, "The Phantom of the Forest" is a melodrama of the lumber camps in Northern New York.

New William Fox Academy of Music Soon to Replace Famous Old Structure

THE old Academy of Music, New York's first home of the opera, opened on October 20th, 1853, will soon be no more. It is to be torn down to make way for a new skyscraper.

New York will not be without its Academy of Music, however, as directly across 14th street from the old site, William Fox, President of Fox Film Corporation who holds the lease on the building, is erecting a greater Academy of Music which will be opened March 1st, 1926, the date of the closing of the famous old playhouse.

The new Academy of Music has been planned by Mr. Fox as a "temple of Music" to the public. It is now under construction and was conceived as a center for true music lovers who abound in the 14th street district and below it. Motion pictures will also be shown.

The new structure will cost $1,500,000 and have a seating capacity of 4900, running through the block to 13th street. It will have an orchestra of 100 artists with a leader of international reputation. A refrigerating system will reduce the temperature of the auditorium 20 degrees lower than that in the street.

The lease of the Academy of Music was acquired by William Fox, through the New England Theatre Company, on February 12, 1910 and took possession on January 5, 1911. The last performance of the legitimate drama was given by E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe in "Hamlet" on June 6, 1910.

The New Academy of Music, which is nearing completion, will be one of the finest theatres of music and motion pictures in the city.

I.M.P.A. Membership Increases

Elliott Report Shows Enrollment Gains Forty-Five Per Cent in Two Months

THE membership of the Independent Motion Picture Association of America has increased 45 per cent in the past two months, according to the first formal report submitted to the Association by Frederick H. Elliott, general manager.

There were 71 members, 26 producers and distributors and 45 exchanges on June 15, the date on which Mr. Elliott assumed the duties of his office, and on August 15th there were 103 active members and two associate members enrolled. The active list now shows 25 producers-distributors and 78 exchanges.

"To the best of my knowledge," said Mr. Elliott in his report, this is the largest by far of any organization within the industry as regards corporate membership."

The Connecticut tax situation was the leading topic for discussion at the last meeting of the organization. Mr. Elliott submitted a proposal for special action by the Independents. His report was confirmed by Lester S. Tobias, of New Haven, regional director for the I. M. P. A. and the proposal received the unanimous indorsement of the meeting. A special legislative committee to consider the situation is to be appointed by I. E. Chadwick, president of the I. M. P. A.

New members elected at the meeting included the Krause Mfg. Co. to associate membership and the following to active membership: Freedom Film Co., Buffalo; Home State Film Co., Inc., Dallas; Independent Film Service, Inc., Dallas; Oklahoma Specialty Film Co., Oklahoma City; Standard Film Service, Inc., Oklahoma City; Lande Film Co., Pittsburgh; Renown Pictures, Indianapolis; Capitol Film Exchange, Indianapolis; Midwest Distributing Co., Milwaukee; Arkansas Specialty Film Co., Little Rock.

Leading Havana Theatre to Show Pictures

THE Teatro Nacional in Havana will be converted into a motion picture house with First National pictures as the basis of the program under an agreement signed by Fernando Poli, prominent Havana exhibitor, with First National. The Nacional will inaugurate its new policy on August 29th with "The Sea Hawk" as the attraction.

The Nacional, the foremost theatre in Cuba, has housed the annual presentation of opera in Cuba, and such famous operatic stars as Caruso, Tetrazini and Bonci have appeared there. The house has a seating capacity of 2,200 and was built in 1911.

A modern ventilating system and other improvements are being installed. It will be conducted as a picture theatre under the direction of Mr. Poli, who is also the owner and operator of the Strand, Florencina, Palico Gris and Campoamor theatres in Havana.

Albany Zone Meeting to Adopt New By-Laws

There will be a meeting of the Albany and Buffalo Zones held in the latter city the fore part of September, according to an announcement made during the past week by Louis Buettner, of Cohoes, chairman of the Albany Zone. The meeting, however, will be only of the by-laws committees from each Zone and will be for the purpose of submitting and adopting by-laws and certain amendments that have been suggested by various exhibitors. Among these amendments will be one which would make it mandatory upon the exchange or the exhibitor bringing a case before the arbitration boards, to pay the sum of five dollars to meet expenses. It is contended that if such an amendment was adopted that it would do away with so many trivial cases being brought up before the Arbitration Board, requiring much valuable time on the part of exchange managers as well as exhibitors sitting on the Board. Whatever money accrued from such charges could be applied to meeting the running expenses of the two zones as well as the arbitration boards.

New Charters Granted in New York State

Motion picture companies incorporating in Albany and receiving charters which permit them to engage in the various branches of the industry in New York State during the past week, included the following, the names of the directors and the amount of capitalization, when specified, being given:

Hubert's Museum, $10,000, D. Blum, I. H. Greenfield, B. Selenks, New York city; United Stars Distributing Co., Inc., $5,000, Nat Nathensen, Samuel Goldfarb, W. Mason, New York City; Hudson Valley Theatres Corporation, with M. L. Elkin, M. Salit, Anne Eichel, New York; Wellwood Amusement Co., Inc., Great Neck, $20,000, Fred Kilgour, Oyster Bay; George Duck, H. S. McKnight, Great Neck; H. E. R. Laboratories, Inc., David Bernstein, Morris L. Greenberg, Sylvia T. Stern, New York city; The Herkimer-Little Falls Corporation, with H. E. Hughes, New York; Louis Mehl, Charles B. Paine, Brooklyn; Little Neck Amusement Co., Inc., $5,000, Samuel Baker, Ozone Park; Daniel Kerner, Ozone Park; B. S. Michaelson, New York city; Magnus Film Sales Corporation, $5,000, Henry Arias, Edmund Souhami, Essie Bregstein, New York; A. and A. Amusement Corporation, $25,000, R. H. Clarke, F. C. Taylor, James T. Asphury, New York city.

No Vacancies on New York Review Board

Despite the fact that there was a recent civil service examination in New York state for the position of reviewer on the New York State Motion Picture Commission, it is said that there is no possibility of any immediate appointments being made. While there were two vacancies existing some time ago, these were filled from the former eligible list. Many of those who took the examination a short time ago were under the impression that there was a chance for immediate appointment.

Preparing "Blue Law" Bill for New York State

Rev. John Ferguson, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, has served notice on the New York State Legislature that it may expect a "blue law" bill next January, very similar to the one that failed to pass last winter. It is said that the Lord's Day Alliance will support the bill and that preparations have already been made for its introduction. Among other things the bill will prohibit Sunday motion picture shows throughout New York state.

Blaisdell Organizes Producing Company

GEORGE BLAISDELL, former editor of the Exhibitors Trade Review and of Moving Picture World, this week announced the incorporation of Beacon Films Corporation, a California corporation, that will produce independent pictures in Hollywood. The company is headed by Robert Anthony Dillon, the author, as President and Mr. Blaisdell as Secretary and Treasurer.

The first production of the new company is in work and is "The Flame Fighter" a ten episode serial production starring Herbert Rawlinson. It will be released by Rayart Pictures.

Douglas Fairbanks' Niece in "Stella Dallas"

Flobelle Fairbanks, a niece of Doug, is making her screen debut with Samuel Goldwyn's "Stella Dallas," being directed by Henry King for United Artists release. She is playing the maid of honor at the wedding scene of Douglas Jr., as young Grovesnor, to Lois Moran as Laurel Dallas.

Conway Tearle Engaged by Tiffany

Conway Tearle has been engaged by Tiffany Productions for the principal role in "Morals for Men," suggested by "The Luck Serum," from the pen of Gouverneur Morris. A. P. Younger adapted the story for the screen. It will be the fourth of the Tiffany Big Twelve by famous authors.

S. F. Police Chief to Make Screen Debut

San Francisco's police chief, Dan O'Brien, will make his screen debut in "The Last Edition," Emory Johnson's newspaper story for early autumn release by F. B. O. He will have the role of the chief of police.

Barbara Starr Engaged for "Let's Go Gallagher"

Barbara Starr has been engaged for the feminine lead opposite Tom Tyler in "Let's Go Gallagher," his first western production for F. B. O., which is to be filmed in Hollywood.

Harold Lloyd in "The Freshman," Pathe Release.

Action stills from "The Meddler," a recent Universal feature.

Report New Independent Deals

Important Foreign and Domestic Sales Closed by States Rights Distributors

SALES of new independent productions for foreign and domestic territories show considerable buying activity on the part of exchange men and exporters. The foreign buyers figure prominently in the recent announcements of deals concluded by the states rights distributors, who also report the closing of more territory in this country on producers listed on the current year's program.

Sam Saxe this week announced the sale to Home State Film Co., Inc., of Dallas, Little Rock and Oklahoma City, of the twelve Gotham Productions for the Southwestern states of Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. The deal was concluded between Mr. Saxe and Jack K. Adams, of the Home State company, during his visit to New York this week. On his return Adams took with him prints of the first three releases, "The Overland Limited," "The Police Patrol" and "A Little Girl in a Big City."

Arrow Pictures Corporation, W. E. Shallenberger, president, reports the sale of "High Speed Lee" to the DeLuxe Film Company of Philadelphia, for their territory.

First Graphic Exchanges, Inc., of Albany and Buffalo have secured the rights to eight J. B. Warner pictures produced by Sunset Prod.

Jans Productions, Inc., announced that Charles LaLumiere, president of the Film DeLuxe, Ltd., had contracted for the Eastern Canadian Rights for the 1925-26 productions of that company. The announcement states that this sale practically closes the entire world distribution rights on the six features which Jans will make this season.

Joe Rock Productions, making the series of 13 two-reel Standard comedies, and 13 Blue Ribbon comedies, to be distributed by F. B. O. in the United States and Canada, report that J. G. & R. B. Wainright of London, have bought the distribution rights to both series for the United Kingdom and Continental Europe.

The Wainright firm has also purchased for those territories the 26 single reel subjects being produced by J. R. Bray. These are in two series of 13 and are titled the "Unnatural History Cartoons," and the "Dinky Doodle Cartoons." These pictures, also, are being handled in the United States and Canada by F. B. O. The Bray product has also been sold to U. Ono for Japan.

Warner Bros. To Produce Stage Plays

Warner Brothers are mapping their plans to produce plays on the legitimate stage, according to Harry M. Warner. They are purchasing novels and plays for next season's schedule to be presented in Broadway playhouses. Casting will be under way shortly for two plays to be produced shortly before the holidays.

The first two stories being considered are "The Woman Tamer," by Stanley Shaw, and "The Florentine Dagger," a mystery story by Ben Hecht. "Bitter Apples," a recent novel by Harold McGrath, which has just been bought by the Warners, is another novel being considered for stage purposes.

Warners Plan Sept. Releases

Four Features Are Scheduled for the Exhibitors During the Coming Month

THE first four releases of the 1925-26 schedule have been set for September by Warner Brothers. They include dramas, melodramas and comedies. The releases include "The Limited Mail," "The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted," "His Majesty Bunker Bean" and "Below the Line."

"The Limited Mail," starring Monte Blue, is set for release September 5th. It is an Elmer E. Vance story with Vera Reynolds, Willard Louis, John Roche, Eddie Gribbon, Tom Gallery and Otis Harlan in the prominent roles. George Hill directed.

Gertie De Wentworth James's "The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted" is to be released September 12th. Irene Rich is starred, with Huntly Gordon, John Harron, June Marlowe, Gayne Whitman, Elinor Faire and Don Alvarado in the supporting roles. James Flood directed.

"His Majesty Bunker Bean," a Harry Leon Wilson story, starring Matt Moore and Dorothy Devore, is the September 19th release. Louise Fazenda, Willard Louis, and John Patrick have the leading supporting roles. Harry Beaumont directed.

"Below the Line" is a Rin-Tin-Tin story by Charles A. Logue to be released September 26th. Among the players in the cast are John Harron, June Marlowe, Pat Hartigan and Charles "Heine" Conklin. Herman Raymaker directed.

Katz Named Assistant F. B. O. Sales Chief

MAJOR H. C. S. Thomson, president and managing director of Film Booking Offices has announced the appointment of Sidney M. Katz as assistant sales manager. Katz has been associated with the company since its inception three and one-half years ago as assistant manager of the New York exchange and a district manager in the east.

Katz left this week for a swing around the exchanges of F. B. O. to further acquaint himself with the personnel of the company, though he is already widely known among eastern and mid-western exhibitors.

Two Added to Cast for "Masked Bride"

Chester Conklin and Fred Warren have been added to the cast supporting Mae Murray in her new starring vehicle, "The Masked Bride," for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The production is now well under way under the direction of Christie Cabanne.

Francis X. Bushman has the leading male role in this production, while others in the supporting cast include Lew White, Roy D'Arcy, Basil Rathbone, Pauline Neff, Lawford Davidson and Andre Cheron.

Elinor Glyn Will Direct Own Picture

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have signed Elinor Glyn to direct her next picture, "The Only Thing," from an original story written by her. The story is now being adapted for the screen. Mme. Glyn has supervised her own productions in the past, but will be her first directorial effort.

Moomaw Will Produce at Tacoma Studios

Lewis H. Moomaw, who is under contract to make four pictures for Associated Exhibitors, will probably produce some of them at the H. C. Weaver productions studios in Tacoma, Washington. He visited the studios last week and was much pleased with them.

"Under the Rouge," Moomaw's second picture for Associated is now ready for release. It is his own story and features Tom Moore and Eileen Percy. Other important members of the cast are, Mary Alden, James Mason, Claire de Lorez, Chester Conklin, William V. Mong, Eddie Phillips, Carmelita Geraghty, Tom Gallery, Bruce Guerin, Aileen Manning, Peggy Prevost, William Dills and Stanley Blystone.

Lasky, first Vice-President of Famous Players-Lasky has completed arrangements with Michael Arlen, famous English author, whereby the latter will arrive in Hollywood October 15th to personally aid in the screen adaptation of "Crossroads of the World," his original story for Pola Negri. This is Arlen's first original story for the screen.

Mix Making Progress on "Yankee Senor"

Good progress is being made on the new Tom Mix picture, "A Yankee Senor," at the Fox West Coast studios. It is an adaptation from the widely read novel, "Conquistador." Scenically this will be one of the most pretentious pictures ever made by Mix. It will show many shots in Yellowstone National Park and beautiful scenes in Chihuahua.

Van Dyke Again to Direct Buck Jones

Buck Jones will again be directed by W. S. Van Dyke in his next picture for Fox, "The Desert's Price." Montague Love is the only member of the supporting cast so far selected. It will be the first picture in which he has appeared for Fox.

Dramatic episodes from "With This Ring," a B. P. Schulberg production.

Educational Fixes Releases

Six Series of Two-Reelers Will Be Under Way by the End of September

BY THE end of September six different series of two-reel comedies on the Educational Pictures program for 1925-26 will be under way, with one or more subjects in each group released. In the three remaining groups, Hamilton Comedies, Lupino Lane comedies and Juvenile Comedies, the first subject will have appeared in pre-release showings, although set on the release schedules for October.

Late in August the Educational product made its first appearance with the release of a two-reel special, "Wild Beasts of Borneo," a single reel animated cartoon, "Felix the Cat Trifles with Time," and a two-reel Christy comedy, "Soup to Nuts," featuring Neal Burns.

The first week of September a Bobby Vernon Comedy "Watch Out" will be released. Jack Duffy and Frances Lee lend support to the star. "Pleasure Bound," a Mermaid Comedy with a cast headed by Lige Conley, is another two-reeler on this week's schedule. Included in the releases for the week is another "Felix the Cat" cartoon, "Felix Busts Into Business."

The week of September 13 is to have for its outstanding release "Off His Beat" starring Walter Hiers. A Cameo one-reel subject, "In Deep," with Cliff Bowes and Helen Foster, completes the schedule for this week.

Critics have pronounced "The Tourist" among the outstanding comedies. It is a two-reel Tuxedo Comedy being released the week of September 20. Johnny Arthur and Helen Foster have the leading parts. Two novelty releases, a "Felix the Cat" cartoon and Lyman H. Howe's Hodge-Podge "The Story Teller," are the single-reel offerings of the week.

The first Jimmie Adams Comedy, "Be Careful," makes its appearance the week of September 27. Long a favorite in Christie Comedies, this is Adams' first appearance in a production unit of his own. Another Mermaid Comedy is contributed this week by Al St. John in a picture called "Fair Warning." A one-reel Cameo Comedy "Who's Which" with Cliff Bowes and Phil Dunham, completes the comedy schedule.

In addition to the above, two releases of Kinograms, Educational's News Reel, will be issued each week.

THEY'RE MAKING MONEY FOR EVERYBODY

Production highlights from "Fort Frayne," a Davis Distributing Division, Inc., release co-featuring Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber.

Cohn Developing New Directors

Head of Columbia Studios Says Present Need is for Fresh Directorial Talent

THAT directors with "new ideas, fresh viewpoints, and clever angles to movie material are the most vital need of the films today" is the belief of Harry Cohn, Columbia Pictures production manager. Mr. Cohn admits that there will be much good accomplished by the effort to bring new screen facts before the public, but maintains that even greater good may be accomplished toward bringing new interest into pictures by the encouragement and development of new director material.

Stating that the Columbia organization believed strongly in the idea, Mr. Cohn spoke of Antonio Gaudio, cameraman with D. W. Griffith twenty years ago, and for the past four years Norma Talmadge's chief cameraman, who was given his chance to direct a production when Mr. Cohn signed him to film "The Price of Success," a Waldorf feature. Gaudio's work was found so satisfactory by officials of the company that he was immediately reengaged and is now making "Sealed Lips" for the company.

Another directorial "find" of Cohn's is Frank Strayer, assistant director to Harry Beaumont for the past five years. Mr. Strayer's first work as a director was the filming of "Enemy of Men," a Columbia picture. He also has been reengaged on the strength of his initial work receiving a five-year contract to direct for Columbia. Mr. Cohn states that the Columbia company has in mind several other promising young men who will be given an opportunity to develop their talents as directors with that company in the near future.

Chaplin to Star Edna Purviance

CHARLEY CHAPLIN will supervise production of a number of pictures in which Edna Purviance will be starred following her return from Europe, for where she sailed last week on the steamship Majestic.

Miss Purviance was long leading woman for Chaplin in his earlier comedies and was the star of "A Woman of Paris," Chaplin's first serious dramatic production. The coming pictures are to be made at the Chaplin studio. The director has not been decided upon, but the pictures will be supervised by the comedian.

Casting Under Way for "First Year"

Casting is under way for "The First Year," a John Golden stage success, which Frank Borzage will direct for Fox. The picture will be made at the West Coast studios, where Borzage has just completed "Lazybones."

Harmon Weight is directing Evelyn Brent for F. B. O. in "Three Wise Crooks," an original melodrama by John C. Brownell and Fred Kennedy of F. B. O. scenario staff. Following this story Weight will return to Associated to direct "Flaming Waters."

Carr to Play Perlmutter in "Partners Again"

Samuel Goldwyn has engaged Alexander Carr to play the role of Perlmutter in "Partners Again," the Montague Glass stage play which is to be filmed under the direction of Henry King. Carr created the role on the speaking stage and was seen on the screen in the Goldwyn production of "In Hollywood with Potash and Perlmutter." George Sidney will be the other member of the famous firm in "Partners Again." Production on the piece will be started by Mr. King immediately upon completion of "Stella Dallas," which he is now filming for Goldwyn.

Ricardo Cortez is Opposite Bebe Daniels

Ricardo Cortez has been assigned the leading role opposite Bebe Daniels in Paramount's "Martinique," which is being made on the west coast under the direction of William K. Howard.

The picture is an adaptation by Bernard McConville from the Laurence Eyre play. In the supporting cast are Wallace Beery, Arthur Edmund Carewe, Dale Fuller, Robert Perry, Eulalie Jensen, John Sainpolis and Emily Barrye.

Sterling to Make Another for Columbia

Columbia Pictures has signed Ford Sterling for another big production to follow "Steppin' Out," which he recently completed under the direction of Frank Strayer. The title of the new picture has not yet been announced, but it is said Harry Cohn, production manager, has a stage hit in mind for Sterling.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

"Lost World" Campaign at Ocean City, N. J.

"The Lost World" played a week's engagement recently at the Moorlyn theatre, Ocean City, N. J. As is customary, the local management was assisted during the preliminary period by the personal cooperation of the Exploitation Department under the supervision of Allan S. Glenn, who prepared an elaborate campaign to stimulate interest in the advent of "The Lost World."

Ocean City is one of the largest seashore resorts in New Jersey comparable in size to Atlantic City and Asbury Park. Its population in the winter is only about 6,000 which is augmented to 100,000 in the summer. Lowell H. Stormont of the exploitation department, capitalized these facts in the operation of the campaign.

In addition to an especially heavy campaign in the newspapers and the rental of all the available billboard space, generous ads in the house programs and other such media, Stormont, with the aid of George Kline, resident manager, arranged many newspaper tie-ups of unusual quality and quantity.

Permission was obtained from the New York Times to reprint an article from its magazine section written by the scientist, Henry Fairchild Osborn, and illustrated by the caricaturist, Cesare. This article on the prehistoric animals and reptiles whose discovery in a lost world form the basis of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's film, was used by the principal paper of Ocean City a week in advance.

In co-operation with the Sentinel-Ledger, Ocean City's principal newspaper, ten pairs of tickets were attached to balloons and sent into the air by the Mayor of the City. The ceremony was performed on the boardwalk and duly heralded in advance on the first page of the newspaper. Needless to say, a huge crowd was present to join in the chase for the coveted "Annie Oakleys." In addition to carrying the story in advance and afterwards, this paper also printed handbills and distributed them at its own expense announcing the stunt.

Jewelry provided an excellent window tie-up on "Pretty Ladies" (Metro-Goldwyn) when that picture was shown at Loew's Warfield theatre, San Francisco, recently.

The following day ten thousand toy balloons bearing the imprint of the theatre and the title of "The Lost World" were released from a captive balloon flying from the top of the theatre. Every kid in the sovereign State of New Jersey was present when the biggest balloon party in history was staged, judging from the movies made of the crowd which, incidentally, were unable to avoid reading the imprint on the captive balloon above the theatre giving the date and the title.

Five thousand stickers were attached to the front page of all the New York and Philadelphia newspapers announcing the opening date, by arrangement with the local newsdealers.

"Black Cyclone" Float is Seattle Prize Winner

Stealing circus parades has long been one of showman's popular outdoor sports, but L. A. Samuelson, manager of Pathe's Seattle Exchange and Robert Bender, manager of the Columbia theatre in Seattle not only crashed the American Legion's big parade in that city which more than two hundred thousand people viewed but won second prize, received additional newspaper publicity for their float which featured "Blaek Cyclone," and also received a letter of appreciation from the American Legion committee thanking them for their cooperation and help in making the parade a success and complimenting them upon the excellenee of their float.

In advance of opening date, the exchange manager and the theatre manager got together and designed their beautiful floral float, procuring the only big wooden horse in the town which luckily happened to be black and was an excellent double for Rex, This they had mounted on the float with appropriate eopy—"Hal Roach Presents Rex, the Wild Horse in Black Cyclone." Four Columbia ushers were also on the float. Although the float was a ballyhoo, it was so artistically done that the picture not only receeived a great boost from showing to the thousands who watched the parade but also every newspaper in town carried a story telling about the Columbia theatre winning second prize with a "Black Cyclone" float.

"Declasse" Advertised on 75-Foot Billboard

A feature of the billing given to "Delasse" by Loew's Vendome theatre, Nashville, was a seventy-five foot billboard in the heart of the business district, at the corner of Eighth avenue and Commerce street. All sizes of the paper except the 24's were used and the display was a brilliant one.

Night shot of the excellent specially painted lobby display prepared by P. H. Touney at the Majestic theatre, Fort Dodge, Iowa, for the engagement of "Tracked in the Snow Country" (Warner Bros.).

Warm Welcome for Trackless Train in Decatur

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Trackless Train continues its journey across the continent to a series of welcomes of which that at Decatur, Ill., is typical. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Trackless Train arrived there early in the morning. It was met at the city limits by a motorcycle detail of police and escorted through the principal streets and then to the Lincoln Square theatre. A crowd gathered and enthused over the train during the time that it was parked. Mr. Wallace, manager of the theatre, was taken aboard and was driven through the city to the city hall where the Mayor and other city officials went aboard for a trip around the city.

For fully two hours the train was driven about the city with whistle blowing and bell ringing, attracting thousands of people. Front page newspaper stories were repeated here as in other cities along the route of the train.

"I'll Show You the Town" on Realtors' Cards

By placing a special card reading "Come in, I'll show you the town," in every real estate window in Tampa, Manager John B. Carroll gained the maximum publicity for "I'll Show you the Town" at the Victory theatre. Due to the cards' attractive appearance, Manager Carroll experienced no trouble in placing them, relators being most anxious to secure the cards for window display.

In connection with stills and photos in the lobby, Manager Carroll used a mounted three sheet cutout showing Reginald Denny and two girls, with the city skyline as a background. Appropriately mounted, the display made quite a flash.

Unique mounting for cut-out figures on "The Night Club" (Paramount) at the Howard, Atlanta, by Manager H. P. Kingsmore.

"Cheaper to Marry" Given Six Window Displays

Six window displays secured by Morris Abrams, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, recently exploited a showing of "Cheaper to Marry" at the Lyric theatre in Minneapolis. Three of these windows were contributed by cigar stores and featured stills in which Chesterfield cigarettes were used, and two others were donated by jewelry stores. The Gomossi Store for Ladies exhibited stills of Paulette Duval in lingerie in the center of an elaborate display of women's underclothing.

"Iron Horse" Drive Aimed at Railroad Employes

An outstanding feature of the recent "Iron Horse" engagement at Keith's Palace theatre, Cleveland, was the special exploitation campaign arranged by Manager John R. Royal and the Fox exploitation agent aimed at railroad men and their families.

Lists were secured of the vast army of railroad employees operating about Cleveland, and these employes solicited through the medium of a postal card bearing the following copy:

Railroad Men! "The Iron Horse," a tremendous drama of the building of the first transcontinental railroad, will make you prouder than ever to say "I am a Railroad Man." It is a picture for you and yours! Starting Sunday, July 5th, for one week only, B. F. Keith's Palace, world's most magnficent playhouse.

Another medium employed was a special one-sheet poster about railroad yards, near passenger and freight stations, and in fact at every point where there was a chance of a railroad man seeing it.

Ballyhoo Before Theatre for "Danger Signal"

An excellent exploitation stunt was put over by Manager MacDonald of B. S. Moss's Broadway Theatre then he showed "The Danger Signal."

On both sides of the marquee, MacDonald had huge arrows containing the cast, pointing to a large poster hung over the lobby entrance. The stunt that drew the crowds however, was a ballyhoo specialty in the form of a fat man dressed as a station agent. He delivered lectures on railroad life and incidents that amused the crowd, and his answers to hecklers often called forth roars of laughter.

Short Subjects and Serials

Dramatic Actors Signed by Hal Roach

Hal Roach has signed a number of well known dramatic actors to appear in his comedy casts for Pathe release. George Siegman and William J. Kelly will be seen in "The Caretaker's Daughter," a Charley Chase comedy directed by Leo McCarey.

Walter Long is one of the fun-makers in "There Goes the Bride," a Roach two-reeler, directed by James W. Horne. Gertrude Astor has a leading part in another two-reel star comedy.

Josephine Crowell, character lead in "The Birth of a Nation" and other big productions is in the cast of "No Father to Guide Him," an early September release . with Charlie Chase. Mickey Bennett will make his debut with the Hal Roach players in this same Pathe comedy.

Marshall Will Supervise All Fox Two-Reelers

George E. Marshall has been promoted to director-in-chief or all Fox two reel comedies. For the past several months he has been serving in that capacity for the Van Bibber, Helen and Warren and O. Henry comedies. Under the new arrangement Marshall supervises comedies made by Directors Ben Stoloff and Lew Seiler. He is directly responsible for the selection of all directors and players and seeing that scrips and stories are properly handled.

New Canine Performer in Hiers Comedy

Brownie II, son of the original Brownie, well known as a dog performer on the screen, is to make his film debut in a new comedy starring Walter Hiers, which is being made at Christies for distribution through Educational Film Exchanges.

Brownie II, was raised and trained by Charles Gee, who also trained his father. Gee claims the new Brownie will be even a better performer than his illustrious daddy.

"The Bad Man" is First of New Dinky Doodle Series

"The Bad Man" is the title of the first release in the new Dinky Doodle cartoon series for F. B. O. It is a burlesque of the western photoplays with the cartoon characters performing breath-taking stunts and feats of heroism of the order popularized by leading screen stars of the western melodramas. The picture will be released in October.

Charles Lamont to Direct Juvenile Comedy

Charles La Mont, recently signed to direct one-reel Cameo Comedies, will also direct the first of the Juvenile comedies for the season to be released by Educational Film Exchanges.

Pathe's Schedule for Sept. 6

Charlie Chase Comedy, "Stereoscopik" and Serial Episode on Program of Short Subjects

A WIDE range of short subjects will be offered by Pathe on the program for the week of September 6. The comedy will be supplied by a Hal Roach two-reeler starring Charlie Chase. Other releases of the week include a Grantland Rice "Sportlight," a "Stereoscopik" reel entitled "The Runaway Taxi," a chapter of "Play Ball," current Pathe serial, "Topics of the Day," "Aesop's Film Fables," a Pathe Review, and two issues of Pathe News.

"No Father to Guide Him" is the title of the Chase comedy. It shows the comedian as the father whose estranged wife will not allow him to see their son. The ingenious devices invented by the father to visit with his boy make up the comedy moments of the play. Katherine Grant appears as the wife and Josephine Crowell is .the mother-in-law.

"Barrier Busters," the latest Grantland Rice "Sportlight," gives ample evidence that the so-called "weaker sex" is forging ahead in the world of sports. "A Runaway Taxi" permits spectators to experience the thrills of a wild ride through city streets and over country roads.

"Double Peril" is the title of the eighth chapter of the Pathe serial "Play Ball," written by Manager McGraw of the N. Y. Giants and adapted for the screen by Frank Leon Smith.

Pathe Review No. 36 offers the following subjects: "Understudying Ulm," the great German cathedral shown in miniature; "The Lost City," scenes of an ancient Moorish metropolis in Pathe color. "Barnyard Follies" is the title of Paul Terry's latest of the "Aesop's Film Fables" series. Completing the September 6th Pathe schedule are "Topics of the Day," and two issues of Pathe News.

F. B. O. Short Subjects Active

Four Comedy Units Busy With Production at West and East Coast Studios

SHORT subjects for the 1925-26 program are at the peak of their activity at the F.B.O. studio simultaneously with the arrival at the coast studios last week of vice-president J. I. Schnitzer and east coast scenario editor John Brownell. The four comedy units at the F.B.O. studio are functioning at full speed, while Walter Lantz of the Bray Studios in New York is turning out two series of animated cartoons for the distributing company.

Director Ralph Ceder has started work with Alberta Vaughn, Larry Kent, Kit Guard and Al Cook on the third episode of "The Adventures of Mazie". This episode is titled, "Or What Have You." There are twelve episodes in the series, which ran as short stories in Top Notch Magazine. Nell Martin is author of the stories and they are being continuitized by Doris Anderson.

Work on "Fighting Hearts," another series, is also under way. These stories are being written especially for the company by Sam Hellman, well known humorist. Larry Kent will play the male lead in these new comedies.

Joe Rock units are producing two series of twenty-six comedies for F.B.O. The first two of the Standard Fat Men series, called "Tailoring" and "Three Wise Goofs" are already completed. They feature Fat Karr, Tiny Alexander and Kewpie Ross, three of the fattest men of the screen.

The first of the Blue Ribbon comedies, "Lame Brains," another Joe Rock contribution, featuring Alice Ardell, a young Parisian girl, has also been completed.

Walter Lantz of the Bray studios has finished two of the twenty-six cartoons he is scheduled to produce. The first of these a Dinky Doodle cartoon is called "The Bad Man," and the second is an Unnatural History cartoon called "How the Elephant Got His Trunk."

Kinograms Feat Stirs Chicago

News Reel Shows Pictures of Crowds Entering Diversey at Opening Performance of New House

VIEWS of the crowds entering the new Diversey Theatre, in Chicago, were shown on the screen at the opening performance of that house in a special film made in record time by Kinograms, Educational's news reel. Spectators were astonished to see flashed on the screen pictures of themselves entering the theatre just an hour and five minutes previously, the reel having been photographed, developed, printed and titled in time for screening before the first performance had been completed.

The remarkable feat, which is believed to set a record for fast developing and printing, was accomplished by Kinograms as part of its free service to Mr. Asher Levy, manager of the Diversey Theatre, which is a unit of the Orpheum Circuit.

Though several surprise events were prepared for the opening of the theatre, the Kinograms stunt created the greatest comment and applause. The special reel showed exterior views of the theatre with the crowds collecting on the sidewalks and filing into the lobby. As few of the patrons noticed the news cameraman taking the scenes, the pictures came as a great surprise to the bulk of the spectators, who, midway through the performance, witnessed the pictures of the formal opening.

The following day Mr. Dave Lubin, of the Chicago Educational Exchange, received the following letter from Mr. Levy:

"We have only the highest praise to offer for your services at the opening of our new Diversey Theatre, Chicago, when the motion pictures showing the first audience enter the theatre were projected on the screen one hour and five minutes after being taken. It was a remarkable feat in service and workmanship."

Great credit, it is declared, is also due to the Rothacker Laboratory staff, who aided the Kinograms men. Special developing, printing and drying crews were placed at the disposal of the cameramen and orders given to push the film through in record time.

World Cartoonist Signed by Educational

Education-Mermaid Comedies has signed Charles Gordon Saxton, formerly a cartoonist on the New York World, to a contract as gag man. He is now at the new Educational studios in Los Angeles. Saxton was attached to the World for two years and his cartoons attracted wide attention.

Helen Foster Given Lead With Lupino Lane

Helen Foster will play the leading feminine role opposite Lupino Lane in that star's next comedy for Educational. Miss Foster was formerly with Educational-Tuxedo comedies as leading lady with Johnny Arthur.

"Play Ball" Exploited in "Movie Season" Parade

Though presented on the same bill with a feature picture, the Pathe serial "Play Ball" was given the lion's share of the publicity and exploitation by Loew's Regent Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., during the week of August 17th. Sydney J. Gates, manager of the house, used special newspaper advertising and in addition exploited the McGraw episode film by means of a float in the Regent's Greater Movie Season parade.

The float, mounted on a motor truck, featured a huge baseball made of canvas and inscribed with suitable advertising lines. Also there was a newspaper tieup with the Harrisburg Telegraph, in which "Play Ball" was featured.

Tolhurst Making Series for Pathe

Under the title of "The Magic Eye," Louis H. Tolhurst, noted scientist is making a series of cinema-microscopic studies of the most minute of living creatures for release through Pathe. The first of these will be a feature of Pathe Review No. 39 released in September.

"Seeing Things," is the title of the first Tolhurst release. In this subject various objects handled in everyday life are placed under the magic lens and shown in all-revealing detail. "Sun Power," demonstrating the sun as a fountain of all energy, is the title of the second release. "Walking on Water," the third subject, shows in close-ups how skating bugs and other tiny insects skim over the surface of the water.

Bryan Foy Will Direct Fox Comedy

Bryan Foy, son of Eddie Foy, and Fox comedy director is busy preparing a story which he will direct as a two-reeler. He has just been assisting Victor Schertzinger with the comedy situations in "Thunder Mountain."

F. B. O. Filming Second of "Mazie" Series

Alberta Vaughn is making the second episode in the "Mazie" series of two reel comedies at the F. B. O. studios in Hollywood. The picture is being made under the direction of Ralph Ceder.

"Every Comedy a Feature" is White Slogan

"EVERY comedy a feature production," is to be the slogan of Jack White Productions this year. The product is to be released through Educational. White declares there has been too much discrimination in the use of the word "feature" in its application to the longest picture on the exhibitor's program regardless of its quality or entertainment value.

"More footage does not make a feature," says White. "This theory was exploded two years ago at the time when directors were making subjects in ten and twelve reels. A feature is the outstanding item of the program whether it is in one, two or ten reels and our pictures are all going to be features."

Try Short Subject Programs

Cleveland Circuit Experimenting With "All Komedy Carnival"—Big Drive Announces Event

SCOVILLE ESSICK and Reiff are the first local circuit managers to give the all-short-subject-program a try out in Cleveland. They have arranged to offer a program of this sort at their Sunbeam theatre Wednesday, September 9th. If it works out as well as it is expected to do, then the policy will be introduced generally throughout the circuit.

The first program of short subjects to be offered will consist of ten reels of entertainment, and will be made up of the following: "Shooting Injuns" 2-reel Gang Comedy; "Black Hand Blues," 2-reel Spat Family Comedy; "Honey Moon Hardships," 2-reel Sennett comedy; "Daddy Goes a-Grunting," 2-reel Tryon comedy; and "All Night Long," a 2-reel Langdon comedy.

In order to introduce this program, Messrs. Scoville Essick and Reiff have draped their entire marquee with a banner announcing "All Komedy Carnival." They have been running slides several weeks in advance. Banners, with the names of the comedies, the names and pictures of the stars, have been prominently hung in the theatre lobby and five sets of photos on each comedy have been conspicuously placed outside the theatre on display frames. They are going after the comedy business in a big way, and big results are expected.

The use of the all short subjects program is gaining in popularity among the exhibitors in the Cleveland territory, where several houses have been using these bills as regular attractions for some time and others recently have reported favorable results from experiments with the idea.

Among the theatres in the territory which give the short subjects an equal break with the features in the advertising and exploitation is the Princess at Toledo. The house is managed by LeBolt and Brady who for a long while have followed the practice of dividing their newspaper advertising space equally between the feature and the short films of their programs. Also, their lobby displays include photographs of the comedy stars and the comedy pictures. Their outside frame displays carry comedy as well as feature advertising.

As a result of this policy, their business is fairly staple. Their patrons have been educated to size up a program as a whole instead of concentrating their entire attention on the feature attraction. The Princess theatre has played Educational comedies every week for four years without a single interruption.

La Mont Named to Direct Lupino Lane

Jack White, director-general in charge of production at the Educational studios, has assigned Charles La Mont to direct the second Educational-Lupino Lane comedy to be made for Educational. La Mont is one of the youngest directors in the industry.

News Reels Are Showing Big Gains Abroad

THE news reel is coming into its own abroad, according to a letter just received by E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Films, from Forrest Izard, managing editor of Kinograms News Reel.

Izard, who has been in England, France, and Italy for several weeks writes in part as follows:

"I was very much gratified to find that at last the news reel seems to be coming into its own in European countries. On my last trip here five years ago I found that the exhibitor looked upon the news reel as somewhat of a necessary nuisance. Two hundred feet was then the average length, and the pictures were either cut so short as to be flashes, or the photography poor.

"Now, however, I find a great improvement. In some of the English houses I discovered combination reels such as are made up in our Broadway and other big houses throughout America. Also in France there was marked improvement shown, and in my talks to several exhibitors I found that they are finally beginning to realize the intense interest attached to this product of our industry."

Hamilton Will Appear in "Straight" Makeup

Lloyd Hamilton will be seen in a "straight" makeup for the first time in twelve years in a new Education-Hamilton comedy now in production on the west coast. The comedian will play two characters. He will be seen in his regulation makeup in one, and as he would appear off the screen in the other. The production is being made under the direction of William Goodrich.

New Stage Erected for the Educational

An additional stage is being erected at the Educational studio in Los Angeles where the Lupino Lane, Hamilton, Mermaid, Tuxedo, Juvenile and Cameo Comedies are being made for release through Educational. The new stage occupies the second floor of the building.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"No Father to Guide Him"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

A COMEDY with a sob-story plot about a father who is separated from his wife and child because of too-much-mother-in-law, serves as the current vehicle for Charlie Chase. The director and the author and the star aimed high enough, that is evident in several neatly done scenes, but the piece missed fire and so the two reels become more successful as serious sentimental fare than as comedy.

"No Father To Guide Him" lacks laughs. On the other hand it cannot be classed as dull, because there is some sentimental appeal to the situations and the characters are sympathetic. Moreover, the acting is good and the production up to the rather high standard of the Hal Roach Studios.

Sincerity and a certain amount of intelligence in the treatment of the play save the picture from failure. The action is slow and there is not sufficient incident to carry the story through two reels, but here and there the plot comes to the rescue and the flagging interest picks up.

Chase enacts his role with the easy, somewhat restrained grace which is winning him popularity as a screen farceur. The main support is rendered by Mickey Bennett, a boy actor possessing a box of tricks and a screen deportment somewhat beyond his years. Josephine Crowell, Duke Kahanamoku, famous aquatic star who gives a stirring exhibition of swimming, Kathrine Grant, and Leo Willis make up the balance of the cast.

"No Father To Guide Him" is not funny nor is its action stirring, though it may prove moderately entertaining to the bulk of the screen fans.

The Cast

The Milkman.....Charlie Chase
His Son.....Mickey Bennett
His Wife.....Katherine Grant
Mother-In-Law.....Josephine Crowell
A Hal Roach production. Directed by Leo McCarey.

The Story.—A poor but honest milkman is driven from his wife and child by his tyrannical mother-in-law. He plans to kidnap the boy, who is willing. To defeat his purpose the mother-in-law engages a detective to guard the boy. But Charlie spirits his son away and go to the beach for a swim, where the father is so buffeted by the waves that he loses his bathing suit. While trying to find a bathing suit for his father the boy is taken by the detective, but the father finally gets a barrel to cover his nakedness and takes up with the party. He has the mother-in-law arrested and there follows a family reunion.

Summary.—Lacks comedy, incident and humor, but may succeed as passable entertainment on strength of likeable characters and an appealing play in which a sentimental plot is presented in the farce mood and brightened by moments of slapstick action.

"Ko-Ko Nuts"

(Red Seal—One Reel)

MAX FLEISCHER'S "Out-of-the-Inkwell" cartoon characters retain their interest remarkably well, or rather the devices by which the artist combines cartoons with actual photography continue to amaze and astonish the spectator because of the mechanical ingenuity involved in the process. At any rate the clown and the dog which assume their forms from the fluid in the inkwell have the quality to hold the interest of the spectator. Their adventure in this reel is concerned with the happenings in a lunatic asylum—a place we would not call the most felicitous setting for comedy. However, there are some humorous moments and there are many extraordinary animated effects to sustain the interest and give the reel a rating as first-class cartoon comedy.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"Perils of the Wild"

(Adventure Serial-Universal—First Three Episodes)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

PIRATES, powder and sinking ships—not forgetting the rum and the gold. They are all in the picture and the younger element should fairly eat this one up. Also, a goodly portion of the grown-ups will probably enjoy it if they haven't too sharp an eye for detail. Right here, this reviewer can't help mentioning a most remarkable vividly striped shirt that is worn by the hero, Joe Bonomo. This shirt goes thru weeks of sailing, several terrific fights, is shipwrecked and emerges later on in perfect condition, with the starch still in the collar. It would not have been so noticeable but for its blazer pattern.

The first three episodes reviewed and those to follow, deal with the adventures of the Swiss Family Robinson, that old, impossible, but ever interesting story. After a free for all fight in a "Pub" in Liverpool, in the process of getting a crew together, the Family set sail with a cargo of flint-locks and gun powder and unknowingly, with a pirate crew. There is also another passenger, Emily Montrose, who develops as the heroine. As the ship nears the pirate's base, the ship is seized by the crew. A heavy sea and storm follow and the pirates thinking the ship doomed abandon it and row their boat to a tropical island, their headquarters. The Swiss Family, later on, land on the other side of the island, thinking it uninhabited except for the well mannered lions, leopards, monkeys, alligators, etc.

The cast is good and Joe Bonomo, well known as a "strong man" is given plenty of opportunities to demonstrate his remarkable strength. Margaret Quimby, as Emily Montrose, is very attractive and carries her part well. Jack Mower, as the wayward son and pirate chief also does good work. The crew are about as hard boiled looking lot of pirates that any one could want.

The Cast

Joe Bonomo, Margaret Quimby, Jack Mower, Alfred Allen, Eva Gordon, Francis Irwin, Howard Enstedt, Jack Murphy, William Dyer, Albert Prisco, Fannie Warren, John Wallace, James Welsh and Phil Ford.

An Adventure-Universal-Serial. Directed by Francis Ford.

The Story.—The Swiss Family Robinson with Emily Montrose as passenger, sail for Australia with a cargo of gunpowder. Capt. William Robinson in command, Sir Charles Leicester, wayward son, sea rover and pirate chief is also aboard. He and Frederick Robinson are rivals for Emily's hand. During a storm a fire starts near the powder. Sir Charles and the crew take over the command of the ship. In the hold, Frederick is striving to keep the kegs from the flames. The ship founders, and the pirates abandon ship. After a calm the Robinsons make their way to a distant island. The island is the pirate's base and inhabited by followers of Sir Charles. The Swiss Family set up a tent and prepare to adjust themselves to their new home. The adventures that follow are many.

Summary.—A fast moving serial with a good cast, fairly well directed and excellently photographed. It should be good entertainment for audiences that like to follow serials.

"Soup to Nuts"

Educational-Christie—Two Reels

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

AFTER a bad start this Christie comedy featuring Neal Burns works up to a hilarious finish and should be good for laughs and plenty of them in any man's theatre. Burns, Gale Henry and William Irving are fine comedy troupers and with the proper material can be depended upon to register fine performances. Here they have the material, essentially funny situations which William Watson, the director, has built up splendidly.

Especially amusing is the situation which shows Irving, ailing and closed in a room in a burning building, thinking the while that the digestive disturbance from which he suffers must be terribly bad because he has such a fever.

The plot is of a stock variety in the farce catalogue. A wife makes her husband masquerade as the butler while she allows her former sweetheart to act the role of husband in order to beguile her critical sister, a week-end visitor. Up to the time Burns, a bungling butler, cuts up the soap and puts it into the soup for toasted cubes of bread, there is not much to rave over in the play. But from that on things get sprightly and diverting. The fire scenes, with the excitement growing out of them, are corking and have been pointed up with a quantity of clever gags. "Soup to Nuts" is a clean, amusing picture—one that can be exploited and banked upon to satisfy.

The Cast

Henry.....Neal Burns
Sally.....Gale Henry
Belle.....Vera Steadman
The Cook.....Natalie Joyce
The Rival.....William Irving

The Story.—Henry is expecting the new cook and when Sally, his wife's sister, appears, he immediately shows her the kitchen and orders her to serve food. When Henry's wife learns this she fears to present him as her husband, commands him to masquerade as the butler and calls in a friend to pose as her husband. The "butler" puts soap into the soup with the result that the sister-in-law and the other man become ill. When fire breaks out in the house the sister-in-law is trapped in her room and Bill thinks the terrible heat he feels is the result of fever from his illness. The fire brings on a climax in which the fire department performs and a series of hilarious gags are introduced.

Summary.—A clean, highly diverting farce. It begins slowly but works up to a speedy and funny finish. Capital performances are given by Neal Burns, Vera Steadman, Gale Henry and William Irving. It is a picture which should register a hit everywhere.

"Marvels of Motion"

(Red Seal—One Reel)

THIS is issue "D" in the series of novelty reels produced by the Fleischer-Novagraph-Process. The slow motion camera is effectively used in depicting the feats of hurdling horses, a champion broad jumper, and other experiments in motion. The stop-motion is also used to show how the broad jumper accomplishes his long-distance leaps and to analyze the splash caused by dropping a lump of sugar into a glass of milk—a very interesting item, this latter. By means of reverse action the accidents occurring when a horse stumbles on a hurdle and throws its rider are corrected, the rider swinging back into the saddle and the mound going backwards over the hurdle. It is a novel and highly interesting reel.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"The Klynick"
(Davis Dist. Div.—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

DUE to the numerous "gags" and the fast tempo at which the director has kept the action, this number of the "Hey Fellas" two-reelers manages to register a few laughs though the basic idea behind this series lacks originality. It's a pretty good bet for the kiddies but the grown-ups will probably prove laugh-proof through most of the scenes.

The scenes, in the beginning, deal with the efforts of one of the "crowd" to escape taking his medicine at the hospital in which he is incarcerated owing to a pronounced fondness for green apples which, however, fail to reciprocate his affection. His friends visit him and a pillow fight results. He escapes from the hospital and goes into consultation with the "crowd" the upshot being the opening of a "hospital" at which they experiment with dummies until a human prospect shows up. He is put through all the tortures of the Middle Ages by the "staff" in an effort to find some disease in his system and when he protests they prescribe mud baths from which he escapes after much trouble.

The most laughable bits of business are introduced in the last sequences in which the victim, fleeing from his persecutors, runs into a combination laundry shop and fireworks manufacturing plant and, being hot and dry, drinks a glass of nitro-glycerine and thereafter succeeds in putting fire to everything he breathes on.

Story by King Benedict and Clarence Hennecke.
Directed by Mark Goldaine.

The Story.—Mickey, convalescing in a hospital from a tummyache brought on by an overfondness for green apples is visited by his pals who, after much roughhousing, enable him to escape. They get together and start a hospital of their own which they operate with indifferent success until a live victim turns up. They "go to work" on him until he escapes and gets into a fireworks manufacturing plant where he drinks a glass of nitro-glycerine, immediately after which he is seized with a fit of sneezing which proves a combustible commodity as everything in sight goes up in a blaze. He goes back to the "hospital" and the "staff," using a stomach pump, succeeds in drawing off the explosive but it drops and scatters the gang.

Summary.—A not very amusing comedy as a whole but there are a number of ingenious "gags" introduced which make a good bid for laughter. It should prove a good bet for the children. But it is doubtful whether the older folks will get much out of it.

"Barrier Busters"
(Pathe—One Reel)

WOMAN'S invasion of the field of the strenuous sports such as hurdling, socker, high-jumping, weight-throwing, etc., is the topic of this Grantland Rice Sportlight reel. It shows many actionful scenes, the major portion of which were made at a girl's school, and most of which, if memory serves, were presented in a previous issue of this series. But here is the unquestionable evidence of actual pictures to prove that the girls are acquiring physique and athletic skill which will put them into competition some day with the boys on the cinder-path and in the field.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"Pleasure Bent"
Universal—One Reel

CHARLES PUFFY registers an amusing performance as the central figure in this comedy about a woman who engages a detective to obtain evidence to be used in a divorce action. The wife explains that her husband is stepping out with fat ladies, so Puffy, the janitor of the building, is pressed into service to masquerade as a woman. He flirts with the husband and after some exciting adventures he and the detective learn that the woman has changed her mind about divorce. Not only that but the wife vents her ire on the "woman," with the result that Puffy takes another "drubbing." It is a good comedy, lively and supplied with some sure-fire laughs.—T. C. KENNEDY

"Stranded"
Universal-Century—Two Reels

EDNA MARIAN is the star of this Century offering, a frank piece of slap-stick in which she appears as the driver of the motor bus for a small-town hotel, as well as serving in the capacity of cook and waitress. The action is concerned with the doin's at the hotel when a stranded theatrical troupe signs up for accommodations.

The actors and chorines enjoy their experience, though they have no intention of paying the bill, a responsibility which they ultimately try to avoid but for which they are stripped of their luggage by the proprietor and the blond bus driver.

Miss Marion is given opportunity to display some of the dance steps she does so well and has the assistance of some gags which, though rather mechanical, are moderately successful in creating amusement.

The picture should go well in the average house. There is action and there are some moments of the broad slapstick sort which seem always "in place" in the two reelers.

The Cast

The Girl .....Edna Marion

The Story.—Rival bus drivers vie with each other over getting a theatrical troup, stranded at the depot, into their conveyances. The girl wins and takes the troup to the hotel where she works as cook, floor clerk and char-woman as well. The rehearsals of the chorus in an upstairs room attracts a crowd, for it is a dress, or mayhap an undress rehearsal. At any rate things go swimmingly until the troupe seeks to depart without paying the bill, whereat there is a lively chase in which the actors are stripped of their valuable luggage in satisfaction of the hotel's claim.

Summary.—A slapstick comedy with some moderately amusing gags and a pleasant performance by Edna Marion as a slavey at a small-town hotel.

"Barnyard Follies"
(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS reel in the "Aesop's Film Fables" series produced by Paul Terry back-tracks over some former successful ground in cartoon comedy. The incongruous and the absurd is exploited for some rather amusing action concerning the show put on by the animals. A hippo does a toe dance and a very fat pig does a high dive from a spring board, but the greater part of the reel is devoted to showing the cute tricks employed by the gate-crashers, a familiar field but one which retains much good comedy material for the creator of animated cartoons. —T. C. KENNEDY.

"Props and the Spirits"
Educational—One Reel

THE further adventures of Earl Hurd's cartoon characters are followed in this "Pen and Ink Vaudeville" reel. There are two good gags, but both of them are overdrawn. However there is action here and the stunt in which the stage "prop" used a "stop and go" sign to silence the actors when they got too excited and start them off again on their conversation when he had assimilated what had been said so far. It it a fair to middlin' cartoon comedy.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"The Party"
Universal—One Reel

THIS is a comedy o fmix-ups with Arthur Lake featured as the youth whose list of customers for the vanity cases he is selling is used as the invitation list for the party his parents are giving him. As the youth has sold most of his product in the slums the party is patronized by a hard-boiled gang, which tears loose when the "eats" are served and starts a mild riot later. All this horrifies the parents and will amuse the screen patrons who like their comedy handed out in generous doses of obviousness. The climax, a fight with furniture being wrecked and features flattened, saves the reel from dullness.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"Dynamite's Daughter"
Universal—Two Reels
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

UNIVERSAL has found a way to give new life and vivacity to the hard ridin' scenes in western dramas. It is a simple formula—the studio solons merely draft Josie Sedgwick for the job and there you have it. Miss Sedgwick for screen purposes at least and we suspect for all practical purposes as well, can ride a hoss with the best of 'em, man or woman. She is a real queen of the saddle. Also she can put the vigor and power requisite to its success into the action typical of the short western melodrama.

Here is a two-reel western that should appeal to all the followers of this type of screen play. It has dash, the dash of fleet bronchs running at top speed across the plains, over the twisting trails of the mountains and taking in an easy leap the ditches which cut across the narrow paths forming the inevitable "short cut" without which no western plot is complete.

Miss Sedgwick is seen as "Lightning" Smith, Dynamite Smith's daughter. She is the spiritual, moral and physical leader of the little mining camp, where she conducts a saloon. There is a "Bill Hart" purpose and determination about "Lightning." This proves to be a vow that she will get the man who betrayed her sister before she will even think of her own happiness. A little boy, the son of the mine foreman, is her friend, and for his sake she refuses to kill the foreman when he proves to be the man who betrayed her sister. But the villain gets his deserts—he tumbles over the cliff.

The Cast

"Lightning" .....Josie Sedgwick

The Story.—A western melodrama concerned with a girl who runs a saloon, which she has inherited from her father. She has sworn to "get" the man who betrayed her sister. When the mine workers threaten to kill the foreman because he has withheld their pay, "Lightning" persuades them to be calm, but she is the first to set out after the crooked foreman when he tries to escape, after promising her he would pay off the boys. In his mad dash for freedom, the foreman is killed. He proves to be the man who deserted her sister and so "Lightning's" mission is filled and she is free to marry Bud, her handsome suitor.

Summary.—A western melodrama which has all the action and dash of the best of its kind, though the leading role and the assignment of the hard riding and heroism has been entrusted to a woman—Josie Sedgwick. She does her part splendidly. It should appeal strongly to the confirmed admirers of short western dramas.

(Davis Distributing Division—4950 Feet)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

FEATURED by some excellent settings, good performances by the principals and fast action, this production should prove popular with the fans of the smaller communities. Though having a somewhat slender story the numerous fight scenes, the desert "shots," the acting of Peggy O'Day and the rest of the cast will more than suffice to hold the interest of the spectator from beginning to end. This, the first of a series of detective yarns starring Miss O'Day, reveals her in the role of a female detective; she is assigned the task of recovering some jewels from an Eastern potentate and the way she goes about accomplishing her work proves an hour's entertainment.

THEME. Detective melodrama in which female detective is assigned task of recovering stolen jewels.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The desert scenes. The acting of the cast especially the star. The scenes in the home of Abdullah. The numerous fight scenes both aboard the ship and in the villian's home. The high grade settings.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up star. Hold matinee admitting free all girls named Peggy. Have masked girl travel about town in auto bearing banner reading "I Am Peggy of the Secret Service."

SUMMARY. A detective story that should get over well with most fans. Has slight story but incident and action help hold the interest. It is well mounted and directed.

THE CAST

Peggy	Peggy O'Day
Frank Jordan	W. H. Ryno
Spike Hennessy	Clarence Sherwood
Buck Brice	Dan Peterson
Mahmoud el Akem	Richard Neill
Hal Tracey	Eddie Phillips
Abdullah	V. L. Barnes
Abdullah's favorite wife	Ethel Childers

Produced by S. Cole. Story by Finis Fox. Directed by J. P. McGowan. Photographed by Bob Cline.

SYNOPSIS. Peggy, female detective, is assigned task of recovering stolen jewels from Abdullah, Algerian potentate. With the help of two assistants and her fiance she traps him and his cohorts but he eludes her and goes to his nephew's home. She follows him and after a series of exciting adventures succeeds in getting the jewels.

Peggy O'Day

Peggy of the Secret Service (Davis Dist. Div.)

PRESS NOTICE

BRINGING to the screen a thrilling drama based on the life of a Secret Service operator "Peggy of the Secret Service" will be on the screen of the ——— theatre on ———. It is the first of a series starring winsome Peggy O'Day who will be remembered for some excellent characterizations in productions that proved popular. It is a colorful story combining good acting and some wonderful photography.

A brilliant cast of well known players support Miss O'Day in this stirring drama including Richard Neill, W. H. Ryno, V. L. Barnes and Ethel Childers. The outstanding thrill of the picture occurs in the climax when a terrific fight is staged between the forces of law and order and the thieves.

CATCH LINES

She postponed marriage for a life of service. Though beset by danger, may even death, at every step, she fought her way through.

The Fighting Cub

(Truart—6000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A MELODRAMA alive with human interest and deft sympathetic touches, clean wholesome and remarkably well adapted for exhibitors catering to the family trade. It will make an especial hit with the boys, who will be delighted with the work of Wesley Barry, the juvenile hero, who starts off as a copy kid on a newspaper, cherishes ambitions to rise in the profession, becomes a cub reporter and finally a star man on the sheet. Director Paul Hurst has done a remarkably good job here, putting over the thrills with a practiced hand and never passing an opportunity to make his young hero look like the real goods.

THEME. Melodrama of boy who wants to become a reporter and achieves his desire after passing through a medley of adventures.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The mother interest. Scene where Barry obtains admission to the presence of the big boss and gets interview with him.

DRAWING POWER. Should do capital business wherever family trade is chiefly sought for, has unfailing lure for juvenile patrons.

SUMMARY. Melodrama with kid hero and excellent mingling of humor and pathos, has several big punch situations and works up to satisfactory climax. Will make great impression on boys.

THE CAST

Tommy O'Toole	Wesley Barry
Jack Turner	Pat O'Malley
Maggie O'Toole	Mary Carr
J. William Toler	George Fawcett
Jane Toler	Mildred Harris
Margie Toler	Ann May
Spike Gory	Stuart Holmes
Detective Chief	Wilfred Lucas

Author, Adele Buffington. Directed by Paul Hurst.

SYNOPSIS. Tommy O'Toole, copy boy on the News, hears the editor assign police reporter to investigate a big jewelry robbery. Tommy asks for a chance at reporting and is told in jest he can have a job if he gets an interview with Toler, big political boss. He is thrown out of the Toler mansion by the butler, but scrapes acquaintance with Toler's youngest daughter and through her gets to see the father. The result is that he gets a job as reporter. Later he discovers the den of the Owls, the gang which stole the jewels. After a variety of thrilling adventures during which he is wounded by a bullet, he rounds up the thieves, proves the police reporter to be a crook, gets back the loot and is appointed star man on the paper.

Wesley Barry

The Fighting Cub (Truart)

PRESS NOTICE

"THE FIGHTING CUB" a stirring melodramatic story of the rise of a young copy boy on a big newspaper to the position of star reporter, comes to the ——— theatre on ———. Wesley Barry fills the role of the young hero and, according to the critics has never appeared to better advantage than in this thrilling, yet sympathetic tale of the lad who loves his mother and makes good.

Among the prominent players in support are such popular screen figures as Pat O'Malley, Mary Carr, George Fawcett, Mildred Harris, Walter Long, Ann May, Stuart Holmes, Wilfred Lucas, Otto Lederer and George Kuwa.

CATCH LINES

Romance and thrills in a corking melodrama of newspaper life.

A copy boy who had ambitions to advance in his profession and became star reporter after he ran down a gang of jewel thieves.

His love for his mother helped this lad to overcome all obstacles and makes himself famous.

The Man Who Found Himself

(Paramount—7168 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

WHEN plenty of sympathy is worked up for a hero who also happens to be a great screen favorite there's not much risk in wagering that the film under consideration is sure to draw well at the box office. So Tom Meighan's latest vehicle may safely be listed as a money-getter, although the story, even with the prestige of Booth Tarkington's name as author, doesn't stand out as a particularly strong concoction. But it moves tolerably fast, wins unlimited pity for the self-sacrificing hero who goes to jail to shield a weak, erring brother, and as the martyr is righted in the end and gets the girl he loves, the average fan, as well as Mr. Meighan's countless admirers, will accept it as satisfactory entertainment.

THEME. Heart interest drama in which loyal hero goes to jail to cover up guilt of weak brother, temporarily loses his sweetheart, but regains her, and decides not to carryout intended scheme of revenge.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fine photography. Realistic scenes in Sing Sing prison. Episode where hero, Tom Macauley escapes from jail and faces the man who tricked him on the night of latter's marriage to girl Tom loves. The revenge that misses fire and happy finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Tom Meighan and Virginia Valli. Mention Booth Tarkington as author. Tell patrons Sing Sing scenes are genuine.

DRAWING POWER. A good attraction for any kind of house, large or small.

SUMMARY. A picture of the kind the public like to see Meighan starred in. Plot not of very original type, but spreads the sympathy salve heavily on hero and heroine and hits the heart target fairly.

THE CAST

Tom Macauley ..... Thomas Meighan
Nora Brooks ..... Virginia Valli
Lon Morris ..... Frank Morgan
Edwin Macauley, Jr. ..... Charles Stevenson
Evelyn Corning ..... Julia Hoyt
Mrs. Macauley, Jr. ..... Lynn Fontanne

Author, Booth Tarkington. Scenario by Tom J. Geraghty. Director, Alfred E. Green.

SYNOPSIS. Tom Macauley and his younger brother Edwin are directors in their father's bank. Edwin speculates with bank's money, loses, and Lon Morris a supposed friend of the brothers, plots successfully to have Tom sent to jail for his brother's crime. Morris marries Nora, but is confronted on his wedding night and beaten by Tom, who, having escaped, gives himself up again and is later released. Morris, now in control of the bank, is the object of Tom's revenge, but he gives it up when he learns Nora has been true to him and tricked by Morris. Latter, short in his accounts, is shot and killed by watchman when about to loot bank. Tom and Nora are wed.

PRESS NOTICE

A TREAT for the patrons of the ——— theatre is promised on ——— when the ever popular Tom Meighan's latest production, "The Man Who Found Himself" will be presented. This is a story of compelling heart interest, with Tom Meighan in the role of a man who accepts a prison sentence to shield his guilty younger brother, but is later cleared and marries the girl who has remained faithful to him.

Mr. Meighan's work in this picture received unlimited praise from the critics, as did that of Virginia Valli, who appears in the heroine role. The prison scenes were taken in Sing Sing and are remarkable for their grim realism.

CATCH LINES

Does the world ever forgive the man with a prison record? See Thomas Meighan in "The Man Who Found Himself."

The Girl Who Wouldn't Work

(B. P. Schulberg—5979 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

WHILE the sex problem enters into this picture, director Marcel DeSano has handled it with such extreme delicacy and good judgment that it can safely be listed as a first-class production with strong general audience appeal. It represents Mr. DeSano's initial bid for fame in the directorial field and the hit he scores on this occasion speaks well for his future prospects. The action flows smoothly, briskly and there isn't an inch of padding in evidence, with the all-important human interest angle always predominant and a big thrill punch put over by the murder episode and hero's assumption of guilt from generous motives.

THEME. The romance of a girl department store clerk who wanted to be an actress, and wealthy young clubman; murder episode and melodramatic climax.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Clever acting of principals and support. First meeting of Mary Hale and Gordon Kent. Scene where she leaves home, joins Kent and is ousted from latter's apartments by angry rival.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost as a romance in which young working girl and wealthy admirer figure, stress love interest, the murder, hero's self-sacrifice and sunshine ending.

DRAWING POWER. Suited to needs of big and little houses, or any type of audience. Properly exploited, ought to do fine business.

SUMMARY. Picture has wide appeal, as it embraces romance, thrills and sympathetic lure. Presents sex problem, but so well handled as not to give offense. Skillfully directed and cleverly acted. Strong cast.

THE CAST

Gordon Kent ..... Lionel Barrymore
Mary Hale ..... Marguerite de la Motte
William Hale ..... Henry B. Walthall
Greta Verlaine ..... Lilyan Tashman
William Norworth ..... Forrest Stanley
District Attorney ..... Winter Hall
The Rounder ..... Thomas Ricketts

Author, Gertie D. Wentworth James. Adapted by Lois Hutchinson. Directed by Marcel DeSano.

SYNOPSIS. Mary Hale, department store clerk, wearying of her hard work and dull fiance, indulges in flirtation with wealthy clubman, Gordon Kent. Loses her job, is taken about by Kent and falls in love with him. Keeping late hours, she quarrels with her father and leaves home, Kent gives her shelter in his apartment, while he stays at club. Greta Verlaine, actress and former flame of Kent's, expels Mary. Latter's father, believing the worst, comes to apartment, shoots and kills Greta in mistake for supposedly erring daughter. To protect Mary's reputation, Kent gives himself up as the guilty man. Hale confesses, is tried but freed after three jury disagreements. Kent has gone broke, having spent fortune in Hale's defense, but wins Mary and settles down to work for his wife.

The Girl Who Wouldn't Work
(B. P. Schulberg)
PRESS NOTICE

LIONEL BARRYMORE and Marguerite de la Motte head the superb cast of "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work," which will be the chief attraction at the ——— theatre on ———.

It is a fascinating romance of a department store girl who falls in love with a wealthy young clubman, who at first merely flirts with, but learns to appreciate her, after they both pass through the fires of affliction. The story is rich in thrills and deep human interest. Besides the principals, such well known players as Henry B. Walthall, Lilyan Tashman, Forrest Stanley, Winter Hall and Thomas Ricketts, are seen in support.

CATCH LINES

She hated work, longed for wealth, captured a rich lover, but missed happiness until she was poor again.

The romance of a department store girl who wanted to be wealthy, and a clubman who wanted to enjoy life.

The Isle of Hope

(F. B. O.—5800 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

ANOTHER of Richard Talmadge's whirlwind stunt films, stuffed to the limit with melodrama and comedy, as well as the breath-taking acrobatics in which this agile star always indulges. And in the later reels a fascinating mystery angle in which concealed pirate gold and life on a lonely island, with hero and heroine in the midst of perils, figure.

During the first half of the feature Mr. Talmadge is kept busy fighting aboard ship, climbing aloft with the activity of a monkey and swinging about the spars in his usual dare-devil style. The remainder shows less stunt stuff, but lots of melodramatic pep, with a satisfactory finish.

THEME. Fast stunt film with marine backgrounds, melodrama, comedy and mystery involved in search for concealed pirate treasure.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Good direction. Richard Talmadge's amazing stunt work. Fights aboard ship, the fire, wreck and landing on desert island. Scenes in old ruined castle. Comedy when Chink and negro cook are scared by skeletons. Heroine's capture by mutinous sailors, hero's scrap with mate. Discovery of gold.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Talmadge's wild stunts, his adventures on board ship, the wreck and melodramatic happenings on the island. Stress the big fight, storm effects and finding of the treasure.

DRAWING POWER. Wherever Talmadge is a favorite or fast melodrama and stunt work are in demand, this film is sure to please.

SUMMARY. A good Talmadge stunt picture, with rather more plot to it than usual. Possesses melodramatic swing, love interest and provides timely comedy.

THE CAST

Robert Mackay.....Richard Talmadge
Dorothy Duffy.....Helen Ferguson
Captain Duffy.....James Marcus
First Mate.....Bert Strong
Second Mate.....Howard Bell
Chinese Cook.....Eddie Gordon
Colored Cook.....George Reed

Author, James Bell Smith. Directed by Jack Nelson. Photographed by William Marshall and Jack Stevens.

SYNOPSIS. Bob Mackay, wealthy yachtsman, stows away aboard the Vulture for adventure's sake. Ship is commanded by Captain Duffy, sailing in search of gold hidden by ancient pirate. His stepdaughter, Dorothy, accompanies him. Bob and Dorothy fall in love. The crew mutiny and Duffy is killed. Ship takes fire and is wrecked. Bob and Dorothy land on island and find shelter in old ruined castle. Sailors who have escaped kidnap Dorothy. Bob pursues, whips giant mate in fight and carries her off. During storm lightning hits castle and exposes hidden treasure. Bob's friends from yacht club arrive and rescue him and his girl.

Richard Talmadge

The Isle of Hope (F. B. O.)

PRESS NOTICE

RICHARD TALMADGE, famous stunt star, in "The Isle of Hope," will be the leading attraction on the bill of the ——— theatre on ———. Besides showing Talmadge in the dare-devil feats for which he is justly renowned, this picture presents one of the most absorbing stories of wild adventure that has even been screened. There are fascinating marine backgrounds, a mutiny, a ship in flames, a wreck and landing on a deserted island and search for pirate gold.

No lover of exciting melodrama and romance can afford to miss this film, with its colorful atmosphere and endless succession of thrills. Helen Ferguson plays the pretty heroine,

CATCH LINES

Aerial acrobatics—mutiny aboard ship—terrific fighting—a vessel in flames—a wreck—pirate gold—Dick Talmadge in his most wonderful role.

Watch for the big thrill in "The Isle Of Hope," when a lightning bolt splits the ruined castle and exposes the hidden treasure.

Wreckage

(Banner—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Yawitz)

THERE is little in "Wreckage" to recommend it to first-run theatres, but sufficient melodramatic handling of a common place plot brings it to the level of good program entertainment. Throughout the picture is evidence of a director's strain to salvage-film values from a story that has been told a thousand and one times. Scott Dunlap does well in this respect and with the assistance of May Allison and Holmes Herbert will afford not-too-particular audiences a pleasant hour and a half.

THEME. Melodrama in which stormy seas, African jungles, and American vampires take a hand in the direction of a love affair.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. A well executed ocean storm and ship-wreck. An under-sea fight. Fight in the country home.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The one certain element of this production to please audiences is the ship-wreck. Play this up and they will not be disappointed. The melodrama should be emphasized and also the fact that the story is an adaptation of a well known novel, "Salvage."

DRAWING POWER. Holmes Herbert and May Allison are deserving of much credit for the successful aspect of the picture and their previous performances bring them to the light of deserved advertising.

SUMMARY. The exhibitor whose audiences are not too fastidious in their tastes for continuity and well-developed plot will do well to book "Wreckage."

CAST

Rene.....May Allison
Stuart Ames.....Holmes Herbert
Maurice Dysart.....John Miljan
Margot.....Rosemary Theby
Grant Demarest.....James Morrison

Author, Izola Forester. Directed by Scott Dunlap.

SYNOPSIS. Because of his knowledge of her selfishness, Dr. Stuart Ames attempts to put an end to her attentions to his best friend, Grant Demarest. Later that day Demarest is murdered and Ames is found in the apartment. The physician is acquitted by the coroner and embarks for the tropics. On board he meets Rene Jordon who is being followed by Maurice Dysart. In her father's cabin during a storm she sees Dysart in the act of robbing her father. The storm wrecks the ship and Dysart and Rene's father are apparently drowned. She is saved by Stuart and for three days are adrift together in a small boat. On her return to America she is a guest at the home of Margot and there meets a Count Bressing who in reality is Dysart in disguise. He continues his unwelcome attentions to the girl until Stuart returns from Africa, unable to stay away from the girl. A fight in Dysart's mountain cabin results in his being hurled over a cliff, but not before he had accidentally killed Margot in his battle with Ames. Margot confesses before her death that Demarest killed himself and thus clears all suspicion from Stuart, Rene and Stuart "are united and the wreckage of their lives salvaged."

PRESS NOTICE

"WRECKAGE," a screen adaptation of Izola Forester's novel, "Salvage" comes to the ——— Theatre next ——— It is a stirring melodrama of life and love that carries the audience on board a ship during one of the most realistic ship-wrecks ever staged.

The great scene presents the Pacific in anger, with a vessel going down. This shot is one of the finest ever caught by a camera. In order to make it, Ben Verschleiser, the producer, and Scott Dunlap, the director, took the entire cast into the Pacific on a small yacht fitted out to represent a liner. They sailed in the teeth of an ugly gale.

May Allison has the lead and is suported by Holmes Herbert, John Miljan, Rosemary Theby.

CATCH LINES

Love triumphs over intrigue and disaster in "Wreckage," the best sea story of the year.

A mighty drama of sea and society interwoven with an absorbing love story.

Hell's Highroad

(Producers Distributing Corp.—6084 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE luxurious atmosphere and magnificent settings always characteristic of Cecil De Mille productions are well to the fore in this picture, which was evidently made with a royal disregard for expense. The plot has nothing very new about it, but skilled direction and competent acting by principals and supporting cast carry it through to a triumphant finish. Also, the sub titles are excellent some extremely witty, others terse and forcible—all helping the action along amazingly. Leatrice Joy is a winsomely alluring heroine, Edmund Burns a capable hero and Robert Edeson scores a hit as Sanford Gillespie, the millionaire who seems to be able to control Wall Street stocks by a mere wave of his hand.

THEME. Heart interest drama, showing how poor girl with lover in humble circumstances makes use of wealthy admirer to make the young chap wealthy, ruin him later when she thinks he is false; but begins life all over again with him.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Judy's visit to New York to claim supposed fortune, which turns out a disappointment. Scene where she quarrels with Ronald, her lover and that in which she meets and fascinates millionaire.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost this as another Cecil De Mille production of wonderful beauty as regards settings and gown display. Mention the director. Play up the love interest and feature Leatrice Joy and Robert Edeson.

DRAWING POWER. Has general audience appeal, is is suitable for all classes of theatres.

SUMMARY. A good audience picture, has considerable heart appeal, is cleverly acted and sumptously mounted in the usual ornate Cecil De Mille style and well directed.

THE CAST

Judy Nichols.....Leatrice Joy
Ronald McKane.....Edmund Burns
Sanford Gillespie.....Robert Edeson
Anne Broderick.....Julia Faye
Dorothy Harmon.....Helene Sullivan

Author, Ernest Pascal. Directed by Rupert Julian.

SYNOPSIS. Ronald McKane comes to New York. Back in Chicago his sweetheart Judy Nichols dreams of wealth to come. She also journeys to New York to claim a supposed fortune, which turns out to be only a slim income. Refusing to face poverty with Ronald, she fascinates millionaire Gillespie and induces him to help the young fellow. Ronald makes money on the Stock Exchange and becomes entangled with wealthy Ann Broderick. In revenge Judy has Gillespie break Ronald. Latter seeks out Gillespie, finds Judy with him and is restrained by the millionaire from killing her. But Judy realizes her love for Ronald and they begin life anew.

Leatrice Joy

Hell's' Highroad. (Prod. Dis. Corp.)

PRESS NOTICE

IN point of magnificence of production and luxurious atmosphere, few films equal and none excel the Cecil De Mille picture, "Hell's Highroad," which will be shown at the ——— theatre on ———. Leatrice Joy is the star and gives a wonderful performance in a gripping story which deals with a girl's hungry desire for wealth and the manner in which she utilizes her beauty to attain her ends.

But in the finale she finds happiness along an altogether different road and settles down with an humble lover. Supporting Miss Joy in one of the finest roles of her career are those recognized screen favorites Robert Edeson, Edmund Burns, Julia Faye and Helene Sullivan.

The road to Hell is paved with good intentions. See "Hell's Highroad."

A drama of love that was sold with a check book and bought back with a pistol.

A Fool and His Money

THIS flaring melodrama ought to "go over the top" in great shape, so far as the fans who wanted undiluted romance and snappy action for their money are concerned, while the members of the high-brow brigade will probably view it with amused tolerance. It's one of those yarns with an Old World fictitious country setting, in which a young American hero performs sundry deeds of valor and wins a fortune and charming bride. But it is uncommonly well directed and hasn't a dull moment in it, a good hot weather attraction which is sure to swell box office receipts in certain localities.

Madge Bellamy is an attractive figure as the Countess heroine, William Haines fights, writes and makes love as only a film hero could do, Stuart Holmes has one of those villain parts which suits him so well and Alma Bennett and Eugenie Besserer give excellent performances.

THEME. Romantic melodrama, with fictitious country setting, in which gallant young American aids and finally wins bride of noble birth.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fast action and colorful atmosphere. Hero's adventures in old castle. Scene where heroine escapes in aeroplane, while lover covers her getaway by holding narrow bridge at sword point against pursuers. The comedy moments.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can bill this as a cracking melodrama, full of fighting thrills, love interest and lively comedy. Play up the heroine's flight in a plane and the big scene where her lover is at sword's play on the bridge with the pursuing gang. Feature Madge Bellamy.

DRAWING POWER. An attraction which should make good in every respect at neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. A lively melodrama whirling along at top-speed throughout. Has unlimited love interest and effective comedy relief. Will please the average fan.

THE CAST

Countess Von Pless.....Madge Bellamy
John Smart.....William Haines
Count Von Pless.....Stuart Holmes
Annette Ritazi.....Alma Bennett
Mother.....Eugenie Besserer
Mrs. Schmick.....Carrie Clark Ward

Author, George Barr McCutcheon. Directed by Erle C. Kenton.

SYNOPSIS. John Smart, struggling American author, falls heir to a fortune and goes to country of Laupheim, where he has bought an old castle. He finds the beautiful Countess Von Pless in hiding there from her brutal husband and plans to help her out of the country, but is betrayed by a woman who had previously tried to vamp him. But the Countess escapes via aeroplane, while Smart, sword in hand fights off the Count and his men. He is wounded and the castle is confiscated by the authorities. Smart goes home broke, but his faithful servant whom he left behind, arrives with a great treasure he found in the castle and he weds the Countess.

Madge Bellamy

A Fool and His Money (Columbia Pictures)

PRESS NOTICE

THRILLS and romance reign supreme in "A Fool and His Money" which is scheduled as the main attraction at the ——— theatre on ———. It is a romance of the Graustark type, by the same author of that well-known novel—George Barr McCutcheon, in which a young American author buys an old castle in the country of Laupheim, finds a beautiful Countess hiding there from her unworthy husband, and assists her to escape in a plane, while he fights off her pursuers.

Madge Bellamy and William Haines are seen in the leading roles, supported by Stuart Holmes, Alma Bennett, Charles Conklin, Lon Poff, Carrie Clark Ward and Eugenie Besserer.

CATCH LINES

A beautiful girl as a fugitive from the law and a young author who brought her out of danger.

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

EXCELLENT atmosphere, ornate settings, love intrigue, thrills and bright comedy combine to make this film a reliable investment for the exhibitor. It has a little of everything in the lineup and there can be scant doubt as to its box office pulling power. Incidentally there's something for the ladies to rave over in the up-to-date Paris fashion creation as exemplified by the gowns adorning the persons of Greta Nissen, Lillian Leighton and Edythe Chapman. Dramatic honors go to Miss Nissen, who gives a really wonderful performance in the role of the impetuous Marie Dufrayne, Ricardo Cortez is the handsome chap who wins her after much double and triple-crossing generally. Cortez is pleasing and the support capital.

THEME. Romantic drama with comedy and thrill interpolations. French atmosphere, heroine has several suitors, but finally weds one who loved her in boyhood.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Gorgeous mounting. Clever work of Greta Nissen, Ricardo Cortez and Wallace Beery. Attractive gown display. Fight between Beery and Cortez.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Street ballyhoo with pair dressed as bride and groom carrying banners bearing picture title. Feature Miss Nissen and Cortez. Window tie-ups on all kinds of articles that a man can buy for wife.

DRAWING POWER. Picture has universal appeal, should do good business anywhere.

SUMMARY. Film has snappy action, abounds in romantic lure, crisp comedy and thrills. French atmosphere well developed. Acting, photography, settings, direction all of first-chop quality.

THE CAST

Raoul Melnotte.....Ricardo Cortez
Marie Dufrayne.....Greta Nissen
M. Glavis.....Wallace Beery
Marquis de Beaumont.....Raymond Hatton
Mother Dufrayne.....Lillian Leighton
Mother Melnotte.....Edythe Chapman
Dumas Dufrayne.....Richard Arlen

Adapted from Edward Bulwer-Lytton's novel, "The Lady of Lyons" by Sada Cowan.

Director, Howard Higgins. Photographed by C. Edgar Schoenbaum.

SYNOPSIS. Raoul Melnotte returns to France from U. S., to woo his boyhood sweetheart, Marie Dufrayne, but finds that she has become wealthy and has social aspirations. He starts a garage in the village, conceals his identity, and makes love to Marie so successfully that she turns down two other suitors, a poor nobleman and a rich brewer. The two ousted suitors join Roaul in a plot whereby he pretends to be the Prince of Como, intending to betray him at the last moment. But he outwits them and weds Marie. The real Prince arrives, the deception is exposed and Marie flies into a temper. She relents when she finds Raoul to be her childhood sweetheart, saves him from being killed by her brother and mutual happiness follows.

Greta Nissen

In the Name of Love (Paramount)

PRESS NOTICE

RICARDO CORTEZ and Greta Nissen play the leading roles in a romantic drama entitled "In the Name of Love," which comes to the ——— theatre on ———. Colorful French atmosphere, thrills, humor and unabated love interest are the distinguishing characteristics of this picture which is beautifully mounted and photographed. A strong appeal to feminine patrons lies in the gorgeous, up-to-date Paris gowns worn by the star.

Supporting the principals are such well-known players as Wallace Beery, Raymond Hatton, Lillian Leighton and Edyth Chapman.

CATCH LINES

What would you do "In The Name Of Love?" "All's fair in war and love."

If your lover deceived you for your own ultimate good, would you forgive him?

Tricks

(Davis Distributing Division, Inc.—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS picture provides fair entertainment and is chiefly remarkable for the fact that for once, a heroine, of the much ill-used "wide open spaces" doesn't get herself up as a cowgirl, but is content to gallop around in ordinary feminine riding attire. It looks reasonable enough, too, for she is the daughter of a wealthy ranch-owner in lower California, equipped with a high grade education, and there are probably many young damsels of her type who don't care about living up to film tradition.

Two exceedingly handsome and intelligent horses figure prominently in the action, you might call them co-stars with Marilyn Mills, and those who like Westerners a bit different from the average output should find the feature amusing.

THEME. Part comedy, with girls' boarding school and society settings, part Western melodrama. Too vivacious heroine is expelled, goes to her father's ranch and has love affair with foreman.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the feats of the two horses, Beverly and Star. Dwell on comedy relief. Tell patrons this Western has a different slant from the usual. Feature Marilyn Mills.

DRAWING POWER. Not strong enough to meet entertainment demands of big first-run theatres, but should get by in neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. A mixture of melodrama and comedy. This variation from ordinary style of Western plot should please fans, who will also find exploits of two trained horses entertaining.

THE CAST

Angelica (Trix).....Marilyn Mills
The New Foreman.....J. Frank Glendon
Aunt Angelica.....Gladys Moore
William Varden.....Myles McCarthy
Buck Barlow.....William Lowery
Ranch Housekeeper.....Dorthy Vernon
Red.....Harry Valeur

Story and Scenario by Mary C. Bruning. Directed by Bruce Mitchell.

SYNOPSIS. Angelica, daughter of ranch-owner Varden, leaves her aunt's lawn party in disgust because it is too tame. Back in boarding school she gives a midnight supper which causes her expulsion. She visits her father's ranch, has her beautiful mare, Beverly, sent to her, and with a companion horse, Star, proceeds to enjoy herself by falling in love with the new foreman, Jack Norton. She overhears outlaws planning to steal cattle, is taken prisoner and sends Star for aid. Norton responds, rescues and wins her.

Marilyn Mills

Tricks (Davis Distributing Div.)

PRESS NOTICE

MARILYN MILLS and her wonder horses in "Tricks" will make their appearance on the screen of the ——— theatre on ———. Admirers of Western melodrama will find plenty of fast action, excitement, and romance in this film, which starts out with fun in a girls' boarding school and life among the society set, but whirls into a wild medley of adventure and a love affair which ends happily.

It's a picture with a story different from anything yet filmed in the Western line, which gives beautiful Marilyn Mills a host of chances to display her dramatic talent and riding ability. J. Frank Glendon, Gladys Moore and William Lowery appear in support.

CATCH LINES

With his mistress a prisoner in the hands of merciless bandits the wise horse Star galloped off and obtained assistance for her.

See the midnight supper party in the girls' boarding school and learn what ice-cream and lobster did to the hungry guests.

E. J. Debolt, owner of the Waterloo Theatre and the Strand Theatre of Waterloo, Iowa, is spending between $15,000 and $20,000 on each theatre in remodelling and redecorating. The Strand Theatre will be equipped with a stage. No vaudeville numbers are being planned for the Strand but Mr. Debolt is arranging for special presentations with his picture programs. The Waterloo Theatre will be completely redecorated, new light fixtures, etc.

L. R. Brager, formerly doing publicity from the New York office for First National, has been chosen to have charge of publicity for all the A. H. Blank theatres, now numbering more than thirty in Iowa. Mr. Brager was in Des Moines earlier this year for the exploitation of The Sea Hawk. Offices are being fitted up on the fourth floor of the Commonwealth Building which is owned by Mr. Blank for Mr. Brager. Dorothy Day, who has been handling publicity for the Des Moines theatres owned by Blank as well as those over the state, will also have her office on this floor. The A. H. Blank Enterprises occupy the entire third floor.

Lyle Utsler of the booking department at Famous Players is a proud papa. The baby is a bouncing nine pound girl and her name is Virginia Maude.

Hippie and Peak of the Past Time Theatre at Makoqueta are remodelling their theatre. D. L. DeNue has also remodeled his theatre, the Majestic Theatre. Mr. DeNue is exhibitor at De Witt.

Elmer Tilton, manager of the First National office, is in New York for the convention of branch managers there. He will be gone until the first of September.

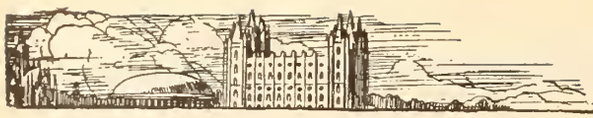
Louise Wallensack lives at Batchtate, North Dakota, and is now spending her vacation days with her parents.

The picnic of DesMoines Film Exchange staffs, attended by about a hundred, was a grand success. Famous Players and First National made up a ball team and challenged a team made up of members of all other film exchanges. The challengers were defeated in decided manner. The score was 23 to 3. The game was not without its casualties. Gene Malone of First National was rather badly hurt when a fast ball hit him in the side. And Mr. Clement, booker for Famous Players, was hit in the neck with a bat. The batter's intentions of hitting the ball instead of Clem went aglee. Everybody played some now and some then. Universal carried off the honors, it is believed, for champion sprinters, their representatives winning in several races. Ruby Morgan and C. S. Baker of Universal were two of the winners. And others won the money as champion eaters. There were lots of chicken, etc. Altogether this get-together was such a success that it is probable that it will be repeated.

The midwest district manager for Pathe, F. C. Aiken, visited the DesMoines office, coming to DesMoines from Chicago. R. S. Ballentyne, manager of the local exchange, accompanied Mr. Aiken to Omaha.

M. J. Weisfeldt, district manager for F. B. O., after a visit to the DesMoines exchange, made the Minneapolis office.

Miss Margaret McGreavy, secretary to Manager Banfard of Metro-Goldwyn, is on her vacation. She will visit Chicago. And, as some of the girls from this exchange have surprised them all with wedding bells, Miss McGreavy has already started the denials that she will be married on this trip.



A. C. Shuneman has bought a new screen for his theatre at Webster City, Iowa. The American Theatre at Cherokee, of which Dale Goldie is manager, has been equipped with a new electric fan. Wes Booth of Belle Plain also purchased new equipment. Wes bought two new condensing systems.

The Exhibitors Supply Company reports that a large number of theatres are purchasing new equipment. C. R. Coons of Seymour bought a new projection machine. He was purchasing for the new theatre, the Lyric. Mr. Ihers, owner of the theatre at Minlow, bought a new machine. Mr. Dehoet of Monroe purchased similar new equipment for his theatre. The Consolidated School of Dysart, Iowa, bought a machine. Supt. Ferrell of the Dysart schools has charge of the pictures and equipment bought for the school. Mr. Hundling, managing the Rialto Theatre at Newton for A. H. Blank, purchased his entire new lighting equipment from the Exhibitors Supply Company. He purchased new lighting fixtures as well as some special lighting effects. Mr. Debolt of Waterloo purchased the entire stage equipment for the Strand Theatre from the DesMoines Company and also for the Waterloo Theatre which he is planning to redecorate, adding new light fixtures, etc., at a cost of nearly $20,000. The Capitol Theatre at Davenport, which Milton Overman is managing for A. H. Blank Enterprises, has been equipped with two new Simplex machines with Peerless arcs.

The vacation schedule shows that Miss Gretchen Kelleher, billing clerk for Pathe, is visiting in Cedar Rapids, while Miss Novello Phillips, booker's stenographer, is in Omaha.

W. E. Banford, manager for Metro-Goldwyn, is planning the routeing for The Trackless Train in the key towns.

James R. Keitz, manager of the local Greater Features exchange, leaves the first part of next week for Carbon County, Utah.

C. L. Pearce, who covers the Eastern Idaho and Western Wyoming territory out of the Greater Features exchange here, has just returned from an extended and very successful trip through this territory.

Miss Scott, booker for Greater Features in this city, has returned from her vacation.

C. C. McDermond, salesman out of the local Producers Distributing Corporation exchange, is covering his territory in Southern Utah.

Harry Lustig, Western District Manager of Warner Brothers, will be in this week to hold a sales conference with R. S. Stackhouse, manager for Warner Brothers exchange here, and with all of the field representatives in this territory.

There are two new additions to the sales staff of Warner Brothers. They are Lawrence W. Hyde, who will cover the Utah and Nevada territory, and Harry Gibson who has been assigned to the Idaho and Wyoming branch.

Manager Stackhouse has just returned from a trip through the Montana territory.

Exhibitors visiting the local exchanges this week are: S. B. Steck, operating the Lyceum Theatre of Ogden, Utah; M. Clawson, owner of the Clawson Theatre, Morgan, Utah; A. L. Stallings, owner of the Kinema Thetre in Richfield, Utah; L. F. Brown and Cyrus Ward, operating the Isis Theatre at Preston, Idaho; Theodore M. Chessler, owner of the Princess Theatre, Bingham, Utah.

The motion picture operators of this city are staging a Movie Ball to be given this week at Pleasure Park, the outdoor moving picture theatre and dance hall.

Kansas City

THE Optimist Club of Kansas City met with exhibitors in a meeting and luncheon at the Kansas City Club Friday and Greater Movie Season was formally approved by the club.

Miss Emma Viets, chairman of the Kansas State Censor Board, was honored this week when word was received in Kansas City that she had been elected Most Worshipful Grand Matron of the Grand Chapter of the Eastern Star at Toronto, Canada..

Earl T. Cook, new manager of the Pantages theatre, Kansas City, concluded that a little publicity to start his reign would not be amiss, so he staged a free performance for newsboys of the Kansas City Star. He obtained the desired publicity—plenty of it—it is needless to say.

An average of thirty-eight essays a day is being received by Miss Katherine Prosser, motion picture editor of the Kansas City Star, in conjunction with the essay contest on Greater Movie Season, sponsored locally by a committee of exhibitors and exchange officials.

While Jack Quinlan, manager of the Mainstreet theatre, Kansas City, is spending a vacation in the East, Fred Crowe of the American theatre, Chicago, is in charge. Mr. Quinlan is expected back soon.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were: Charles Marshall, Palace, Golden City, Mo.; Charles Sears, Sears Circuit, Nevada, Mo.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee theatre, Lawrence, Kan.; William Cuff, Strand, Chillicothe, Mo.; Ben Levy, Hippodrome, Joplin, Mo.

There was not one whit of difficulty in "digging up" exchange news last week on Kansas City's movie row. M. A. Tanner, former Selznick branch manager, has accepted a position as booker at the Fox exchange, succeeding Edward Solig, who departed for Jacksonville, Fla.

Frank Baxter, former Universal salesman, has joined the Warner-Vitagraph force in Omaha.

J. R. Grainger, general sales executive for Fox, was in Kansas City on a business visit, being enroute to the Pacific Coast.

Lou Nathanson, former representative in Oklahoma and Kansas for P. D. C., has joined the United Artists force and will cover Oklahoma.

Miss Ruth Gershon, busy Fox stenographer, is convalescing from an operation for appendicitis.

C. C. Knipe, formerly in charge of the accessories department for the Kansas City exchange, has been promoted to Universal Central West accessories manager, while Fred Herschorn, former Universal salesman, has been promoted to short subjects manager of that company.

George Priest has been employed as an extra salesman for the Fox exchange, while William Kaster of New York City has joined the Universal sales force.

It was hard punishment to take, but M. C. Brodsky, Universal salesman who was confined to his bed for a week with an infected foot, has returned to work, while it is understood Earl Reynolds, fellow salesman of the same office, has become so "fast" that he is considering trading in both of his motor cars for an airplane.

Strange and mystic is the power which E. C. Rhoden, manager of Midwest Film Distributers, Inc., Kansas City, has over the natives of Beloit and Concordia, Kan. Virtually no rain had fallen in the vicinity of those two towns all summer. The outlook was anything but cheerful. Then along came Mr. Rhoden for a week of business and it rained each day he was there, much to his inconvenience. But city officials of the two towns, it is understood, are contemplating appointing Mr. Rhoden as the "Rain Maker."

William Gabel, Jr., of Beloit, Kan., and Harry Wareham of Manhattan, Kan., will leave soon to attend the Paramount Manager School in New York City, later to become managers of Paramount Manager School in New York City, later to become managers of Paramount theatres.

The Mayfield theatre, Seventy-first street and Prospect avenue, Kansas City, has been purchased by D. Costa, former owner of the Bonaventure theatre, a suburban house of Kansas City.

Untiring and efficient work as advertising manager of the Cuff Enterprises at Chillicothe, Mo., won the position as manager of the Strand theatre, owned by William Cuff, for John Creamer. Edward Smith, former manager of the theatre, is to become manager of the Strand hotel, owned by Mr. Cuff, and which adjoins the theatre.

New England

THE Immaculate Conception parish of Everett, Mass. will start at once on the erection of a moving picture theatre on Chelsea street, in which educationals, news reels, historic and scientific films will be shown. The building will be 42 x 100 feet, of wood and concrete construction and will cost about $30,000.

George and Oliver Ramsdell, proprietors of the Malden Orpheum, Malden, Mass. are back at their desks again with a fine coat of tan secured on the Maine coast. Work on their new theatre on Pleasant street is progressing rapidly and the building is expected to be ready by late fall.

Winchester, Mass., Boston's only suburb of more than 5,000 population without a motion picture theatre, may have the question again put up to the voters this fall of having such a theatre. Two Winchester men are looking the ground over and are planning to again seek a permit. On three occasions applicants in the past half dozen years have been refused licenses by vote of the town. Winchester's residents must attend shows in neighboring communities although it has a population of more than 15,000 people. Local capital is ready to build the playhouse and lease it if the permit is granted.

Apollo Theatres, Incorporated, is a newly incorporated company which plans presentation of motion pictures in Boston this winter at a new theatre which the company plans to build on a site yet to be selected, probably in the Back Bay district. John Henes of 1641 North Shore Road, Revere, Mass., is president and treasurer of the new company.

Charles A. Newhall, 73 Tremont street, Boston, will build a theatre in Harvard square, Cambridge, at a cost of $150,000 for which Architects Mowll & Rand, 21 School street, Boston, have prepared plans. Contracts will soon be let and construction work started so that the films may be shown for the first time about midwinter.

Astor Productions, Inc., has received its charter from Secretary of State Cook. It is understood that the new company has an option on a Boston theatre which it plans to remodel and open with motion pictures. Henry G. Segal of Brookline, Mass.; David L. Schoolman of Allston, Mass., and Louis R. Covner of Brookline are the officers of the company.

Parson's Theatre Enterprises, Inc., has been incorporated with $25,000 capital to conduct a motion picture theatre. Incorporators are Myron C. Parsons, president; A. Lillian Parsons, Rockport, Mass., treasurer, and Lillian H. Parsons, clerk.

Hyman Kronich has had plans prepared for the erection of a moving picture theatre at 63-67 Walnut street, Springfield. Work is to begin at once and the playhouse will be opened early in the winter.

Atlanta

MRS. JACQUES FUTRELLE, popular and well-known Atlanta writer, as well as the mother of the talented Virginia Futrelle, singer of distinction, has been appointed this week publicity director for the Howard theatre, taking up her duties in this connection at once.

N. W. Remond, who two years ago retired from the picture business, is this week back in the field again with the announcement of his purchase of the Scenic theatre at Lake Wales, Florida. Mr. Remond was in Atlanta this week closing contracts for his pictures, and it is understood he secured in these both First National and Fox service.

Mr. Remond is well-known locally and all through the territory. He at one time owned several theaters in Jacksonville, and was also district supervisor for this territory under S. A. Lynch's regime a few years ago. His many friends here and else where will be delighted to learn of his return to the fold, and to wish him unqualified success in his Florida house.

W. B. Fulton, Universal's salesman in the southwest Georgia and South Carolina territory, has been transferred to the Alabama territory this week to fill the place left vacant by Roy S. Campbell, who last week removed to St. Augustine, Florida to take charge of Universal's two theatres there.

Mr. Campbell succeeds Ralph DeBruler in St. Augustine, who has gone to Houston, Texas. Mr. Fulton's territory will be taken over by S. C. Ware.

Mr. Herbert Furniss Kincey, otherwise known as "Mike," who has been associated with R. B. Wilby for many years, and with him is owner of the Academy and Walton theatres in Selma, Ala., announces his engagement this week to Miss Sara Elizabeth Bayne.

The marriage will be solemnized on September 1st in the First Presbyterian Church, Selma, Ala., at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Mr. Kincey will be remembered by many in his connection for several years with Southern Enterprises, when he represented the booking department, together with Montgomery Hill and Ed. Brown. He has been in the motion picture business for nearly ten years, and the announcement of his coming marriage carries with it the felicitations of his large circle of friends.

of the usual convention places

HERE is a different, better, much more interesting and enjoyable convention site—famous French Lick Springs Hotel, the home of Pluto Water, known the world over as America's premier health and recreation resort. A less expensive place, too—meals and room are included in the moderate rate you pay at French Lick Springs; and you avoid the heavy theatre, restaurant, taxicab and other entertainment bills that other convention sites require of you. Doesn't that picture the sort of place your organization would do well to choose next time?

There is renewed health for you here in the bubbling natural waters of the Pluto, Bowles and Proserpine Springs. Severe winter is unknown in this semi-southern Cumberland foothills region. Golf is played on the two 18-hole French Lick Springs Hotel courses long after weather stops all thought of golf elsewhere. And this superb, perfectly appointed and equipped metropolitan hotel affords other diversions in abundance.

Ready now, too, is the large new wing containing, among other features, a well-ventilated daylight ground floor convention auditorium flexibly arranged so that meetings of any size from 50 to 1500 persons can be held without leaving the hotel.

Everyone intends to visit French Lick Springs some day. Your next convention is your opportunity to do so. Write now for illustrated booklet with detailed convention information. Address Convention Secretary, French Lick Springs Hotel Co., French Lick, Indiana.

Central Penn

BURGLARS entered and ransacked the box office of the Grand motion picture theatre, Centralia, near Mount Carmel, Pa., early in the morning of Sunday, August 16, and failing to find money, demolished a stout wooden cabinet, destroyed several rolls of tickets and committed other acts of vandalism.

Gaining entrance to the main auditorium by prying loose the lock on one of the exit doors, the burglars forced their way into the box office by cutting a large hole in the door, reaching a hand through the opening and turning the lock. It was evidently due to their disappointment at failing to find cash that they ruthlessly destroyed such articles as they could find. A description of men seen lurking near the theatre was given to the police.

The Family theatre, Hazleton, no longer will depend exclusively on the local electric power company to supply it with current for electric lighting. Because storms have in the past caused a temporary failure of the lights, under the present arrangement, it has been decided by the theatre management to install its own lighting system to be used in emergencies, so that the theatre will be assured of never going dark during performances.

Charles K. Campbell, manager of the Victoria picture theatre, Harrisburg, went on a two weeks' vacation trip through Pennsylvania by motor in the latter part of August. In his absence the management of the Victoria was temporarily in the hands of Samuel A. Keubler, manager of the Colonial. Both theatres are Wilmer & Vincent houses.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer H. Ley, the latter director of the Wilmer & Vincent Community Service Bureau in Harrisburg, left on August 19 for a vacation motor trip through the Pocono mountains to Delaware Water Gap, and other parts of Pennsylvania. Later they went to New York City to visit their daughter, Miss Naomi Ackley, known to the stage as Miss Sonya Leyton, who has appeared in several important roles with Schubert musical shows.

The opening date for the new Strand theatre, just built in York by the Nathan Appell theatre interests, was postponed from August 17, the date originally set, until Thursday, August 27. Many newspapermen and motion picture exhibitors, film men, and other persons in most of the important cities of the state were invited to attend the dedicatory exercises.

As the feature of the annual picnic of the Carr & Sehad, Inc., theatres, of Reading, held at Sinking Springs park on August 2, the baseball game between the Carr & Sehad nine and the team representing the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, South Jersey and Delaware, was highly exciting. The latter, who previously had won the Philadelphia motion picture league championship, were victors by a score of 4 to 3. Exhibitors and exchange men from all parts of Pennsylvania were guests at the picnic.

Dr. H. J. Sehad, of Reading, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern Jersey and Delaware, and head of Carr & Sehad Inc., which controls a chain of theatres in Reading and Lebabon, was host to a score or more of Reading's prettiest girls who competed in the recent contest to select "Miss Reading" to take part in the Atlantic City pageant. The party was held at Dr. Sehad's county home near Reading.

Miss Margaret Rudy, 18, of 2631 North Sixth Street, Harrisburg, an usher at the Majestic Theater, in that city suffered a severe injury about the head on August 20, when she slipped and fell in South Fourth street, below Market. She was admitted to the Polyclinic Hospital for treatment.

The Star motion picture theatre, Tower City, Schuylkill county, which had been closed for practically a year, has been reopened with nightly picture attractions for a period of at least two weeks.

William O. Heckman, manager of the Hippodrome, York, has engaged J. Howard Wiley, of Philadelphia, to become the organist for the theatre, and Mr. Wiley already has taken his place at the Wurlitzer instrument which the theatre uses. He succeeds John DePalma, who has become organist at the new Strand theatre, just opened in York by the Nathan Appell interests.

Milwaukee

H. J. FITZGERALD, manager of the Milwaukee branch of First National, has gone to New York to attend the convention of

First National branch managers at the Roosevelt Hotel. E. P. Vallendorf, office manager of the Milwaukee branch is enjoying a week's vacation in Minnesota, where he is visiting with relatives and friends.

Elmer Zieman, assistant manager of Saxe's Wisconsin Theatre, is sending picture post cards from Yellowstone National Park, where he is spending his two weeks' vacation.

The usual sunshine atmosphere of the Milwaukee office of F. B. O. has been missing for the past few days. Miss Evelyn Benson, billing clerk and one of the most likeable young women in any local exchange, was killed in an auto accident on a county highway last week, and her escort, Robert Turner, F. B. O.'s poster clerk, was seriously injured. The two were occupants of a car which was crashed into at a curve in the road by a reckless driver. Miss Benson had been in the employ of the F. B. O. office for the past two weeks, and during that time had won the respect and admiration of everyone on the staff through her excellent qualities and her pleasant personality. The entire local F. B. O. force, from manager down to office boy attended the funeral services early Monday morning.

The inauguration of a better picture at higher prices policy at the Merrill Theatre seems to have been a wise move, for the house has been packed ever since the prices were raised from 25 to 50 cents, on August 15.

Milwaukee exhibitors are beginning to breath easier now that the summer season is drawing to an end without any serious box office casualties. While business has been nothing to brag about, taken as a whole, most houses had satisfactory returns each week, in spite of the fact that a large part of the population sought its amusement every evening at the lakes which are annoyingly handy.

Sidney Lawrence, who for the past twelve months has very successfully guided the destinies of Saxe's Modjeska Theatre, has resigned his position as manager of that house to take charge at Champaign, Ill., for the Orpheum Circuit. Sid not only established himself as an excellent house manager with a decided proclivity for nifty stage presentations, but also won himself a place in the heart of practically every other exhibitor in Milwaukee. Under his capable management the big south side picture house was prosperous throughout its entire first year, Sid having assumed charge soon after the grand opening last August.

Canada

D. C. Brown, formerly manager of the Algoma Theatre at Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario has been given a splendid promotion by the Famous Players Canadian Corp., in his appointment to the management of the Regent Theatre, Toronto, the big-time moving picture house of the Ontario Capital. Mr. Brown, who has had theatrical experience in South Africa, Australia and the United Kingdom, has been succeeded at the Algoma by J. D. Fletcher.

Another important change in the Famous Players circle in Canada has been the appointment of H. E. Wilton, until recently the manager of the Strand Theatre, Hamilton, to the management of the Savoy Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario. Mr. Wilton's successor at the Hamilton Strand has not yet been announced.

B. E. Lang has returned to Montreal, Quebec, where he has been reappointed manager of His Majesty's Theatre, a large local house. Mr. Lang spent recent months in Asbury Park, N. J., but he had been the manager of His Majesty's at Montreal before going to the Jersey centre. The theatre has been modernized in recent weeks through the construction of new facilities and the replacement of old.

Exhibitors and exchange representatives of Winnipeg, Manitoba, mingled happily when they held their annual screen picnic at Selkirk Park on Sunday, August 14. The big sports programme was under the direction of Sam Swartz who secured no less than 80 prizes for the picnic competitions.

A successful competitor at the Ontario Rifle Ranges at Long Branch, Toronto, and at the Connaught Rifle Ranges, Ottawa, was Bert Palmer, usher of the Strand Theatre, Calgary, Alberta, who, between performances, has attained a high degree of marksmanship. Mr. Palmer spent his annual vacation at the big Canadian rifle meets which were conducted under the auspices of the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association. He secured his share of the awards.

The Franklin Theatre, Ottawa, is losing its name, J. M. Franklin having decided to relinquish his lease of the house on August 31 in order to devote his whole attention to B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, of which he is the general manager. The "Franklin" signs are coming off the smaller house and it will probably be opened by other parties in the fall.

Cincinnati

J. M. GELMAN, has been placed in complete charge of the Cincinnati Theatre Equipment Company with headquarters in the Broadway Film Building. Besides taking care of the business for his concern Jake also manages the Dixie Theatre in the West End. This theatre caters to the colored trade.

Bill Clark, in charge of the press for the Libson Houses returned from a vacation to the mountains of West Va.

Among the visitors to the local Paramount conference last week were, Bill Clark, manager of the Louisville exchange and Fritz Wagner, manager of the Indianapolis branch.

Pete Smyth of the Sylvia Theatre, Bellevue, Ky., is sporting a brand new Chandler sedan these days.

Godfry Kotzen, manager of the Lyric Theatre, Covington, Ky., predicts that he is in for one of the most successful seasons of his career as theatre manager. He is perfectly satisfied with his line up of pictures and all that he needs now is patrons. During his spare time Mr. Kotzen sells Hudson cars.

The Famous Players organization is now established in the new offices of the company on the second floor of the Broadway Film building. The offices look spick and span and the smell of fresh paint is rampant throughout.

Louis Damm, of the Damm Theatre, Osgood, Indiana, spent several days in the various exchanges lining up his pictures for the coming season.

Frank J. Ferguson of the Avondale Theatre, Columbus, O., spent several days with the various exchange managers last week.

David M. Gould, connected with the complete service department of Universal's New York office, has been spending some time at the local exchange and in the local territory boosting the short subjects of the firm. Just how soon he will get back home he does not know but he hopes that it will be soon.

Lou Snitzer, well known local exhibitor is the proud father of a baby boy. This is the third offspring in the Snitzer family and both baby and mother are doing fine.

H. R. Dixon, of the Ideal Theatre, Dry Ridge, Ky., and the Unique, Walton, Ky., was a visitor at Film Row last week.

John B. Elliott of the Strand Theatre, Lexington, Ky., is about to open a new hotel in his city which he will name the Paramount. He expects all the film boys to make their home with him while in Lexington.

Chas. Trieble and his son of the Pastime Theatre, Maysville, Ky., motored to Cincinnati last week and booked several pictures for future showing.

W. H. Wright and Wm. Gore of the Palace Theatre, Peech Creek, W. Va., and Gore Theatre, Cherry Tree, W. Va., spent several days in the film building booking pictures for the coming season.

Ralph Kinsler, who has been taking care of the F. B. O. offices during the illness of its manager Ed. Booth, who was in Indianapolis, has had his ring finger on his left hand broken, by a film can.

Henry Eger, former manager of the James Theatre, Columbus, O., will shortly be connected with one of the local film exchanges.

Sam Marks, Dayton salesman for F. B. O. is doubling these days. He is now doing special sales duty in the Kentucky territory.

Andy G. Hettesheimer, manager of the Orpheum Theatre of this city, is fastly recuperating from his recent severe illness and all his friends wish him a speedy recovery.

Fred Myers and Harry Silvers, of the Palace Theatre, Hamilton, O., came all the way to Cincinnati for their dinner the other evening. Evidently the food in this city is better than in their own. The writer stopped at their table for a few moments but could find no other evidence for their visit but food on the table.

Ned Beetx of the Liberty Theatre, Dayton, Ky., has purchased the Princess theatre of the same city from A. C. Clayton.

Jim Hamilton, former salesman for Standard, is now on his way to Florida to enter the real estate field.

Johnny Hibner, of the Queen City Theatre, Cheviot, O., is another film man going to Florida soon to enrich himself in real estate.

Morris Frankel, of the Frankel Theatres, is spending his vacation in St. Louis, Mo. and Minneapolis, Minn.

Cliff Boyd, general decorative expert of the Libson theatres and manager of the Lyric theatre, returned from his vacation last week.

J. H. Stomphe, of the Orpheum Theatre, Lexington, Ky., spent several days in the city during which time he purchased several new reflector lamps.

Bill Gervis, local film man returned from a trip to New York, where he visited several theatres looking over their equipment.

M. O. Mullins will open a new theatre soon at 22nd and Eight ave., Huntington, W. Va. Name will be announced later.

Tom Morrow, who was connected for a number of years with the Kearse Theatre, Huntington, W. Va., has opened the Bennet Theatre at Logan, W. Va.

Denver

ED SCHULTE, owner and manager of the Rialto Theatre, Casper, Wyoming, arrived in Denver last week enroute to Glenwood Springs, Colorado, for a month's vacation. He was accompanied by his son.

W. F. Gordon, First National branch manager of Salt Lake City, was in the city enroute to New York for the purpose of attending the annual convention for all First National branch managers. Mr. Gordon was a former salesman for the Denver branch of First National. He will be accompanied to New York by Joseph H. Ashby, Denver manager.

The new Alpine Theatre located at 33rd Avenue and Williams Street will be completed and ready for opening October first according to announcement made yesterday by Ed Nesbit, the builder and manager. The new suburban house is located on the East side and will contain approximately 625 seats. It will be a part of a new building 75 x 115 feet and will be two stories in height. The remainder of the building will be used for apartments. Mr. Nesbit, the owner, at present owns and operates the Mystic Theatre, a Denver suburban house.

Harry Lustig, district manager for Warner Brothers, has gone to Salt Lake City after spending several days with the local branch of his company.

Gus Kohn of the Coronado Theatre, East Las Vegas, New Mexico, and his brother, Max Kohn, manager of the Rialto Theatre, Trinidad, Colorado, were among the exhibitors visiting exchanges during the past week.

Another prominent and well known exhibitor of the Denver territory who was in Denver was none other than Jim Zimmerman of the Lyric Theatre, Bridgeport, Nebraska. Jim seldom comes to Denver but when he does he manages to see all of his many friends among the exchanges. On this trip he was accompanied by his daughter.

Jasper J. Morgan, the popular president of the Denver Theatre Supply Company, is at present living on the Poudre River, about 25 miles from Ft. Collins, enjoying a two weeks' vacation, fishing, swimming and dodging rattle snakes. His camp is located at the foot of Rattle Snake Mountain, one of the most picturesque locations in the state of Colorado.

Eugene Gerbase, local Universal manager, and C. M. Van Horn, Pathe branch manager, have returned from sales trips into the New Mexico territory.

Harry Long, manager of the America Theatre, Universal first run house on Curtis Street, is in Detroit, Michigan, taking a much needed vacation. Besides being in active management of a 1600 seat theatre, Harry was general director of the Greater Movie Season Campaign. He is expected to return to Denver about September first. During his absence the management is being conducted by Arthur Janisch, local Universal publicity manager.

Other exhibitors visiting Denver during the past week were Max Kravetz, America Theatre, Ft. Collins, Colorado; Ray Allison, assistant manager, America Theatre, Colorado Springs; and J. E. Guild, owner and operator of the Peerless Theatre, Holyoke, Colorado.

Hugh W. Braly, manager of Famous Players-Lasky Exchange, is making an extensive sales trip by motor in the state of Wyoming. He is expected to return the latter part of the month.

Baltimore

THE New Preston is now the name of the old Flaming Arrow Theatre, 1108 East Preston street, which is now being operated under the management of Arthur B. Price, a pioneer in the moving picture business in Baltimore and who now also operates the Aurora Theatre, 7 East North avenue.

Mr. Price has christened the New Preston, "the perfect little playhouse," and says that about $10,000 have been spent on improvements and renovations. It is practically a new theatre because new seats, screen, projection machines, floor coverings, draperies, lighting fixtures, heating and ventilating plants have been installed.

The fight by William Cook, funeral director, to rebuild the fire damaged Lyceum Theatre, 1209-1213 North Charles street for use of funeral parlors, still goes on. After his application for rebuilding had been disapproved by Building Inspector Charles H. Osborne, Mr. Cook immediately filed an appeal with the Zoning Board. The residents in the neighborhood will continue to protest against the building of such an establishment.

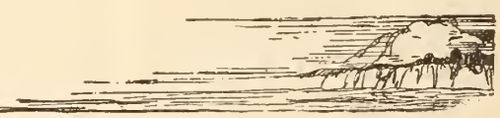
The lobby and foyer of the New theatre, 210 West Lexington street, managed by John T. Moore, have been redecorated with dull grey and gold and present a fine appearance. This playhouse is operated by the Combined Whitehurst Interests.

Dr. Milton M. Whitehurst, who is treasurer of the Garden Theatre Company, has been appointed treasurer of the New Theatre Company to succeed the late G. Edgar Smith. Both playhouses are operated by the Combined Whitehurst Interests.

T. M. Cushing, moving picture and dramatic critic of the Baltimore Sun, is laid up at his home due to some torn ligaments in his right ankle. He has the ankle heavily bandaged and will have to stay at home for about two weeks.

Elmer Free, Automobile Editor of the Baltimore American, has been appointed publicity manager of Keith's Hippodrome to succeed Lee McLaughlin, who has just resigned that position to become associated with the James L. Kernan Company. Mr. Free held that position with the Hippodrome for a number of years some time ago. He will continue his work with the American.

Lee R. McLaughlin, formerly publicity manager of Keith's Hippodrome, has been appointed treasurer of the Academy Theatre, to be operated by the James L. Kernan Company as a legitimate playhouse. Frederick C. Schanberger, Jr., has been appointed manager of that playhouse.



Ford's theatre, which will show a series of legitimate attractions during the season, will reopen to the public on Labor Day under the management of Harry A. Henkel.

The Blue Bell Theatre, 1713 Hartford avenue, has been purchased from the Blue Bell Theatre Company, Arthur B. Price, president; Jack Whittle, secretary-treasurer; by Harry C. Mann, and will be conducted as a moving picture playhouse.

Music by a six-piece stringed orchestra under the direction of Emanuel Schwartz, will be a regular feature of the evening performances at the Victoria theatre, 415 East Baltimore street, beginning with Monday August 24. H. A. Blum, manager of that playhouse, says he will have them play a different overture for each new picture shown during the week, and will keep them on if patrons like the music.

Buffalo

THE original deal whereby the Kreiger Brothers of Batavia were to have taken over the three Border Amusement Company Buffalo houses is off. Now David Kreiger alone has taken over the Ellen Terry, one of the links in the chain, and will at once redecorate both interior and exterior and erect a big new electric sign.

Stanley Kozanowski, who operated the Rivoli theatre on Broadway, Buffalo, has leased the Circle theatre on Connecticut street and will reopen this community picture theatre the week of August 30. The Circle was operated the past season by Eugene A. Pfeil.

Charlie Bowe, manager of the Frontier, one of Buffalo's most popular community theatres, has gone to Hot Springs, on a health pilgrimage.

Chester A. Saunders has resigned from the sales staff of Warner Brothers exchange in the Queen City of the Lakes.

The Dellinger theatre has been closed for repairs in Batavia, N. Y. Harry D. Crosby and Edward Houghton have been showing pictures at the Dellinger Saturdays and Sundays for the past two years or more. The other day former Mayor William F. Haitz, owner of the house, received orders from the industrial board of the state department of labor to make certain changes to comply with the new theatre code adopted by the state.

The Columbia theatre has reopened in Erie, Pa. The house was visited by a destructive fire last spring. The house has been beautifully decorated inside, magenta, purple and brown being the predominant shades in the walls, drapes, curtains and floor coverings.

Walter Hays, vice president of the Mark-Strand interests, and former president of the M. P. T. O. of N. Y., has returned to his home in Buffalo, following a 1700-mile motor tour with Mrs. Hays through the east.

Arthur L. Skinner, manager of the Victoria theatre, is spending a two-weeks' vacation at his summer home near Point Abino on the Canadian shore. During his absence, the house is in charge of Allen Hays, son of Walter Hays.

George E. Williams, Paramount exploiteer in the Buffalo territory, is busy preparing page ads for the annual Paramount Week splash.

J. H. Michael, chairman of Buffalo Zone, M. P. T. O. of N. Y., is arising at 6 A. M. these days and joining the Film Row pill chasers in Delaware Park. It is reported that J. H. is sporting a very nifty golf costume. Nothing like getting pepped up for the fall season.

Basil Brady, manager of the Buffalo Pathe exchange, has returned from his vacation. Basil motored to New York and Brooklyn, his old stamping ground.

George T. Cruzen is putting over the new Palace in Lockport to the tune of record breaking business. And with the coming of fall and the addition of Keith vaudeville it is expected the receipts will register even larger figures.

Frank J. A. McCarthy, Buffalo First National manager, is attending the convention at the home office in New York City. Ray Powers, booker, and assistant manager, is vacationing.

Lillian Walker, former star of the screen, was in Buffalo this week, appearing as the headliner at the Loew's State. While in town Lillian made a trip out to Lancaster to visit her old friends, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Albert of the Albert theatre.

Texas

THEO D. POLEMONAKOS and associates who started work a short time ago on a new 1200 seat popular price theatre, to be erected at 914 Preston Avenue, announced that the new theatre would be named the Cameo. Present plans point to an early opening in October. Aside from the fact that it will be a popular price theatre no other information regarding the new Cameo's policy has been made public.

Abe Silverberg, manager of the Crown and New Folly theatres, has announced that a contract had been let to remodel the interior of the Folly and the Crown, also that the machines from the Crown protection room would be sent to the Folly and that two new type machines would be installed at the Crown. The present machines in the Crown are less than a year old. Both theatres have enjoyed a very successful run this summer and the management plans to condition them for a record fall season.

Abe Silverberg, local theatre owner, has returned from a week's vacation in Mineral Well and other north Texas points. Mr. Silverberg made the trip in his car with his brother-in-law.

Jeff Barnette, the Houston Chronicle theatre representative, has returned to his line of duty after a fifteen day vacation spent in central Texas on a ranch. Mr. and Mrs. Barnette made the trip in an automobile.

Frank Starz, advertising and publicity manager for the entire Interstate circuit, plans to visit Houston next week, according to Eddie Breamer, local Interstate manager. Mr. Starz, before his promotion was writing advertising and publicity for the Interstate theatre in Houston. His headquarters are in Dallas, Texas.

Manson Floyd, house manager of the Queen theatre, has returned from a month's motor trip, including Chicago and New York and other eastern points.

Gerry Iselt of the Isis theatre has returned from a month's vacation with the stars and producer in Hollywood. Mr. Iselt spent several days in the studios and witnessed the making of several big productions.

Greater Movie Ball went over with a bang according to Sam Abrams section of the Greater Movie Association (for Houston). A Houston lad in the garb of Jack Holt won first prize and the judges say that he was an exact double for the famous star.

Al Lever, manager of the Isis and Liberty theatres, has been host to his father, brother and sister-in-law for several weeks. They hail from Boston where Al first broke into the theatre game.

Cleveland

MRS. V. E. SAGER has sold her Southern Theatre, Akron to Miss Ethel Cooper, according to word received by the Film Board of Trade.

Meyer Fine and Abe Kramer, who recently announced the erection of a fine 2000-seat motion picture theatre at Broadview and West 25th St. now announce that they are going to build still another house this fall. It will be located on Kinsman Road at East 146th St. will have 1500 seats, and will play a combination vaudeville and picture policy. Nicola Petti of Cleveland is the architect. Work will be started on the Kinsman road house not later than October 15th. Fine and Kramer are both prominent local exhibitors and are heavily interested in the Ohio Amusement Company which operates a chain of a dozen prominent local neighborhood picture houses.

Frank Porzinski of the New Victory theatre, Cleveland, has just returned from the gold rush in Florida and reports that pickings are still good down there.

Paul Gusdanovic, who owns several local picture theatres and is now building some more, has gone to Florida in the interest of some property that he bought while on a previous trip there.

Manager Hoffman of theatres in Canton, Amsterdam and Alliance, is on his annual pilgrimage to the Ozark Mountains where he has a young brood of copper mines which are coming along very nicely, thank you.

Christie Deibel of the Liberty theatre, Youngstown, was in town last week swinging a mean golf stick at the Country Club. Deibel, captain of the Youngstown team won a tournament against a local team.

Forrest Templin, who has been managing the Duchess theatre in Warren has resigned to accept a position of the new Capitol Theatre in Steubenville. This is the new half million dollar house which is being erected by the Tri-State Amusement Company. It is scheduled to open on Labor Day.

Tom Birmingham of the Hazelton Dome theatre, Youngstown, is building a new picture house in the same town. He is literally building it. He dug the foundation himself. He is laying the brick himself. He's past the first story now, doing it when not on duty at the other theatre. He expects to get in under roof this fall, and during the winter, he will complete the inside work.

Leonard Hodgkin is a living proof of the fallacy of the old statement that you can't do two things at the same time. Hodgkin manages the Home theatre in Youngstown and at the same time attends law school in Washington, D. C. He's specializing in amusement law. Every two weeks he hops a train for Youngstown, sees that everything is being carried out according to his instructions and goes back to college. The beginning of the season he buys enough picture product to last until the Christmas holidays when he buys again to tide his house over until the next vacation period. Hodgkin began operating the Home theatre when he was fourteen years old, at a time when his father was taken ill. He's been doing it ever since, along with going to school.

Harry Rosenthal, manager of the Ohio Theatre, Ravenna, has just installed a new low intensity light system at a cost of $3000.

J. H. Ruben of the Strand theatre, Newton Falls, spent the week shopping. Among his purchases were a $6500 new organ and $3000 worth of new equipment.

New York and New Jersey

REPRESENTATIVES of the various big motion picture organizations in New York City at a well attended meeting last week took first steps toward formation of a baseball league, which, as now planned, will be all set and ready for a city schedule when the spring training season opens.

Those attending the meeting, and the prime movers in the proposed league, were, David Cassidy, Famous Players-Lasky; Harvey DuBois, United Artists Corporation; Fred Bullock, Jr., William Fox; Martin Hogan, First National; Philip Abrahams, Warner Brothers; George Ronan, Pathe; P. H. Cohen, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; and Ben Hyatt, Universal.

Fred Bullock, Jr., was chosen as temporary chairman, and Harvey DuBois, as temporary secretary. The general scope of the league organization was discussed at length, and it was decided that a permanent organization be formed at a meeting to be held early in October.

The representative of each company pledged that he would be personally responsible for seeing that a fully equipped baseball nine would be placed in the field next spring. At the next meeting the question of club rooms, training quarters, and the like will be settled.

The friends of George Bauman, manager of the Pioneer theatre, City, will regret to hear of the tragic death of Mrs. Bauman, resulting from an accident on a roller coaster at Coney Island. The accident occurred as the car was rounding a curve when Mrs. Bauman lost her balance and was swung out toward the supports by the speed of the car. Mr. Bauman did all in his power to help her regain the seat and had it not been for his efforts she would have fallen to the base of the structure. Mrs. Bauman suffered fracture of the skull and a broken spine and passed away the same day in the Coney Island Hospital where she was taken immediately after the accident.

Several more local theatre openings are reported. The old Rosehill theatre which has been closed for sometime has had its name changed to the Hollywood and will reopen on Saturday, August 29th, under the management of S. Rich. The Hollywood is located at 2nd Ave. and 27th Street. The Royal theatre on 13th Ave., Brooklyn, and operated by S. Michaels, will reopen in September after having a complete renovation. Keith's Bushwick opened last Monday and Moe Kerman's Bluebird theatre, out in Brownsville, had a most successful first night last Friday.

In these columns of last week the NEWS stated in error that Sam Zahler was operating several theatres under the firm name of the Rapthal Amusement Co. Mr. Zahler is no longer associated with these theatres, the officers of the Rapthal Amusement Co. being M. Bernstein, H. Turin and I. Kafko.

The Marcus's, whom readers will recall as having been recently married and both husband and wife bearing the same name before being married, have remodeled the Woodbridge theatre, a 600 seat house at Woodbridge, N. J., and had their opening last Thursday. Mrs. Marcus was formerly Secretary at the Jans Picture Corporation.

Ben Guttman, who has recently returned from a vacation, has, with his partner, Israel Sablove, bought the building at 2646 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn. This includes the Atlantic theatre at that address which they will completely renovate and continue to operate.

Alec Okin of Cranford, N. J., and who is also the successful operator of the Cranford theatre in that city, was in town Tuesday shopping for film. Alec and the auburn moustache have received considerable publicity of late, so much so that it is reported that Mr. Okin has consulted his lawyer and will in all probability take some drastic action in the direction of one Ed Carroll whose sign hangs up in the New Jersey division of the Associated Exhibitors Exchange. M r. Okin has stated that the charge will be defamation of moustache.

John Dacy, assistant manager to Bill Raynor of the Pathe New York Exchange, has returned from a very pleasant seventeen day vacation that he spent on the seventy-six-acre estate of his brother-in-law, down at Brookhaven, L. I. Mr. Dacy's brother-in-law is Charles Nelson, one of the executives of the Pictorial Review Co.

Recent callers among the exchanges include Rudy Gerard who operates a fine suburban theatre in Summerville, N. J., Fred Cross of the Rialto at Ridgefield Park, A. Hoffman, of the Park and Palace at Morristown, and John Metzger of the Rialto at Caldwell.

Aaron Saks, of the Associated Exhibitors sales staff is back from his vacation spent in the Adirondacks. While away he suffered extreme illness from contaminated water but is feeling well again at the present time.

Louis Goldberg of the M. & S. circuit was a busy man around the exchanges this week. Here and there and everywhere. He is opening the Mt. Morris theatre on Sept. 4th, and from all reports, M. & S. expect this house to be a most successful one.

The Madison, at Madison, N. J., will open about the 15th of September, and the Strand at Summit will follow along with its opening on October 15th. Both of these houses belong to Fred Faulkner.

Jos. Stern has broken ground for a new 1800 seat theatre in Cranford, N. J., and is also reported as looking about for a theatre site in Red Bank.

Milton Kronacker of the Pathe sales force had a very successful week. He disposed of one watch and three motometers. Next week he plans to have on hand a nice assortment of pocket knives.

Recent installations made by Howell's include Miss Gloria Gould's New Embassy which has its opening scheduled for August 22nd, the Kinema, Rosenzweig and Katz's latest theatre and the twelfth in their circuit, the Cumberland in Brooklyn, owned by the Brandt Brothers and the Inwood, Sol Brill's new theatre in the Dyckman Heights section of New York City. According to reports, Mr. Brill is spending a great deal of money on this theatre and to the extent that it will compare with the Broadway houses.

Rachmiel and Rinsler separated last Wednesday—but only for two weeks. Hyman Rachmiel is vacationing in the mountains.

Morris Sussman, general manager for Sydney Cohen has left on a two weeks' vacation through the New England States and Canada. Reports have it that Morris cleaned up enough at the Rockaway boom to take him around the world several times.

Joe Hornstein left last Friday on a ten days' trip to Memphis, Tenn., where he will attend the Motion Picture Supply Dealers' meeting.

Seattle

$10,000 in redecorating, recarpeting and renovating will be spent by John Hamrick, owner of the Blue Mouse Theatre of this city, on his house within the coming few weeks, according to reports made public last week. Work will be done without interrupting performances at any time, it is planned, and special apparatus and appurtenances are being obtained to make possible this plan. The Blue Mouse will be five years old in December, and the present renovating is the first complete overhauling that the house has had in that time.

N. E. Huff, owner and manager of the Dream Theatre in Coeur D'Alene, Idaho, was a recent visitor in this city last week, for the first time in many months. Mr. Huff, accompanied by Mrs. Huff, drove to Seattle and return on a combined business and pleasure trip.

L. K. Brin, theatre magnate of the Pacific Northwest, who has been leasing numerous houses in the Pacific Northwest in the interests of Warner Brothers, was scheduled to leave this week on a short trip to a number of smaller cities in Western Washington. His first stop was to be at Port Angeles, where negotiations are under way for the leasing of one of that town's newest houses.

A. J. Sullivan, former booker at the Producers' Distributing Corporation exchange here, last week resigned that position and has returned to the Metro-Goldwyn office, under the management of Seth D. Perkins. Mr. Sullivan was formerly connected with the Goldwyn exchange, when it was managed by Mr. Perkins prior to the amalgamation with Metro. Following the combine, both Mr. Perkins and Mr. Sullivan joined the P. D. C. office, and now both are again associated with their first organization.

THE Fall tournament of the Midwest Golf Association, will held at the Bob-O-Link Golf Club, Highland Park, on September 16th. There will be the same number of events and the usual liberal prize list, so that even a larger number of film men than enjoyed the first two tournaments, is expected to participate. Bob-O-Link is one of the most exclusive and one of the very few "men only" clubs in the United States and the course is unsurpassed. Chairman R. C. Seery of the committee, urges those who desire to play to get their entries in early as only a limited number can be accommodated.

Archie Spencer, well known film salesman, is now connected with Warner Brothers and has been assigned to the south side territory.

Fred C. Dierking, who is interested in theatres located in Chicago and one in Fox River Grove, announces that he will build a 900 seat theatre, office and apartment building in Crystal Lake, Illinois, and that Architect Behrens already has plans under way for the new house.

Edward Grossman is representing Architect R. Levine and others, who have associated themselves to build and finance theatres, and for the present is making his headquarters in New York City, where he expects to open offices.

The death of Mrs. M. A. Osborn of Monmouth, who for many years conducted the Family Theatre of that city, is generally regretted in film circles. Although suffering from ill health for many years, much of her time being spent in a wheel chair, Mrs. Osborn had a cheery smile and greeting for every one, which will be missed not only by patrons of her theatre, but by visiting exchange men.

F. O. Nielson, veteran film salesman, is now selling for Pathe and has been assigned to south side territory.

J. A. Seinson has resigned as manager of Warner Brothers Chicago exchange. While Mr. Steinson has not made any announcement as to his future plans, it is rumored that he will become interested in the real estate business in Florida. Mr. Steinson, regarded in Chicago film circles as one of the most able and respected men connected with the industry, was for some years manager of Vitagraph's Chicago exchange and upon the merger of this company with Warner Brothers, was retained by the latter as exchange manager. According to Divisional Manager Eddie Silverman, of Warner Brothers, announcement of Mr. Steinson's successor cannot be expected for a week or ten days.

Brunhild Brothers are redecorating and improving their Temp, which has been operating but Theatre at 5241 N. Clark Street, three days a week, and expect to get back on their full time basis the early part of September.

Simon Simansky has returned from a trip to Elkart Lake, Wisconsin, where he had been vacationing for the past few days in the company of his wife and daughter.

Dave Dubin, for the past four and one-half years connected with Educational's Chicago exchange, as salesman and later sales manager, has been appointed exchange manager as successor to I. Maynard Schwartz, resigned. Mr. Schwartz became manager of the exchange when it opened five years ago, and his resignation came as a surprise to film row. Dave Dubin, one of the most popular film men in the Chicago territory, has been Mr. Schwartz's right hand man during his long connection with the exchange, and his promotion is well deserved. Mr. Dubin has been connected with the film business for more than fourteen years, having started as an operator at the Little Boulevard Theatre on Taylor Street, after which he went with Abe Warner, and then with Mutual. Mr. Dubin's next step was to Bell & Howell's production department, where he took the first picture with a Bell & Howell camera, the location being Williams Bay. To round out his 100% experience as a film man, he conducted the Thome and Clarendon Theatres and was three years with Joe Friedman of Celebrated Players as a salesman, going from there to Educational.

Pathe has found it necessary to build two new vaults due to the increase in product. W. W. Kofeldt, local manager, is also making changes in the office, partitioning it off, so that his stenographer will be in practically the same office, while George Knowles, his assistant will have an office adjoining.

Tommy Thompson has become salesman for the Louis T. Dow Co. an advertising specialty company.

Ed Dolan, owner and manager of the D. and R. Theatre in Aberdeen, spent a few days on Film Row last week, reporting that Greater Movie Season had begun in his territory and was apparently meeting with success as most of the houses in the Grays' Harbor country.

H. A. Black, manager of the Warner Brothers exchange, announced last week that William Rankin, former salesman for L. O. Lukan's Universal exchange, had joined the Warner Brothers organization, and would represent them in a sales capacity in the state of Washington generally.

Announcement was made at the First National exchange last week to the effect that J. W. Parry, former booker and office manager at Metro-Goldwyn had assumed that same position with First National. Harold Boehme, who has held that office for the last season, will again go on the road for Manager Fred G. Sliter's exchange according to present plans.

Charles W. Harden, manager of the United Artists office, has just returned to his office from a short sales trip around the local territory.

Albany

ANOTHER change came to Film Row during the past week, resulting in Jacob Klein, of Boston, succeeding Samuel Burns, as manager of the Warner Brothers exchange. Mr. Burns has not made any connections up to the present time but may go to New York to become associated with one of the companies there. The change came out of a clear sky and the first intimation that Mr. Burns received was when Mr. Klein arrived in town and announced that he would henceforth handle the exchange.

Morris Silverman, who runs the Happy Hour and Pearl theatres in Schenectady, is planning to erect a 900-seat house next spring that will take the place of the time-honored Pearl, which will be closed. The two houses, although small, have been a good business venture for Mr. Silverman during the years that have passed, enabling him to acquire a comfortable fortune.

George Dwore, who is running the Cameo, in Schenectady, a seventeen cent house, never books a western picture, claiming that his audiences demand society dramas. That Cameo is never run on Sundays, although the theatres in the rest of the city operate that day and generally make enough to meet any setbacks that may occur during the week. Mr. Dwore explains things by saying that residents in the section where he is located are solidly against a house operating in their midst on Sunday, although admitting that they frequently journey downtown for their Sunday night entertainment at other houses.

Cohen and Kornblite, of Binghamton, with seven theatres in that city and Endicott, are planning to remodel the Stone, in Binghamton, next spring. The State theatre in Schenectady is being redecorated at the present time, the furniture also being reupholstered. The Albany theatre in Schenectady, may be closed for two or three weeks in September for renovation, during which time its program of entertainment will be transferred to the Barcli which is scheduled to reopen the latter part of August or the forepart of September. The projection machines in the Barcli are now being overhauled. When the house is reopened it will change its program each day.

William Shirley, a former well known exhibitor in Schenectady, returned last week from Florida, where it is understood he made arrangements for the erection of apartment houses in Miami. Mr. Shirley expects to return to Florida almost immediately and may make his home permanently there. Myer Freedman, who is associated with Mr. Shirley in Schenectady, and who is now in the real estate business, is also planning to go to Miami in the near future, probably making the trip by automobile.

Ruth Stonehouse, now playing in "Wives of the Prophet" which is being produced by J. A. Fitzgerald Productions, Inc.

Examination revealed that they had jimmied the door leading into the private office and likewise had broken into a case containing several rolls of tickets. They carried off nothing. Constance Pedone, cashier at the Strand, is at a hospital in Schenectady, recovering from a recent operation for apendicitis.

Samuel Goldstein, of the Utica Theatre Corporation with houses in that city as well as a chain in Massachusetts, was in Albany the other day. Mr. Goldstein has a large farm in Massachusetts that is one of the show places of the region and on which he is a breeder of blooded stock.

Charles Walder's wife is in Miami, having preceded her husband there by a few weeks and whose real estate earnings are said to have largely influenced Mr. Walder's tendering his resignation recently as manager of the Fox exchange in Albany. Mrs. Walder is said to have cleaned up not less than $5,000 during her first week in Florida.

James Shultis opened Studio Hall in Woodstock on August 18.

William Morris, the well known theatrical manager, cabled fifty dollars recently to Dave Seymour, of the Pontiac in Saranac Lake, as a contribution to a benefit Mr. Seymour was giving for a local charity.

Among visitors in town during the week were Charles Charles, formerly of Albany, now manager of the Paramount exchange in Wilkesbarre, Pa.; John Rock, general manager for Vitagraph, and H. L. Berinstein, of Elmira, who is associated with his brothers in handling the several theatres in the Berinstein circuit. The Van Curler in Schenectady, a Berinstein house, reopened Monday night with A. J. Rachell as manager. Julius Berinstein announced during the week that managers for the Colonial and the Hudson theatres in Albany would be named from his own organization.

Oscar Perrin, who recently resigned as manager of the Buckley houses in Albany, was named last week as manager of the Capitol theatre, an Albany house, that will split weeks between burlesque and road shows. He succeeds Edward Lyons who has returned to New York. Herman Vineberg, manager of the Mark Strand in Albany, was named during the week as manager of the Albany and Regent theatres, acquired from the Sucknos. Mr. Vineberg will be succeeded by Tony Veiller, who has been handling the Lincoln in Troy, and who in turn will be succeeded by Ben Stern, assistant manager of the Troy theatre.

Walter Hays, of Buffalo, former president of the New York State M. P. T. O., was in town on Tuesday on his way back from the White Mountains.

Myer Schine, one of the heads of the Schine circuit, is to forsake the ranks of bachelorhood on August 30, when he will claim Miss Feldman of Johnstown as his bride.

The deal whereby Famous Players was to acquire the Farley holdings in Schenectady, is said to be still hanging fire, although with the possibility of consummation in the near future. As a result of this the Farley houses are now booking pictures only from week to week.

Bob Wagner, former manager of the well known Gateway theatre in Little Falls, made his appearance on Film Row last week in a new role. Mr. Wagner is now the representative for Renown and knowing the exhibitors as he does, he has been given audiences by many with whom film salesmen generally have hard sledding.

Irving Goldsmith, of Saratoga Springs, a former deputy Attorney-General, and part owner of one of the leading motion picture theatres in that city, came out last week with the announcement that he will run for the State Assembly on the Democratic ticket this fall.

J. B. Hart, of Bennington, Vt., owner of two theatres in that city, was along Film Row during the week. Mr. Hart went to Florida last winter and is said to have taken a small capital with him, which he turned over several times in real estate deals.

Mrs. Elizabeth Meeker announces that the Casino in Waterford will reopen the first week in September.

At the Olympic in Watertown last week, there was a personal presentation of the young woman who will represent that city at the Atlantic City Beauty Pageant in September. The presentation was made by A. B. Parker, manager of one of the newspapers in that city, the whole effecting an exceptionally good tie-up for the theatre.

The Graylin theatre, in Gouverneur, a Papayanakos house, switched from pictures last week while the county fair was in progress and presented a stock company with a change in program each night.

Claude Wade, of North Creek, owner of a theatre there as well as a hotel, is said to employ one of the best systems of bookkeeping of any theatre owner in the Adirondack region. Business has been exceptionally good with Mr. Wade this summer both at his hotel and the theatre.

William Smalley, of Cooperstown, has as his guest these days his mother and sister from Connecticut.

C. L. Gardner, of the Pine Hills theatre in Albany, encourages pipe smoking among his men patrons, providing a balcony where the men may go and enjoy a smoke as they watch the picture. As a result Mr. Gardner draws a heavy trade from among the men of the neighborhood, who generally bring their wives to view the picture on the lower floor.

Charles Dery, manager of the Empire theatre in Port Henry, and who recently adopted a three months old child, is now said to be considering adopting another as a companion to the first.

According to reports, Nate Robbins, who recently sold his chain of houses to Famous Players, but who was retained as manager, is to receive a handsome salary.

Albert Victor Howson, new head of Literary department of Warner Bros.

A GENUINE POWER'S PRODUCT

POWER'S INCANDESCENT EQUIPMENT

ADVANTAGES

1. Adaptability

An arc lamp gives a whiter, steadier, more effective light on direct current than on alternating current. Since the current supply to the theatre is usually alternating it is necessary to use an expensive motor-generator set to convert to direct current.

The MAZDA lamp operates equally well on alternating and direct current and with equal illumination.

2. Steadiness

The MAZDA lamp provides a constant source of light. The intensity of illumination on the screen does not change. The MAZDA lamp does not vary in intensity and operates always in a fixed position. It assures continuous uniformity of screen illumination. This combination greatly reduces the possibility of eye strain.

3. Simplicity

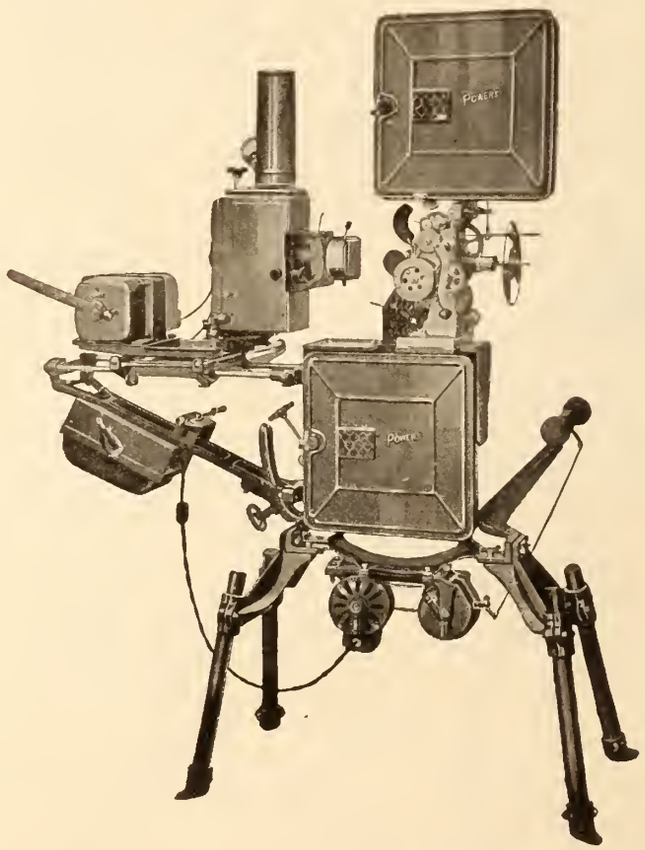
The projectionist has no adjustments to make during operation. After the initial setting, no change is necessary during the life of the lamp. This permits more attention to the other details of presenting the picture in a successful manner.

4. Cleanliness

The MAZDA lamp is a hermetically sealed light source and because of its greater cleanliness inspires a cleaner general condition in the projection room.

5. Economy

The 900-watt MAZDA lamp compares favorably with a 40-amp. direct current arc. The advantage from an illuminating standpoint is in favor of the MAZDA lamp. Assuming an alternating current source of supply, the arc requires 60 volts at 50 amperes, and with converter losses, consumes 4 kw. per hour. The MAZDA lamp (including all losses) requires approximately 1 kw. per hour. The power bill is, therefore, cut to about one-fourth.



6. Utility

The new Incandescent Equipment can be used successfully in theatres having a main floor seating capacity up to 1,000 or having up to 16-ft. picture, or having a throw of approximately 100 feet. It gives better results than an alternating current arc and is the equal of the direct current arc up to 40 amps.

Power's Incandescent Equipment represents eight years' development and test in laboratories and theatres. It is therefore now possible to offer a reliable projection device, using a MAZDA lamp as the source of light, not only for theatres but also for schools, lodge rooms, community centers, and industrial establishments.

IMPROVEMENTS and REFINEMENTS

Moulded Composition Knobs and Handles Thruout, and a New and Superior Vertical Adjustment on the Lamphouse. The Slideover Tracks are now Cold Rolled Steel, accurately finished and securely fastened to the top of the base casting.

Crystallized Lacquer Finish replaces plain Japan finish—all steel parts are Dull or Polished Nickel-plated. New Mirror and Power's Aspheric Condenser Mount are much superior to those heretofore supplied.

Beverly Theatre One of West Coast's Finest

California House Follows East-Indian Design; Elaborately Decorated and Appointed

AGAIN the West Coast adds to its ever increasing number of the country's finest theatres—and it can safely be added the world's finest. The West Coast Theatres, Inc., is responsible for one of California's most outstanding picture palaces built this year, which is as might be expected when it is recalled that this Company announced a several million dollar appropriation for theatre expansion during 1925.

It is of interest to note upon inspection of the photographs of the new Beverly Theatre, Beverly Hills, California, that once more California turns to architectural design patterned after the Far East; in this particular case East Indian design. The survey of the more recent theatres built in California would probably show an absolute lack of architectural treatment other than Spanish, Egyptian, Indian and the like. It still remains for some exhibitor to introduce an actual innovation among more important California theatres by designing some house along lines followed generally in the Eastern part of the country. However, under the influence of California atmosphere it remains a question whether the architecture of Eastern theatres would prove a popular adjunct to California show places.

Rising majestically at the intersection of two of Southern California's most traveled boulevards, and right in the center of the Movie Colony, the new Beverly theatre, owned and operated by the Hollywood Theatres, Inc., associated with the West Coast Theatres, Inc., recently opened in gala display. A large number attended the opening, and among those present were many of Filmdom's most notable stars and screen celebrities. Director Fred Niblo was Master of Ceremonies, and was introduced by Executive Director J. L. Swope, of the Hollywood Theatres, Inc. Mr. Niblo called upon all the stars who were present to appear before the spotlight. The important officials of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., including Messrs. M. Gore, President; A. L. Gore, Vice-President; Sol Lesser, Secretary and Adolph Ramish, Treasurer, were also introduced.

The big theatre, as noted in the photograph, is of strict East-Indian design, with the same motif followed out in the auditorium. Architecturally speaking, it is without question one of the most magnificent show palaces in the entire country, and in decorative scheme is wonderful.

Part of the equipment consists of a huge Wurlitzer Orchestral pipe organ. An eight-piece orchestra will be part of the house staff.

Three views of the new Beverly theatre recently opened by the West Coast Theatres, Inc., and Hollywood Theatres, Inc., at Hollywood, California. Note that the theatre is of strict East Indian design which is also followed out in the auditorium. E. S. Kuykendall is the resident manager under the supervision of J. Leslie Swope, Executive Director of Hollywood Theatres, Inc.

Importance of Lobby Wall Cases as Good Will Builders

By WM. F. LIBMAN, Pres. Libman-Spanjer Corp.

IN previous articles the writer has covered the subjects of the human leaning toward attractiveness, the psychology of pictures and mirrors, the value of lobby display, and the need for just the right kind of ticket booth. This, in following out the course of lobby subjects in the order in which they are laid out in the theatre, brings us up to the lobby wall case.

If ever there was an article built which served its purpose fully one hundred per cent, that article is the theatre wall-case. Practical, artistic, useful and ornamental, the wall-case has proven a boon wherever installed.

It is in the designing, and building of the up-to-date wall case that the contribution of the lobby frame maker to the art of theatre building makes itself most noticeable.

Where but a few years ago a simple frame of commercial stock moulding was considered "good enough," today we find lobbies that are visited and admired for their beauty alone, so great is the combined appeal which lies in the gilded carving, glittering mirrors, rich velvet, and sparkling French plate that go into the making of the modern wall case. Whether it is to cover up an awkward area of wall space, or to hide an ugly section of lobby architecture, the wall frame case lends itself with admirable grace and practical purpose.

As a container or holder of photographs, lithographs, posters or announcements, the wall frame is indispensable. Add to this utilitarian value the inclusion of attractive mirrors and artistic bracket chandeliers, the place which the wall case has made for itself in the lobby of today is an important one indeed.

There are so many designs and adaptations as well as uses for wall cases that a chapter on each could well be written. The most popular series of this lobby requisite is the combination mirror and poster frame which is designed in types ranging all the way from the simple glass front with plain moulding to the heavy magnificently decorated and artistically lighted polychrome and gilded carving of the Empire, Cathedral, Tudor, and other periodic units.

The purpose of the wall case is two-fold. First of all it affords a practical medium for display, and secondly it arrests the attention of the prospective as well as the actual patron. Its mirrors particularly prove their lure to the gentler sex. In these days of indiscriminate use of make up, there are few ladies who do not linger if but a moment in front of a friendly garment as they enter or leave the theatre. To prove this, it is only necessary to stand in a theatre lobby at the close of a performance.

With the popularity and necessity of the mirror established, what better place then could be devised for the showing of photographs, posters and announcements than alongside these popular mirror spots?

The successful designer and maker of the best wall frames has standardized on the frames which are provided to contain or hold these photos and posters. Where formerly the pictorial or announcement matter was tacked up within the wall case with thumb tacks, (which method was untidy, destructive and unattractive) today the wall cases are equipped with individual frames in units, each of them slotted so that the photo may be slipped into them and transforms the wall case at once into a group of uniformly framed pictures. That these cases do much to bring business to the theatre has been demonstrated time and again.

The writer is reminded of a theatre which was recently opened in a certain section of New York City. In this case a location long occupied by a large market was selected. The entrance of the old market adapted itself perfectly for lobby purposes. But the walls were lined from floor to ceiling with glazed white tile that admirably served its purpose as a sanitary feature of a market, but certainly had no place in the decorative scheme of a theatre.

To tear out this tiling and substitute marble, panelling or other architectural medium involved the spending of much money and considerable time. A group of combination wall cases were designed, and erected, while the tiling space in between these cases was covered with a polychrome coating to harmonize with the frames. Today this lobby could not be improved upon for attractiveness if ten thousand dollars had been spent on its complete renovation or rebuilding. In this case a sum little over $1,000 did the work.

The proper lighting of these wall cases too is an important item which is just beginning to get its due attention which the writer will cover in another article.

New $90,000 Theatre to Be Built in Hawthorne, Cal.

A new $90,000 theatre building will be built in Hawthorne, Calif., according to plans which have recently been completed. The theatre will be erected on the corner of Balloua avenue and Hawthorne Blvd., and have a seating capacity of 1,100. Mr. D. B. Vanderlip will be associated with the Venice Investment Co. and the West Coast Theatres, Inc., in building the new theatre building.

High Class Theatre to Be Built in Bergen, N. J.

West Bergen, N. J. is to have another high class theatre which will seat 1,500 persons. The theatre building will be erected at West Side and Communipaw avenues. The plans for this theatre have been drawn by George Flagg.

Work to Start on $500,000 San Francisco Theatre

A. SAMUELS has announced that work will begin in two weeks on a $500,000 theatre, market and stores project on the east side of Fivisadero street, between Hayes and Grove, San Francisco, a property sold to Milton H. Lees and Samuel H. Levin for $200,000. Buldings on the southeast ocrner of Dvisadero and Hayes, with a frontage of 75 ft. on Hayes and a depth of 82 feet, wll be torn down to make room for the "Divisadero Public Market," part of the Less-Levin project. New ornamental street lighting will surround the enterprise.

The Peerless Reflector Arc Lamp provides the intense screen brilliancy in hundreds of the biggest and finest theaters in this country. Peerless Lamps are installed in these theaters because they give twice the light ordinary arc lamps give and spread it evenly over the entire surface of the screen. Peerless light, is an asset to your program—not a liability as the average arc. Not only do you get greatly increased light, but the Peerless Lamp, being a low amperage arc, saves 50% to 70% of your current cost and at least 70% of your carbon cost.

You can test the Peerless without cost on your own screen—send the coupon.

There are more Peerless Lamps in daily use than any other reflector arc lamp.

R. P. Elliot Named General Manager of Welte Organ Business

THE Welte-Mignon Corporation of New York has elected R. P. Elliot vice-president of the Corporation and general manager of their organ business. Elliot's previous connection was with the W. W. Kimball Company of Chicago, where he was manager of the organ division. Announcement has already been made that corporate control of the Hall Organ Company of West Haven, Connecticut, now rests with the Estey-Welte Corporation. No change in the officers of the Hall Company is contemplated, but it is obvious that the Welte connection is a matter of importance.

The Welte-Mignon Corporation, owns basic patents; and the Welte Library of recorded organ music is known throughout the music world. The new Welte organ factory adjoins the piano factory of the Estey Piano Company in New York. Both of these corporations are also owned by the Estey-Welte Corporation, and Mr. Gittins is the president of all of them.

Though comparatively a young man, Mr. Elliot's history covers the entire period of development of the modern organ. He started in with Granville Wood & Son, who, in the next year, became the foundation of the Farrand & Votey Organ Company, which shortly took over the Roosevelt patents and personnel, from which organization the Acolian organ grew. He interested the first financial investments which established the Austin Organ Company, of which he was secretary and vice-president for years, selling his interest and also resigning the presidency of the Kinetic Engineering Company, which he had founded meanwhile, to take up an engineering career, eventually becoming a member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers.

The call of his old profession was too strong; however, and he returned to this country from England in 1909, to re-enter and remain in the organ business.

Washington, D. C., Residents Form Theatre Company

Residents of the northeast residential section of Washington, D. C., have formed the West Woodridge Theatre Company, Inc., which will build a theatre, store and office building in the neighborhood of Sixteenth street and Rhode Island Avenue. Stock in the amount of $100,000 is to be sold at $10 per share, and construction of the house will begin about September 15.

The theatre will have a capacity of 830. The building will be of fireproof construction, 55 feet wide, 166 feet long, and will contain two stores on the first floor and four offices or a hall on the second floor. W. S. Plager is the architect. A cash prize is offered to the child who submits the most acceptable name for the house.

The prospectus put out by the company estimates the receipts from the proposed theatre at $100 per night or $600 per week, against which there will be running expenses of $387 per week and fixed expenses for interest, taxes, insurance, etc., of $4,500 a year, leaving an annual net profit of $9,576.

Motion Picture House to Be Erected at Mt. Vernon

Plans are being drawn for a beautiful new theatre to be erected at the corner of First and Kincaid streets, Mt. Vernon, Washington. The structure will be of brick and tile. It has been intimated that the theatre department of the building has been leased to a Port Angeles theatre man.

Redding, Cal., to Have New Theatre Building

Chester Cole and E. Brouchard architects are drawing plans for new theatre to be erected in the Red Front Building in Market street near Butte, Redding, California. The theatre to be installed by J. H. Wood, manager of the Redding theatre.

One Thing More

In your modern motion picture house every detail of projection, decoration, ventilation, temperature, seating, has been carefully worked out to make the theatre attractive and comfortable.

But there's one thing more you can do—and it's a real factor from the box office point of view: make sure the picture is printed on Eastman Positive Film, the film that safeguards for the screen the quality of the negative so your public may enjoy it.

Eastman film is identified in the margin by the black-lettered words "Eastman" and "Kodak"

Inquiries and Comments

Lens Trouble

ARTHUR ALLEN, who confesses to being an "Operator" at the Lyric Theatre, Traverse City, Michigan, writes in asking for information about the causes for poor screen definition, without at the same time giving much information which would enable us to diagnose his trouble. Apparently, Friend Allen suspects us of supernatural powers whereby we can by merely knowing the nature of his trouble, instantly point out its cause and name a remedy.

His letter reads like this:

Dear Sir:

I am having considerable trouble getting a sharp picture on my screen so I am writing you with the hope that you can help me out. Would you please give me information as to what causes my picture to be slightly out of focus in the center and clear on the outer edges? Also, how can I remedy this?

I keep my objective lens very clean and no matter what I do I can not focus a sharp picture over the screen.

Would appreciate your help very much.

Very truly yours,

ART. ALLEN.

Number of Causes

Well, Friend Allen, we would say that there are a number of things which might cause the trouble you describe and it will have to be a matter of guesswork on our part to answer your questions.

In the first place, a heavy projection angle (projector off center with respect to perpendicular center-line of screen) would prevent you from getting a sharp focus over the entire picture area. This for the simple reason that any lens can only focus sharply in one given plane at a time. Thus, if the centerline of the projector beam is at an angle with the perpendicular centerline of the screen, it will be impossible to focus all parts of the picture simultaneously on the screen. This assumes, of course, that the screen is standing upright, and is not tilted, which is normally the case.

Under this condition if the center of the picture is sharply focussed, the edges will be out of focus and if the top is in focus the center and lower edge will be blurred, etc.

The focussing of any given picture area is thus secured at a sacrifice of definition in the remaining picture areas.

Of course, while this is strictly true for any angle, however slight, on small angles (up to about 12 degrees) the lack of definition in some parts of the picture is not readily noticeable but about 12 degrees it becomes increasingly bad.

Wrong Assembly

That is one cause of poor picture definition. Whether or not it applies to your case we do not know for there is not much to go on in your letter.

You mention being particular about keeping your lenses clean, so there is a strong possibility that there is just where your trouble lies. It frequently happens that when dissembling a projection lens for cleaning purposes the lens elements are wrongly replaced with respect to each in the lens barrel. There are a number of ways for wrongly assembling these lens elements and no doubt herein lies the source of your trouble.

The objective lens commonly employed for projection purposes is of the Petzval type. It consists of two principal lens combinations, one for correcting spherical aberration, the other for correcting chromatic aberration. The spacing between these two combinations, by the way, influences the equivalent focal length of the objective lens since, ordinarily the farther apart they are, the greater will be the E. F.

The rear lens combination (the one nearest the aperture) consists of one crown glass and one flint glass lens, nested together but with an air space between the lens elements and since it is possible to remove both of these elements from their holder, it may be that in replacing the elements their position with respect to each other may have been reversed. Or it is possible that the entire combination (two lenses) may have been turned about in the lens barrel which would again destroy the correction.

The front combination (nearest the screen) is a cemented doublet, the curvature of both adjacent lens surfaces being the same so as to secure a close nesting after which the two surfaces are brought into optical contact by means of Canada balsam which acts to cement the individual elements.

The only possibility for incorrect assembly here lies in reversing the position of the entire combination since, to all intents and purposes there is but one lens.

It is highly important in replacing the various lens elements, after their removal from the barrel and holders for cleaning purposes, to make certain that each and every element is returned to its exact former position as otherwise the effect on the screen picture will be disastrous. The reversal of but a single element will destroy the correction of the combinations and will result in the effects you describe, i. e.: poor screen definition.

The general rule to follow when re-assembling the elements of a projection lens is this: All those lens surfaces having the greatest convexity should face toward the screen.

So, Friend Allen, if in your zeal to have clean lens surfaces, you dissembled the elements, thinking to return them to their proper position you had better go over the job again and make certain that every element meets the rule quoted above. It is fairly safe to say that your trouble lies here.

An Old Argument

This subject brings to mind another question which was a bone of contention in the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and furnished much food for argument.

One side held that it was possible to have poor picture definition even though the objective lens was not at fault due to some peculiar quality in the light from the lamp. The other side held that screen definition is purely a function of the objective lens assuming, of course, a sharply defined object to start with.

The first side in supporting their claims spoke vaguely of "parallox" and some such similar animals arguing that if a "point source" of light could be obtained, no objective lens at all would be required since then a true image of the film picture, sharply defined, would be shown on the screen similar to that formed by a pinhole in a piece of cardboard.

Theory vs. Practice

Such reasoning is well enough as far as it goes but the hitch lies in the fact that a "point source" is purely hypothetical and is merely a creature of the brain devised in the early days of optical study in an effort to satisfactorily explain the action of lenses and mirrors.

The study of optics has since outgrown this purely theoretical consideration of light sources to such an extent that it is entirely useless as an aid in explaining optical phenomena.

Light sources should be looked upon as being extended areas endowed with surface brightness, which in truth they are, and when so considered it is possible to explain all optical phenomena satisfactorily. Such explanations can be backed up with tests to prove their correctness.

In closing this discussion we would like to give as our opinion that the matter of screen picture definition is purely a function of the objective lens and that nothing beyond the aperture in the way of light sources or condenser lenses can in any way affect the quality of picture definition.

The only action such elements can possibly have on the quality of picture on the screen is that of even screen illumination and intensity of illumination.

If your picture definition is not all it should be, then the first thing to investigate is the objective lens, not the light source.

Let Lighting Boost Box-Office Receipts

Just give lighting a chance to show you what it can do as it has shown other theatres operating under conditions no different from yours.

The results of using National MAZDA lamps for each theatre lighting job, are frequently immediate — and surprising. And they all have their effect on the box office.

Enough light in your sign and marquee to pull crowds your way—a flood of light in your lobby—generous light inside, that can be dimmed down well below screen brightness—that's good theatre lighting.

Color lighting will help to give that feeling of restfulness and create the proper moods so necessary to the success of any picture.

And most important of all. You can have remarkable projection at a considerable saving in cost with the National MAZDA Motion Picture lamp. May we tell you about it?

Plans Completed for Theatre in Sterling, Ill.

Plans for a new $40,000 vaudeville and motion picture theatre have been completed to be erected by William Tifft and William Schrader in Sterling, Illinois. The architects who have drawn the plans are Bradley & Bradley, Brown Building, Sterling, Ill. There will be office suites over the front half of the building. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 800 persons.

Uptown Theatre, Chicago, Opened by Balaban and Katz.

BALABAN & KATZ new motion picture palace, the Uptown, opened to the Chicago pnblic recently, and in size, beauty of design and elaborateness of decoration and equipment, is unsurpassed in Chicago.

It is located at Lawrence Avenue and Broadway, across the street from the Riviera which, for the past six years, has been Balaban & Katz's northside show house and during that period has become too small to accommodate the crowds which throng it nightly.

The great central uptown district, of which the theatre named for it becomes the amusement center, was so interested in the opening of the new house, that an elaborate pageant under the auspices of the Central Uptown Business Men's Association, was held in celebration of the event and lasted throughout the week.

Probably no theatre has been opened nnder more favorable auspices or with a greate amount of publicity, and on the day of its initial performance crowds blocked streets and filled the acre of seats throughout the day and evening.

The Uptown Theatre covers a city block of land and is Spanish Renaissance in design, after the plans of the architects, C. W. and George L. Rapp, the previous Balaban & Katz houses, the Tivoli, Riviera and Chicago, also designed by the same architects, having been French in architecture.

The structure is L shape with a grand lobby fronting sixty feet on Broadway and running back one hundred and twenty feet to the main auditorium. From Magnolia Avenue, there is also an entrance lobby.

The main auditorium is two hundred and thirteen feet in length and one hundred and seventy feet in width, with a ninety-two foot ceiling and some seventeen thousand electric light bulbs are used in the theatre, controlled by a multi-colored system dimmer board back stage.

The orchestra pit will hold sixty musicians and is on an immense elevator platform permitting the entire body of musicians to be raised or lowered as the program requires.

There are thirty-six feet of working space on the stage behind the picture screen, giving room for the staging of the largest productions.

One of the largest Wurlitzer organs yet built has been installed with a console which can be elevated as desired.

With the opening of the Uptown Theatre, Balaban & Katz are inaugurating a new system of alternating orchestra leaders and organists in their different houses and each week patrons will hear different talent. Nathaniel Finston, Leopold Spitalny and Adolph Dumont will be the leaders to circle from theatre to theatre and the organists with them will be Jesse Crawford, Milton Charles and Albert Hay Malotte.

The premier program was typical of the entertainment offered in the B. & K. houses and included Tschaikowsky's "Capriccio Italienne," as the overture, with Nathaniel Finston wielding the baton; some fine syncopation specialties by the Oriole Orchestra of the Edgewater Beach Hotel; "Spain," a scenic; Weekly News Views; Jesse Crawford at the Wurlitzer Grand Organ, the musical production, "Under Spanish Skies," to harmonize with the Spanish motive which has been carried out in the architecture, and the feature picture "The Lady Who Lied."

Comedy art card displayed by Manager L. A. Rogers of the Tivoli theatre, Chattanooga, in connection with "Introduce Me" (Associate Exhibits).

New Theatres Being Erected on West Coast

Theatre construction on the Coast continues brisk, work having been started on a $500,000 theatre in San Francisco, plans for a two thousand seat house in the same city have been completed and a site secured and in Fresno the White theatre is to be redecorated at an approximate cost of $30,000.

A. W. Thresher of Wasco built and opened the New Wasco Theatre recently. It is a modern fireproof structure with a seating capacity of over 600, comfortably equipped throughout, and an especially pleasing feature is the indirect lighting system which permits the effects so necessary to picture presentation at the present time. A large orchestra pit contains the organ while the high ceiling and acoustics of the new building give full opportunity to the tone of the instrument.

Work was begun Aug. 22nd on a $500,000 theatre, market and store project on the east side of Divisadero street between Hayes and Grove, by Milton H. Lees and Samuel H. Levin following their purchase of the site. The site of the project which has a frontage of 162 feet 6 inches on Divisadero and a depth of 137 feet 6 inches was acquired for a consideration said to have been $200,000 in a deal conducted by Louis T. Samuels.

Max Blumenfeld has purchased an entire block of land and has completed plans for his Daylight block, with large public market and 2,000 seat theatre to be erected immediately on Taraval, near 29th Ave., in the center of the new business activity in the Parkside district. Reid Bros. are the architects. Planning for projection equipment and stage is being done by W. G. Preddy, who will outfit this theatre.

W. B. Armstrong and Robert E. Power of the Armstrong Power Studios, stopped at Fresno while en route to the Northwest and closed a contract for the redecoration of the old White Theatre, which the West Coast Theatres plan reopening Sept. 6th with Orpheum Vaudeville. It is planned to spend in the neighborhood of $30,000 for the redecoration, reconstruction and modernization of this theatre.

The Grove Theatre at Pacific Grove, a new 1,000 seat house, opened August 15th, under the management of A. Keller, who has so capably handled the Monterey Theatre Company's houses. Seating throughout was handled by the C. F. Weber Co., stage equipment by the Western Scenic Studios of Oakland, a growing and enterprising concern whose work is creating considerable comment; booth equipment by Tex Coombs; a Wurlitzer organ, while the interior decorating, Spanish in design, was handled by the Faggioni Studios.

A Correction

In the issue of August 22, an item was published under the heading "Reflector Arc Manufacturers," which gave the impression that the Morelite product was made by Howell's Cine Equipment Co. This is, of course, incorrect. The Morelite Reflecting Arc Lamp is manufactured by the Morelite Company, Inc., 600 West 57th street, New York. Howell's Cine Equipment ceased to be exclusive distributors in the Metropolitan district for Morelite about three months ago, S. Nickelsburg, President of Morelite, states.

Plans Complete for New Evanston, Ill., Theatre

Architect J. E. L. Pridmore has completed plans for the handsome new motion picture theatre which will be erected in Evanston, Ill., by the New Evanston Theatre Company which operates the New Evanston and Hoyburn theatres of that city and according to officials of the theatre company ground will be broken for the new house within thirty days. The architecture is to be of French Chateau type both as to exterior and interior, the theatre auditorium will represent the court yard of a chateau, with out door effects including sky with moving clouds and beautiful landscape vistas to be glimpsed through the openings in the court yard walls. It is the aim of the builders to make the structure artistic throughout, in keeping with Evanston's famous cultural atmosphere, and to embody the latest advanced ideas in theatre construction with the best in decorations, furnishings and equipment.

Plans Completed for 2,000 Seat Phila. Theatre

Plans are completed for a new 2,000 seat theatre to be erected on the hotel property at Ridge and Levering Avenues, Roxborough, Phila. It is stated that work on the new theatre, which it is estimated will cost approximately $250,000, will start this fall.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Gold Rush"—United Artists, Strand Theatre, N. Y. C.

Evening Journal: "'The Gold Rush,' is a great comedy, and by showing this play, the Strand, I should say, will be having a gold rush, too. It would be impossible to enumerate all the highlights of the film, but the best gag of them all is the bit called 'The Oceana Roll', which is absolutely a riot. Chaplin is a delight, and it is to be regretted that his pictures come so few and far between."

Evening World: "With a little trimming 'The Gold Rush' would be one of the greatest comedies ever screened. As it is it contains some of the best work that Charlie Chaplin has ever done—and that means, of course, the best work of any screen comedian. 'The Gold Rush' is a positive scream—the kind that makes you pain from laughing. And, as is the case with all other Chaplin film, it also brings you very near to tears just when you are getting all set for another loud guffaw. If all audiences receive it as did the audience of experts at the Saturday night special showing 'The Gold Rush' is in for months and months of unprecedented success."

"Winds of Chance"—First National, Colony, New York City

World: "It is directed with great vim and vigor against a magnificent background of snow and pines and most energetically acted by Viola Dana, Ben Lyon and Anna Q. Nillson."

Daily News: "The scenery is a treat—gorgeous mountains, vistas of snow-pelted peaks with long trains of adventurers staggering under their packs. The photography is fine, and here and there the picture is shot with humor and not a few thrills. The atmosphere of the gold craze days seemed especially good."

Mirror: "Winds of Chance" blows icy melodrama and Klondike atmosphere into the Piccadilly this week." She says: "Much of the photography is beautiful. Anna Q. Nilsson intrigues as the beautiful Countess Courteau, who runs a hotel, manages a disreputable husband, and mothers childish men and women. Victor McLaglen, last seen as Hercules in 'The Unholy Three,' gives a spontaneous performance as the French trapper."

Times: "The best sequences in this effort are those dealing with the rapids. The torrents are good and the speed with which a barge is borne down the racing river is effective."

Morning Telegraph: "There is action enough crammed into 'Winds of Chance' to supply plots for a half dozen dramas. There are any number of angles of popular appeal, from the well known story by Rex Beach to the popular cast. A Frank Lloyd production can always be counted upon to offer good characterization and this one is no exception. The director's hand-picked cast is composed of some of the most gifted actors in celluloid, and they have every opportunity to prove their ability."

Evening World: "A gripping, virile Rex Beach story of the mad rush to the Yukon gold fields, and it is admirably enacted by one of the greatest casts ever assembled. It is packed from beginning to end with breathtaking thrills, some of its leading players facing almost certain death in several of its sequences. It has the vast sweep of the Alaskan wilds, and Lloyd has imparted to it a gripping tempo."

Telegram: "An orthodox thriller truly depicting the historical period highly colored by fictionists of early Alaskan boom days. If Rex Beach has given you pleasure with his tales, then you should certainly see 'Winds of Chance.'"

"Don Q" United Artists, Imperial, San Francisco

Chroniele: "'Don Q' has all the elements that make the pulses throb and the blood run faster—love, danger, suspense—magnificently done. 'Don Q' is good Fairbanks: the best for a long time. It is bound to please his immense following and to bring back those who may have felt he was getting too 'high-brow.'"

Call: "The very quintessence of romance — moonlight and roses, swords and sabers, treachery and intrigue, with love triumphant in the end — gorgeousness, novelty and action.

"Her Sister from Paris"—1st National, Capitol, New York

Times: "A clever comedy filled with scintillating situations and deft directional touches. Constance Talmadge adds much to the success of this vehicle with her captivating eyes, her charm and vivacity. Sidney Franklin has handled the scenes in an engaging manner, getting a great deal out of simple happenings through his imagination. It is a relief to view such a comedy."

Herald Tribune: "'Her Sister From Paris' presents Constance Talmadge in two different guises and those who can never get enough of Miss Talmadge will rejoice. We sat in an ecstasy of expectation from beginning to end. We consider 'Her Sister From Paris' one of the most amusing pictures of 1925. The direction is flawless, the acts are perfect and the entire cast acts as it never has acted before."

American: "If Hans Kraely had chosen gay Paree for his locale in 'Her Sister From Paris' instead of Vienna, we might have characterized Constance Talmadge's latest comedy as a smart French farce. There is that same sophistication and subtility of humor that makes French comedy so sprightly and amusing. The story is simple enough, but so well played by Constance and Ronald Colman and so deftly directed by Sidney Franklin, that we laugh with the rest of the delighted audience and say to ourselves 'Good girl, Connie.'"

Evening World: "Let it be reported right in the first sentence that 'Her Sister From Paris,' at the Capitol, is one of the most attractive pictures seen on Broadway in several weeks. True, it is as hoydenish as is its star, Constance Talmadge, and in places it gives signs of becoming a trifle daring. But there is a full-sized chuckle in every other scene, and the picture is altogether charming."

Evening Post: "Constance Talmadge in a dual role is enough to guarantee the happines of most audiences. She is still her old amusing self with a dazzling array of Paris gowns as added attractions."

Journal: "'Her Sister From Paris' at the Capitol Theatre, is one of these delightfully frothy films. Hans Kraely wrote the story and he has a charming way of presenting situations with a scintillating effect. Colman is very good as the young husband, and George K. Arthur gets a chance to show what he can do. Connie, in her dual role, is cute and pert."

Telegraph: "Connie has never been more pert and more charming than she is in 'Her Sister From Paris.' It's as good as 'Her Night of Romance,' and you know what that means. What's better than Connie in a comedy? Answer: Two Connies. She plays a double role here and the thing is expertly contrived. It gives Constance Talmadge a chance to wear just twice as many gorgeous and daring gowns as usual."

Daily News: "One Constance Talmadge is enough fun for any movie. Two Constances are a riot. In 'Her Sister From Paris' Constance deals out the youth and gayety that are hers in a dual role. Constance, lest you forget it, is the suave and sure comedienne of the screen. The delightful farce written by Hans Kraely is the type that we usually tag "French"—slight, teetering on the edge of the naughty, and generous with dots and asterisks that you fill in with your imagination."

"Mary, Queen of Tots"—Pathe, Stanley, Philadelphia

Daily News: "'Mary, Queen of Tots,' an 'Our Gang' comedy, was very funny and kept the audience in laughter."

Inquirer: "There was a corking good 'Our Gang' comedy called 'Mary, Queen of Tots,' which had many comedy surprises."

Record: "Another feature is the juvenile comedy entitled 'Mary, Queen of Tots,' a clever bit of romanticism, for which the imaginative mind of a child who falls asleep and starts to dream forms a rich field. It winds up as a realistic comedy. The startling vivification of inert dolls and puppets is a most remarkable piece of work turned out from the Hal Roach Studios."

Evening Bulletin: "The Stanley has a novel comedy, 'Mary, Queen of Tots,' by 'Our Gang,' in which 'The Rascals,' by trick photoplay, are reduced to Lilliputian proportions."

Evening Public Ledger: "'Mary, Queen of Tots' is a good specimen of Hal Roach's 'Our Gang' comedy, fresh as the 6-year-old young lady who stars in it."

"The Freshman" — Pathe, Auditorium, Ocean Grove, N. J.

Daily Press: "All roads from far and near seemed to have their journey's end last night at the Ocean Grove Auditorium where the world premiere was given 'The Freshman,' the latest triumph of Harold Lloyd, the justly popular screen comedian. They came from all parts of Monmouth County and as far away as Trenton and New Brunswick with a goodly delegation of New Yorkers prominent in the world of motion pictures."

"When words fail just call it a 'wow' and have it all over with in one explosion. That describes 'The Freshman.' It is a truly refreshing comedy full of laughter and thrills. 'The Freshman' is literally crammed with gags—good ones—and Lloyd executes each so well that something whispers that many must have originated in his own head. In the first shot there is a chuckle. This develops into a laugh and the laugh into hilarity. It is by far the finest thing that Lloyd has ever done and it is difficult to imagine his ever doing anything better."

Drusilla With A Million"—F. B. O. Garden, Milwaukee

Sentinel: "What makes 'Drusilla With A Million' stand above the average picture where the plot follows a sentimental groove is that the director by means of a cast of talented players has managed to impart a really beautiful lesson in the principles of unselfishness and devotion to the common good without using the too obvious varieties of hokum."

News: "It is a picture that will appeal to most every movie fan. Rich in laughs, tears and gripping moments, it is in every way decidedly worth seeing."

"Drusilla With A Million"—F. B. O., Rialto, Washington, D. C.

Post: "The story vividly portrays the naive and ingenuous methods adapted by the delightful little old lady who, being forced to work for her keep in a charity home, is sudenly left a million dollars."

Times: "It tells a powerful and appending story and is rich in character study. Mary Carr as the worn-out old servant, who suddenly inherits a million dollars and turns her beautiful home into a nursery for unfortunate children, gives a performance that dwarfs all her previous efforts."

The Motiograph De Luxe Double Bearing Movement

MOTIOGRAPH DeLuxe TRADE MARK

DOUBLE BEARING MOVEMENT

Entirely NEW and a PROVEN success, embodying improvements that make the MOTIOGRAPH DE LUXE the CRITERION in PROJECTORS.

Non-eccentric "extra" bearing—"well" type of lubrication. Dowell point plunger permits adjustment of end play in star shaft while in operation.

Dust and leak proof oil cup for cam shaft. Large chamber inspection and lubricating plug in casing side.

New type balance wheel with lock screws running through its entire diameter.

Safety thumb screw in cam shaft also used for end play adjusting.

Star shaft only 3/8" longer than previously used.

All shafts have spiral oil channels which prevent leakage.

Inspect It At The Nearest Motiograph Distributor's Salesroom.

GLORIA SWANSON

IN

"The Coast of Folly"

From the popular novel by Coningsby Dawson. Adaptation by James Creelman. Screen play by Forrest Halsey.

AN
ALLAN DWAN PRODUCTION

Riding the Crest of the Box Office Wave!

Gloria Swanson. The greatest feminine attraction on the screen today! And "The Coast of Folly" is the finest money picture she ever made! It broke all summer records at the Rivoli, New York, when it took in over $7,000 the opening Sunday. It is establishing new highs in every town it plays.

In Columbus, Ohio, "The Coast of Folly" played to the biggest Swanson week they ever had there, and the highest week of the summer! Columbus critics agreed with the New York reviewers, who yelled "Bravo, Gloria Swanson!" (Telegraph) and "Gloria is a revelation" (Mirror). The public and critics alike love her in this big 1926 society romance, boys!

The Greater Forty Tide is at its Height!

"The best picture Tom has had in a long, long time!" – N.Y. DAILY NEWS

Meighan in a great story of love and regeneration written especially for him by Booth Tarkington. Backed by the greatest all-star cast you've seen in months. Will top any Meighan week you've ever had—and that's going some! Get it and boost it. It's worth it.

A Paramount Picture

On the right is a teaser ad idea used very successfully in New York. Get a still of Meighan and cut it off to show just a portion of face. Ask your public "Can you find 'The Man Who Found Himself'?" Start with very small portion of face and show more and more each day.

"Don't make a goose woman of yourself by missing 'The Goose Woman'!"

Says The New York Morning Telegraph

Evening World—New York

"An unusually interesting production. A drama well worth seeing."
New York Times

"The whole film is interesting. Ranks among the leaders."
Evening Telegram—New York

"The Goose Woman" does far better than the average.
Morning World—New York

"The Goose Woman" is well worth a visit.
The Sun—New York

"AT last a flawless production! Great crowd waited in the lobby!"

Writes Tom MacDonald, Florence Theatre, West Coast-Langley Circuit, Pasadena, Calif.

"Seizes attention from the first. Continuously interesting."
N. Y. Evening Post

"A fine film play finely played. Suspense well sustained."
St. Louis Post

"The uncanny charm in the story is retained in the screen."
St. Louis Star

Danny in Film Daily

"Among the best of the year. Business picked up tremendously at the Colony."
N. Y. Telegraph

"The Goose Woman" a splendid picture. Wonderful entertainment.
James R. Quirk—Ed. Photoplay Magazine.

Not in a long time has there been so good a picture. Should prove highly satisfactory to theatre goers.
Harrison's Reports.

Most remarkable picture I've seen in a long time.
Harry Carr—Los Angeles Times.

Audience picture with interest from start to fade-out.

AND now comes "SUN-UP." The drama that touched the heart of Broadway during two years of packed houses. Critics call the screen version even greater than the play. A love story that grips the heart. Pathos that brings a clutch at the throat; action that focuses the attention of the spectator every crowded minute of the way.

Again Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer gives you the kind of attraction that you know brings in the money. Exhibitors are talking about "The Unholy Three," "A Slave of Fashion," "Pretty Ladies," "Never the Twain Shall Meet." And now comes "Sun-Up," another clean-up in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Talk-of-the-Industry Pictures The Quality Fifty-Two.

THE MAGIC CARPET of TODAY

--- IS ---

KINOGRAMS

Prince Houssain's magic carpet of oriental fable that flew with its owner from place to place at his slightest wish, never ran out of gasoline or got a puncture

It was a pretty good invention of the story teller of those times, and he could hardly be expected to foresee another kind of a magic carpet that brings the world to you and saves you the trouble and expense of travelling

KINOGRAMS the news reel in its latest issue whisked its audiences from New York to Japan, to Sweden, to Buenos Ayres, to California, and back again in the twinkling of an eye

KINOGRAMS is faster than lightning

Its scope is world-wide and its cameramen will be found in the out-of-the-way places as well as the big centres

RIDING HIGH
from the HARDBOILED

"SHOES"

O. Henry Comedy

O. Henry, beloved of thousands, has finally reached the screen . . . one of the best short comedies ever screened. . . . Exploit this as an O. Henry story and do not hesitate to promise your patrons several thousand feet of merriment.—Exhibitors Trade Review.

You'll have to look a long time before you'll find a more amusing comedy. . . . Any exhibitor should be glad to get it. . . .—Sunday Telegraph.

"Shoes" is amusing and entertaining and there's the customary touch of O. Henry romance that makes it all the more pleasing. . . . Good clean comedy entertainment.—Film Daily.

It is all thoroughly amusing and holds the interest. There are lots of laughs.—Moving Picture World.

A delightful comedy worthy of feature honors in the theatre billing. . . . Excellently acted and produced . . . should score a big hit and a box office success.—Motion Picture News.

"A BUSINESS ENGAGEMENT"

Married Life of Helen and Warren Comedy

Has enough plot for a feature. More than many. . . . It has been produced on a lavish scale. . . . This series should be very popular.—Exhibitors Trade Review.

A step forward in its field. . . . Altogether a first-class offering which will be at home among the very best audiences.—Morning Telegraph.

Clean, wholesome comedy entertainment, nicely produced and with a good cast . . . brings its laughs along readily and has some quite new twists.—Film Daily.

There are a number of excellent touches and genuine laugh-provoking situations and the comedy is thoroughly worth while.—Moving Picture World.

"THE WRESTLER"

Earle Foxe in a Van Bibber Comedy

Exceptionally good comedy . . . does not rely upon slapstick humor . . . but gets smiles through logically developed humorous situations. . . .—Exhibitors Trade Review.

It is elaborately mounted and well cast. In fact it looks as if the Fox Company had determined to do right by Van Bibber.—Morning Telegraph.

The production is on a big scale and they've spent considerable in making these comedies. . . . Good comedy business . . . suitable for any program.—Film Daily.

A striking feature of the new Van Bibber series is the big scale on which they have been produced. . . . Great cleverness and ingenuity have been displayed.—Moving Picture World.

The most stupendous box-office success NORMA TALMADGE has ever made.

A First National Picture

"GRAUSTARK" represents the very last word in showmanship valuations

1st—Because of its star, NORMA TALMADGE, who is second to none as a great attraction at any box office.

2nd—Because of the story. "Graustark," by George Barr McCutcheon, is one of the most popular selling novels ever written.

3rd—Because of the manner in which this exciting, romantic story has been modernized in every respect and given a treatment that has made it even more appealing than the book.

4th—Because of the magnitude of its cast. Directed by Dimitri Buchowetzki, we find the names of Eugene O'Brien, Marc McDermott, Albert Gran, Lillian Lawrence, Wanda Hawley, Winter Hall and Frank Currier as those lending support to Miss Talmadge.

5th—Because it will have back of it an extensive advertising campaign which will include use of the Saturday Evening Post.

6th—Because from the angle of audience appeal it will be immensely popular with every member of the family. It has action—adventure—romance—clothes—everything to make it a great box office magnet.

Dear Mr. Abrams,

I am happy to advise you that Charlie Chaplin in "The Gold Rush" has just finished the greatest week ever played in any theatre in the world insofar as gross receipts and attendance are concerned. The week's gross was $72,577.15. I am sure this establishes a record for the world. Our second Sunday receipts were as big as on the first Sunday. You must remember this business was done in very,very hot weather,which makes it all the more remarkable;also when you consider that we have no ice plant. With kindest regards,

Sincerely Yours,

DRUSILLA WITH A MILLION O.. VIEW AT COLONIAL — one of nation's best. One of the Na tion's best photoplays—that's DRU SILLA WITH A MILLION. When the history of the American movie industry is written, I am sure that DRUSILLA will be included in the list of the very best pictures ever made because of its simplicity, its charm, the human acting o.. Mar Carr, Priscilla Bonner, Kenner. Ha lan and the greatest lot of babies ever assembled in a movie studio. DRUSILLA will be a pictu.. to be remembered. This pict.. ..ght into my heart. Here is a p.. ..fe will reach your heart and ta.. ..e, a happier and more thoug.. ..e. More movies of this typ.. ..the film industry would never be at tacked by censors and thoughtless others. Such pictures prove to me that the producers are finding them selves and are giving us really big human entertainment. The men who have made this picture have turned to the right and the public will follow.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

Heart interest has at last been discovered for the screen, and as a consequence, audiences may as well be forewarned to be sure and take extra pocket handkerchiefs with them when they go to see DRU SILLA WITH A MILLION. I im agine owing to this fact along, there will be an unusual pilgrimage to the Forum Theatre, where it is on view this week. The director has evi dently felt the Griffithy influence, at least the Griffith influence that used to exit at one time. He has cap tured something of its essence o sunshine and shadow. I am perfectl willing to predict that it is going register prominently in the season's entertainment for the enjoyment that it will bring.

LOS ANGELES NEWS

In DRUSILLA WITH A MIL LION there are scenes which are so intensely dramatic and the suspense is prolonged so effectively that one suspects the director of a flash of real genius. The court room scene is the best thing of its kind I have ever seen. The tension which is felt is truly Griffithesque. In fact, many of the bits of this picture were re miniscent of that famous direct his best.

WASHINGTON, D. C HERALD

DRUSILLA WITH A MILLIO is not one of those gorgeous costum plays, just a plain, ordinary old-fas ioned melodrama, that would jerk tear from a stone statue. I'm n going to tell you the plot of DRU SILLA WITH A MILLION — takes the silver screen to put over thing of this sort. But be sure t see it — it's grand old hokum on Griffithian scale.

WASHINGTON, D. C. STAR

DRUSILLA WITH A MILLION is a throbbing love story into which is woven a plot that brings the main characters together in an intensel dramatic climax with one of the most effective bits of staging ever wit nessed. Mary Carr as the poor rela tion gives a perfect characterization from her first care-worn smile, with which she walks straight into the hearts of her audience, to her las radiant beam, which capitulates the judge and routs the opposing lawyer in the thrilling courtroom scene.

WASHINGTON, D. C. NEWS

DRUSILLA WITH A MILLION merits praise — there is a climax that actually brought the customers to their feet.

Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph

DRUSILLA WITH A MILLION, the adaptation of Elizabeth Cooper's popular novel of the same name, which is being shown at Rowland & Clark's State Theatre, downtown, all this week, proves how beautifully a best seller may be transplanted to the screen. The picture is one long delight, fresh, wholesome and thor oughly human.

LOS ANGELES EXPRESS

When a picture takes such hold of he emotions of an audience that it ursts into applause at the turn of affairs which confound the forces ar rayed against the distressed heroine the critics may as well sheathe their arrows. Mary Carr is Drusilla and so delightful is her portrayal, so ten der, so humorous, so pathetic by turn of the year. Priscilla Bonner as the unhappy heroine reveals hitherto un known emotional ability and gives high promise for the future. Ken neth Harlan is manly and engaging as the young husband. Henry Bar rows as the flinty lawyer, Claire Du Brey, William Humphreys and others are excellent in rounding out a pic ture as packed with heart appeal as THE MIRACLE MAN and OVER THE HILL, in whose genre DRU SILLA is to be classified.

ILLINOIS STATE JOURNAL

DRUSILLA WITH A MILLION is one of the most enjoyable and heart interesting pictures in the his tory of the motion picture drama. A better acted or direct picture has not been this way in a long time. Mary Carr as Drusilla has the best role in her sensational career. Pris cilla Bonner faces a brilliant future The babies are the finest and most fascinating lot of youngsters we have ever seen on the screen.

PRESS, EASTON, PA

DRUSILLA WITH A MILLION should play to crowded houses. It is a masterpiece of motion picture art and the biggest thing since OVER THE HILL which it equals in pathos and heart interest. Mary Carr who played the Mother in OVER THE HILL, plays DRUSILLA with the delicious mother appeal she knows how to invoke. It is a picture everyone will want to see.

LOS ANGELES, CAL. RECORD

The question "Does a million dollars mean anything to you?" brings forth some of the most wholesome comedy and greatest heart throbs of the season. Priscilla Bonner gives a supreme performance. Mary Carr as DRUSILLA repeats her triumph in OVER THE HILL. Personally, I believe she surpasses her efforts in the latter film. She certainly touches your heart strings. Harmon Weight, the director certainly proves his ability to give real human interest in this picture. His big court room scene excels any that has appeared upon the screen, including the one in Madam X. If you miss DRUSILLA you have missed one in a million!

WHAT DANNY SAYS ABOUT HIS FIRST PRODUCTION

THE Film DAILY

EDITORIAL

THERE'S a picture out called, "The Girl Who Wouldn t Work." Get it. And run it. And make yourself not only money. But all that a good picture helps. In building patronage. B. P. ("Ben") Schulberg is the producer Franchise rights all around the country will allow you to get it wherever you are. And you should have it Because it has all the earmarks of a mighty fine box office attraction.

This happens to be what is called an "independent" production. This "independent" phrase has been overworked to the limit. Frankly, we don't know just what an "independent" is, or is supposed to be But anyway the Schulberg picture is a real box office bet; a real picture, and the best of it is that it comes from practically a brand new director—Marcel de Sano. He made two for Universal several years ago. But they could not touch his latest. It is full of touches, full of delightful surprises, and with a tempo that makes you think it came from the Lubitsch school of expression. There are bits all the way that make you laugh, smile, or feel good. And then, after about five reels, the tempo changes, comedy is replaced with tragedy—a father presumably kills his own daughter And from there to the finish it moves with real dramatic force. This looks like a box office bet for any type of house. There is a fine cast. Incidentally, Marguerite de la Motte never appeared to such advantage as in this De Sano makes her troupe

The Connecticut Situation

THERE are two big angles to the Connecticut Tax Matter.

One is the Connecticut situation itself. That is big enough, and its proper solution is going to take the level-headed and united action of the whole industry. For it deeply and gravely concerns the whole industry.

The other angle is the rest of the States of the Union—what they may do. Bear in mind one fact in this connection. There's a gasoline tax today in all of the forty-eight States but five and the District of Columbia. And Connecticut was the first State to impose a gasoline tax.

It is a gross libel upon our State legislative system, but it is a fact, that so mean a factor as a disgruntled employee may originate a bill threatening the existence of an industry. Legislative history is filled with these attempts at personal reprisals, and some have been astonishingly successful. For, once a bill is introduced and given any headway at all—no matter how vicious it may be, how openly and violently uneconomic and unnecessary—it may easily become a political football that in the melee of a closing session, is shot over the goal and into the statute books for no reason at all save gross political expediency.

We speak frankly to the trade because the true lesson of the unfortunate situation in Connecticut is eternal vigilance everywhere against a repetition of so outrageous an act. We are speaking particularly to the exhibitors, to their State organizations, for these State taxes are exhibitors' taxes—always. They affect us all; they are the concern of all, but they are borne by the exhibitor. They have to be.

In the Connecticut case everything is seemingly being done that can be done. We are told that the Association of Producers and Distributors is working in harmony with the State organization and the independent exchanges. Will H. Hays speaks highly of this cooperation. His Association's plan of action, summed up, is: serious procedure along economic and legal lines to correct a most unfortunate situation.

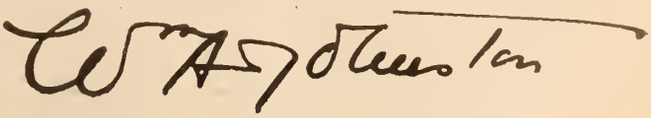
A rehearing has been asked for in Connecticut. In addition, an appeal has been made to the United States Supreme Court, and the case goes on the October Calendar as one of a preferred list.

A fund has been provided to help the State exhibitors meet the present and past taxes (due since the law went into effect). The exhibitors among themselves have arranged a sliding scale of tax payments to take care of over seventy small theatres which cannot meet the tax at all.



All existing contracts between distributor and exhibitor will be carried out, thus insuring a supply of pictures for the State for about six months.

But no further contracts for the exhibition of films within the State are to be made, so far as is now known.

And all exchanges, for good legal reasons, have been removed from the State.

This sums up the situation at this writing.

We are earnestly in hopes that united action and the utmost harmony will continue to prevail within the industry as its fight in Connecticut goes on. That is the only way we will win. The people of Connecticut do not want the law. The State does not need the tax. The newspapers are opposed to it. It is obviously uneconomic and uncalled for. Every right is on our side. And, united—we can win.

"The Forgotten Man and Woman"

ONE of the most forceful editorials that has yet appeared on the Connecticut situation was printed the other day in the New Haven Journal-Courier. It goes to the very heart of the matter, and presents an unanswerable argument against the tax. The salient points of the editorial are these:

"Separating Lieutenant Governor J. Edwin Brainard, acting Governor in the absence of Mr. Trumbull from the State, from the subject which caused his comment, namely, the new tax on imported moving picture films, his views upon the subject of taxation in general cannot fail to interest students of economics and sociology. He is reported in the news columns of the local press as saying, apropos of a suggested compromise between the State and the producers, that 'there is nothing to compromise. The ultimate consumer is the only one who pays anything. You and I and the others who paid 20 cents to go to a show will now pay a quarter. That is the gist of the matter. If there is an overwhelming revulsion of public feeling, then there may be another step taken.'

"This brings up for consideration with a whoop Professor Sumner's 'Forgotten Man'. We have taken the liberty in our text to add 'The Forgotten Woman', and might add 'The Forgotten Child', for in the imposition of taxes all three are concerned. It was Professor Sumner's thesis, that too often the government in arranging its tax schedules forgets the forgotten man who in the last analysis pays the bill, which is to say, that it is not so much the welfare of the general run of taxpayers who are kept in mind in perfecting schedules as the more exclusive welfare of the petitioning party for legislative favors. Lieutenant Governor Brainard is sound in his contention, that the ultimate consumer, who is the forgotten man, is the chap who steps to the captain's office by an indirect process and settles, but 'that is not the gist of the matter'. There are other very important considerations to be treated in imposing taxes which Mr. Brainard overlooks. It would be a very simple matter—a mere legislative routine—if the undertaking began and ended with action by the halls of legislation and the cheerful paying of the bills by the ultimate consumer.

"In order to justify a tax, the State or the Federal Government must establish its need for the revenue produced, give assurance that the government itself is economically administered, and that the distribution of the burden shall be as nearly equal as it is possible to make it in human wisdom. In case of war, the need is always so great, and usually greater than was anticipated, that it covers every conceivable source of revenue and no specific explanations are given for utilizing all. The main complaint, which is made today against the federal taxes, is that to a fixed degree they have their justification in war needs only. In the case of this moving picture film tax, which Connecticut has imposed on producers and theatre patrons alike, not one excuse can be found for it under any one of the three heads mentioned above as essential to the determination of its justice. The State does not need the revenue which the tax is intended to create. There is no assurance that in the economical administration of the State government any additional revenue from any source is needed.

"It is impossible to speak of the even distribution of the burden involved, for there is no reason why the burden should be created. This reduces consideration of the tax to the level of at least a theoretical act in confiscation. Confiscation is not confined to taking property without due process of law. It is confiscation to take by State authority property, which with labor is the source of wealth, that is not definitely needed to sustain it.

"The addition of five pennies to the cost of an admission ticket to a moving picture house is just as much of a sin against good government, since it is not needed by the State, as if the additional cost was to be five dollars. The most contented community is that in which the tax rate is the lowest consistent with efficient government. In fact, that is the condition of the best government. Should the State of Connecticut undertake in a like spirit of resolution, which moves President Coolidge in his crusade for greater federal economy, a thorough survey of its balance sheet, and find that it could do the things required of it at half the cost, and set about doing it, an increase in the tax rate of any occupation would bring down upon its head severe condemnation. This would proceed from the indignation of the forgotten man who had suddenly found the courage of his convictions and discovered the hardness of his political muscles.

"Leaving entirely out of consideration the attitude of the moving pictures business, and the activities of its legal advisers and all the speculation as to the legality or illegality of the tax on films, it is an imposition, because it cannot be justified on economic grounds or sound business principles. To denounce the attitude of those directly concerned as a bluff, which may be translated to mean blackmail, is to disregard the false principle upon which the tax is grounded. The loftiest aim of the State should be to treat all of its people with a scrupulous sense of justice and solicitude. In this instance, it has been unjust and indifferent, and in protesting its action the moving picture industry is merely exercising the right which belongs to every citizen, individually or in group organization. The forgotten man had a real grievance as well. Government power has been abused."

SOME NEW FEATURES

AMONG the new feature arrivals on Broadway this week, Metro-Goldwyn's "The Merry Widow," at the Embassy; "The Mystic," at the Capitol; and Paramount's Gloria Swanson picture at the Rivoli, "The Coast Of Folly," register as the most important.

"The Merry Widow" lived up to its advance notices as an elaborate film of great box office possibilities and figures as a sterling example of director Von Stroheim's skill in shaping strong screen drama out of a comparatively slight plot. Mae Murray is pleasing as the heroine and John Gilbert's masterly performance as the gallant prince stands out in such bold relief that it wouldn't be surprising if this picture boomed his stock as a leading man as effectually as did "The Four Horsemen" in Valentino's case.

In general story interest the Swanson film does not rank with that noted star's best productions. Compared with "Manhandled" for instance, it fails in conveying the subtle, intimate human touch which distinguished that picture. This is partially accounted for by the fact that "Manhandled" dealt with a less artificial strata of society. But another reason is that in her latest vehicle Miss Swanson wanted to show what she could do in the line of extensive characterizations and a lot of footage was consequently sacrifice to her ambition. Her dual role called for portrayals of a modern flapper and elderly lady. Both are effective, but whether the Swanson fan cohorts will like their favorite in aged guise remains to be seen. Colleen Moore, in "So Big," graduated from youth to middle-age, giving one of the finest dramatic performances of her career, yet her following didn't quite approve. They preferred the Colleen they knew and loved—vivacious, pretty, piquant. And assuredly the women folk at least, who gloat over Gloria's gorgeous gowns and slender grace, would sooner see her

E. M. Asher, of Corinne Griffith Productions, signs Conway Tearle to star on his own, the first picture to be "Good Luck," symbolized by the pose here.

The very newest camera portrait of Aileen Pringle, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer featured player, who is shortly to begin work in "The Only Thing" (Metro-Goldwyn).

Director Emory Johnson wanted to knock off a bit early one afternoon and let everyone in "The Last Edition" (F. B. O.) go to the ball game—whereupon he was promptly mobbed by the irate staff. If you don't believe it, it isn't so.

Fred Cavens, former world's champion fencer, has taught fencing to the girls in Cecil B. De Mille's stock company—and now look what they're doing to him! Left to right, the embryo stars are Rita Carita, Jocelyn Lee, Josephine Norman, Sally Rand and Mabel Coleman.

The success of "The Unholy Three" apparently spurred director Tod Browning to fresh efforts in the underworld field, and he gives us "The Mystic," an entertaining melodrama in which an expose of fake spiritualism figures prominently. Browning has a positive genius for weird suggestion and the art of imparting darkling mystery to a situation, which bears full fruit in deft shaping of the seances held by the crooks to fool their victims.

"Seven Days," the Producers Distributing Corporation's Comedy, at the Colony, just missed being first-chop entertainment because it wasn't kept down to a reasonable length. It consists entirely of farce and slapstick, effective within a certain limit, beyond which they become distinctly monotonous. "The Limited Mail," Warner Brothers, was the attraction chosen for the newly baptized Piccadilly—now the Warner—and proved to be rattling melo of railroad life, with excitement plus, and a train wreck of gorgeous proportions and vivid realism.

Eugene Zukor recently purchased a snappy yacht, the Spendthrift II, and took Mel Shauer and two other friends on a two week cruise. Zukor may be seen with the hatchet, while Shauer has the glass. Judging from the action, the Spendthrift is about to be boarded by buccaneers with grappling irons and cutlasses.

"The Love Hour," Vitagraph, at the Rialto, looks like a throw-back to infantile movie days, offering an antiquated, unconvincing plot, with a shopgirl heroine, young millionaire and bleakly sinister villain cavorting around in the style originally copyrighted by sponsors of stage melodrama of the ten, twenty and thirty cent admission type. Willard Louis and Louise Fazenda contribute lively slapstick comedy that helps to keep the audience in good humor, but with this exception, the film fails utterly to "click".

WARNER THEATRE OPENS

LAST Saturday night the erstwhile Piccadilly theatre opened formally as The Warner, with a band on the outside discoursing familiar melodies, police reserves working heroically to keep the crowds from entirely blocking thoroughfares on Broadway and a crowd within that jammed the house to the S. R. O. mark. Stars, directors, leaders in every department of the industry sent telegrams of felicitation and good wishes. It was a gala night.

Not the least important of the innovations introduced by the new owners is the engagement of Herman Heller as musical director. Mr. Heller comes directly from the Sid Grauman theatres on the Pacific coast, where he has been a popular favorite with all music lovers for a period of many years, having swayed the baton over orchestras at the California in San Francisco, and later at the Metropolitan in Los Angeles. In 1904 he was the featured soloist at the celebrated Steel Pier in Atlantic City. The influence of his guiding hand was clearly to be noted in the greatly improved work of the enlarged orchestra, which from now on takes rank with the best of the symphony organizations.

A LONDON SOUVENIR

FROM Mr. and Mrs. Israel Davis come an elaborate souvenir program of a special showing held at the Shepherd's Bush Pavilion theatre, London, England, in aid of Earl Haig's British Legion Fund, at which the Duke and Duchess of York were in attendance. The subjects shown included the official "Tour of the Prince of Wales;" "Felix the Cat," "Britain's Birthright," being the record of the Empire Tour of the Special Service Squadron" and pictures of the Duke and Duchess, the distinguished guests as they appeared arriving at the Pavilion, presented on the screen one hour and thirty minutes after actual filming.

The Shepherd's Bush Pavilion was built by Mr. Israel, proprietor of the Marble Arch Pavilion and many other London Kinemas. Seating 3,000 people, it is the largest structure of its kind in Europe.

A FAMILY AFFAIR

THE heads of every department of First National, and their wives for gathered at dinner in the Ritz last week. You might call it a family affair, everything was so delightfully informal; business topics completely eliminated, having been thoroughly gone into for two days previous, and the executives looking forward to an early departure for their homes.

Tom Spry of Boston was toastmaster, among those who answered to his clarion call being Sam Spring, Earl Hudson, Al Rockett, Ben Lyon, Lloyd Hughes, Blanche Sweet, Dorothy Sebastian, Nathan Gordon, and others. Dick Rowland told a story, Johnny Hines danced, and the tide of merriment reached high-water mark with the appearance of the inimitable Leon Errol. But, according to Lynde Denig, the great event of the evening was when Tom Spry stepped to the center of the floor, carrying a traveling bag and suitcase, which Tom informed those assembled were intended as a slight remembrance from the boys to Eddie Eschmann and wife, the donors hoping that Mrs. Eschmann would utilize the suitcase in journeying about the country with her husband.

Eddie Eschmann made a short speech of acknowledgment, thanking his associates for their gift and stating that anything he had accomplished he considered as due to their co-operation, square-dealing and loyalty to right principles. As to the token of comradeship extended to Mrs. Eschmann, he called it the most beautiful manifestation of friendship he had ever encountered in a business organization. It was one of those simple, straightforward addresses that has the ring of sincerity and reaches the hearts of an audience. Effective and appealing, because those who listened knew the speaker meant every word he said.

A real family party, this, which will be an inspiration to those present for a long time to come.

"I'm safe on home," says Walter Miller to Allene Ray in "Play Ball" (Pathe). "Just you wait," replies Allene, "we may have a retake."

VETERAN FRANCONI

LEON FRANCONI, manager of the Film Editing Department at the Home Office of Pathe Exchange, Inc., recently celebrated his seventeenth anniversary with the pioneer film firm. He was the first editor of the Pathe Weekly, now released twice a week as Pathe News.

Mr. Franconi joined Pathe Freres August 16, 1908, when Pathe first invaded this country. Then, all Pathe pictures were made in France and Franconi, viewed the sample prints, cut, edited, titled, and then went forth and sold them to the small houses with which New York abounded. In 1914 he became head executive at the laboratory and studio in Jersey City. In 1915 he served as Charles Pathe's Special Representative, in 1916, was made assistant manager of the production and film editing departments, and in 1917 appointed to the post he now holds. A busy career, with no let-up Mr. Franconi stands elected to the real Veteran Brigade of filmdom.

Dorothy Mackaill becomes a member of the First National family upon signing a five year contract with John McCormick. Her first under the new agreement will be "Joanna With a Million" (First Nat'l).

SETS ARE ENORMOUS

IN the final sequences of "The Road To Yesterday" Cecil B. De Mille is using the largest sets he has made since his production of "The Ten Commandments". The biggest spectacle is a castle 100 feet high, where hundreds of extras assemble to portray a peasant celebration at a gala wedding ceremony.

So far, so good! But when we are further informed that two whole oxen and several suckling pigs were roasted to supply the dining arrangements and huge hogshead offered a continual flow of liquid refreshments, it's time to call a halt. Such statements turn us green with envy, create ravenous hunger, inflamed thirst, and provoke maledictions on the head of the publicist who taunts us thus. Too much realism is oppressive.

IT'S A GIRL!

HENRY CLAY BATE, Universal publicity expert, is wearing "the smile that won't come off," these days. The reason? Enough! For he is now a family man in the strict sense of the word, father of a little lady scaling nine pounds, who made her appearance quite recently. Both mother and child are progressing favorably. The wedding of Geneve Cole to Henry Bate took place last summer. Prior to her marriage, Mrs. Bate was well known as a short story writer, some of her work appearing in leading magazines. MOTION PICTURE NEWS extends due congratulations.

JOYOUS JOHNNY HINES

JOHNNY HINES made a personal appearance at the Hotel Plaza, New York, August 28, at the close of the successful premiere of C. C. Burr's "The Live Wire," this being his initial starring production under First National's banner. He was given a great "hand" by the big crowd, whose enthusiasm over the star was every whit as unbounded as that with which they greeted the picture. After the performance Johnny and C. C. Burr were hosts at a unique party among the guests being Helen Hudson, prima donna of George White's Scandals, and Helen Morgan, the McCarthy Sisters, Sally Starr, Evelyn Martin, Alice Weaver, Jean Williams, Chris Crane, Marjorie Shaw, Bert Kember, Jean Francis of the same show, John Irving Fisher and Miss Chalfonte. The premiere was attended by so many screen celebrities that lack of space prevents personal mention of the lineup, but you can take our word for it that it was a glorious gathering.

There's nothing high hat about Vilma Banky, Valentino's leading woman in "The Lone Eagle" (United Artists). She's merely posing in Rudy's Cossack hat from the film.

EVELYN BRENT HERE

Evelyn Brent, F. B. O. star, is staying at the Commodore Hotel, New York, intending to spent three weeks, solely "on pleasure bent." Miss Brent certainly needs a vacation as she has just completed a series of eight crook melodramas and on her return will start another series of eight for the same company. After attending school and playing in pictures a number of years in Gotham she went to England in 1918, where she appeared on the stage and before the camera for five years. In 1922 she returned to this country and was featured in Metro and Fox pictures. This is her first trip to New York in three years.

Connecticut Situation Still Involved: Plan Payments

Walsh Denies Rumors of Exhibitor Dissatisfaction

RUMORS of a split between the distributors and the Connecticut Motion Picture Theatre Owners over the payment of the tax and the affixing of stamps, credited in newspaper stories to Joseph W. Walsh, president of the Connecticut Theatre Owners, were emphatically denied by Walsh in a telegram to MOTION PICTURE NEWS on Wednesday in which he declared that there was "absolutely no truth in these rumors."

Although last minute reports from New Haven and Hartford were of a scattering and desultory nature, the telegram from Walsh shows that the Connecticut situation stands as follows, up to the time of going to press:

Walsh, Charles C. Pettijohn and Tax Commissioner William H. Blodgett are working out a practical plan for the payment of the tax along lines as convenient and equitable to the industry and to the State of Connecticut as possible. This will include a method for the affixing of the stamps, probably in New York and Boston, the computing of the tax on pictures now showing, and the making of the initial payment. A scale of payments is being worked out under which exhibitors will contribute to the revolving fund.

Application has been made for a rehearing on the constitutionality of the measure before a special term of the Federal court in Connecticut, on the grounds that its constitutionality was previously passed upon as a police power measure, whereas it is in reality a tax or revenue measure.

The case has also been filed with the U. S. Supreme Court, and as it now affects interstate commerce, it will be a preferred case in the matter of priority.

Practically all exchanges have moved out of the state and film shipments are being made from New York and Boston into the state. All contracts are being carried out, although new contracts are not being made for the present.

Tax Commissioner Blodgett has shown every disposition to work with the distributors and exhibitors in order to fix an equitable and effective way of collecting the tax. The proffer of a check earlier in the week was refused by the state, on the ground that no disposition of this money was provided for, but it was expected that a solution of this would be found during the week and that payments would commence.

Meanwhile, conferences are being held daily with Commissioner Blodgett, with distributors and with Connecticut exhibitors, in an effort to work out a plan under which theatres may continue operation despite the tax measure.

The revolving fund created for this purpose will be used in making the initial tax payments and in keeping them up for the present. A scale of payments is being worked out under which exhibitors will help to keep up this fund, one of the favored plans calling for this allotment:

A. 32 theatres at $31 a week, totalling $992 each week.

B. 42 theatres at $21 a week, totalling $882.

C. 48 theatres at $16 a week, totalling $768.

D. 73 theatres to pay nothing.

Under this plan, netting a revenue of $2,642 a week, the larger theatres would carry the smaller ones, many of which would be crippled or heavily handicapped, it is believed, by the imposition of even a small tax. These payments will not suffice to keep the revolving fund up to its present figure, but they are believed to be as heavy as exhibitors can be expected to bear at present.

As soon as the authorities can check up the list of films to be exhibited in Connecticut this week and next, it is expected that the first payment will be computed and collected. Until that time, the actual operation of the tax is held in abeyance.

The matter of affixing the stamps on the prints is also creating serious difficulty at present. Some means is hoped to be arrived at by which this can be done in New York and Boston, since the individual exhibitor, who may be located at a great distance from Hartford, can do this only with the greatest difficulty.

As announced, all contracts are being carried out, so far as possible, but no new ones are being entered into for the present. It was rumored that some of the smaller independents were taking advantage of the situation by going out and making contracts for product. These will have to pay their own tax, according to the Hays office, since the revolving fund cannot be used to aid those whom it is felt are operating unfairly in the situation.

The Hartford-Connecticut Trust Co. of Hartford has been designated as the agency for the payment of taxes on all films exhibited in the state.

To date, few theatres have closed, and contracts now in force will provide product for the majority of houses for nearly six months. These contracts will all be carried out, it is emphasized, although the film will be shipped from Boston and New York. This places on the exhibitor a higher transportation cost, but every effort will be made to make shipments on time and get them to the Connecticut houses without delay.

The estimated revenue form the measure, which is admittedly problematical, has been placed at about $75,000 a year. This fact is the basis for the application for a hearing in Connecticut on the constitutionality of the measure. It is contended that the magnitude of the revenue to be derived makes the law a tax or revenue measure and not a police power measure or censorship act. The previous hearing in the Federal court tested the constitutionality of the law as a police power measure, which was upheld. Such a measure, however, must provide for a revenue which covers merely the cost of enforcement. If there is a substantial surplus over the above this, to go into the state treasury, the measure is automatically a revenue one.

The Connecticut hearing will be held as soon as possible, and if this fails, the matter will be carried to the U. S. Supreme court, where the case has already been filed. With the removal of the exchanges from New Haven, all shipments immediately come under the Inter-State Commerce regulations, and any case bearing on the restriction of this automatically takes priority over others in the Supreme court. There are, however, a great many such cases already on the calendar and there may be some little delay before it can be heard.

There is now only one small exchange in operation in New Haven, and 517 persons were thrown out of employment by the enforced closing down. These employes held a mass meeting, at which the mayor of New Haven spoke, and protested the tax law which brought about the situation.

Will H. Hays stated that his office would take "all possible serious procedure along economic and legal lines to correct a most unfortunate situation."

The independent exchange owners of New Haven, members of the Independent Motion Picture Association of America, have co-operated with the steps already taken, it being felt that the situation demanded unanimous action. Frederick H. Elliott, general manager of the association, issued the following statement:

"The Independent Motion Picture Association of America, representing producers,

Attorney General's Forces Sift Film Monopoly Charge

New York Times Says Investigation Is Under Way

THE New York Times in its issue of September 3rd. carried an interesting news story concerning an investigation that has been instigated by the Department of Justice as to whether there are monopolistic combinations in the industry that violate the provisions of the anti-trust laws.

The trade in general has been aware that such an investigation has been under way but until the present no details have been available.

The Times prints the following relative to the action together with some of the details of the Federal Trade Commissions proceedings in the action brought against Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and other respondents all of which has been reported at length in Motion Picture News as the numberless hearings were held in various parts of the country.

The Times also says that an official of the Department of Justice stated that in complaints brought to the notice of the Attorney General it was specifically charged that certain moving picture producers and distributers had refused reels to theatres in many cases and that pictures were supplied in innumerable instances under conditions that were regarded as objectionable by exhibitors.

Department of Justice agents also were instructed to make a report on the operations of certain film boards of trade affiliated with the organization headed by Will Hays according to the official.

In prosecuting their inquiries the department agents have visited practically every moving picture centre in the country. They have also examined many individual exhibitors who have brought complaints. Department officials decline to indicate what conclusions have been drawn from reports already received.

The Times story bore a Washington date line and apparently was an exclusive article secured direct from the Department of Justice from authentic sources.

The important portions of the article follow:

A special investigation of the moving picture industry of the United States, conducted by agents of the Department of Justice, to determine whether any monopolistic combination or combinations dominate the trade in violation of the Federal anti-trust laws, is nearing completion and the results soon will be presented for consideration by Attorney General Sargent.

Particular attention has been paid to the activities of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will H. Hays, former Chairman of the Republican National Committee, is the head, and the film boards of trade affiliated with the Hays organization.

The investigation, now drawing to a close, was instituted three months ago by order of Attorney General Sargent and is based upon complaints of individual and group theatre owners that they have been damaged by discriminations in the matter of picture distribution, that combinations are in existence that tend to restrain trade in the industry and that these combinations are in violation of the provisions of the anti trust laws prohibiting unfair practices and agreements as to price fixing.

Every distributing and producing picture group in the country, including so-called independents as well as those associated with the Hays organization and the Hays organization itself, have been and are being subjected to close scrutiny by agents of the Department of Justice, who will soon finish their work in the field and submit their final reports to the Attorney General and his assistants.

Two Investigations Run Parallel

The Department of Justice investigation in the moving picture field, it was said, runs parallel to the like inquiry into the industry made by the Federal Trade Commission, which was based upon an original complaint filed with that body Aug. 30, 1921, and an amended complaint submitted Feb. 14, 923. E. C. Alvord, the chief examiner of the Federal Trade Commission, has made a report in which he sustains charges of the commission against the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and other picture producing and theatre owning firms named in the original and amended complaints.

It is the nnderstanding that the data collected by the Trade Commission bearing on the operations of a half dozen or more moving picture corporations shortly will be transmitted to the Attorney General for comparison with the reports on the same subject made by agents of the Department of Justice.

Whether a suit or suits will be filed in the Federal courts to dissolve an alleged combination or combinations in the moving picture field, on the ground that they are violating the anti-trust laws, will be determined at an early date.

Paragraph 5 of the original complaint filed with the Federal Trade Commission summarizes briefly the charges made against the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and a number of like concerns. It reads:

"The respondents, Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation have conspired and federated together and with respondents, Jules Mastbaum, Alfred S. Black, Stephen A. Lynch and Ernest V. Richards, Jr., and Realart Pictures Corporation, the Stanley Company of America, Stanley Booking Corporation, Black New England Theatres, Inc., Southern Enterprises, Inc., and Saenger Amusement Company to unduly hinder competition in the production, distribution and exhibition of motion picture films in interstate commerce and to control, dominate, monopolize, or attempt to monopolize the motion picture industry." It was further alleged:

Says Paramount Controls 6,000 Theatres

"As a further result thereof, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is the largest theatre owner in the world, and in one week in the year 1920—more than 6,000 American theatres, or approximately one-third of all the motion picture theatres in the United States, showed nothing but Paramount Pictures, and about 67 cents of every dollar that was paid to enter motion picture theatres was paid to enter those theatres which displayed Paramount pictures."

Substantially, like charges as to other moving picture corporations were made in complaints filed with the Attorney General, with the result that he decided to probe the industry as a whole.

In their reply to the amended complaint of the Federal Trade Commission the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation denitd each and every allegation contained in Paragraph 5. They deny the jurisdiction of the Trade Commission, and aver that the act creating the commission is "indefinite, uncertain and in violation of the Constitution of the United States." They declare further that the matters complained of do not constitute interstate commerce. They defend affiliations with certain corporations as a means of competing with other groups of producers. They assert that their acquisition of theatres was solely for investment that such acquisitions have not been lessened, but has been increased and that a monopoly has not been created, but has been prevented."

Germany Key to Important and Growing Film Market

No. 7: Production Prospers and Theatres Thrive

By L. C. Moen

ALTHOUGH Great Britain is today our most lucrative market for American pictures, Germany is pressing close behind and there is every indication that it may even surpass England in this respect. Although the operation of the Kontingent undoubtedly hampers matters somewhat, it also has its benefits. The revenue from Germany, per picture, is increasing and within a year or two should reach a very attractive figure.

While many things in Germany's financial and economic situation still require adjustment, for the most part things are moving toward normal prosperity probably faster in Germany than in any other large European nation.

As has been stated, England has more or less reached its maximum for the present; France has been somewhat poor but shows indications of becoming a good market within the next few years; Germany stands in a point between. A fairly good market, it is growing better and may be expected to reach a point of high development sooner than other countries on the Continent.

The Kontingent may be confidently expected to remain as long as German companies desire to have it, and its removal would be unlikely unless the effort came from them. At the same time, I am not so sure but that a system by which only selected product enters the market is better for everyone concerned than one which permits the indiscriminate dumping of all American films, good or bad, suitable or not.

According to recent statistics, compiled by the Litchtbild-Buehne, there are 3,669 theatres in Germany with a total of 1,315,246 seats. These afford in themselves a fairly lucrative market, and together with other markets available to the German producer offer him a fair chance to make money on productions of a modest type. Germany, of course, leads all other countries, exclusive of America, in scope and volume of production.

New theatre construction is fairly active in Germany—rather more so than elsewhere—and it is interesting to note that the number of theatres with more than 1,000 seats has increased from 58 to 67, since 1921, with several to open very soon. A steady increase is shown all along the line and the theatre field is all that could be expected, in view of conditions the last few years.

As Germany's export business grows, in general manufacturing lines, the prosperity of its people will grow with it. The people in Germany today are spending their money, and whether this is healthy or not, from an economic standpoint, it is profitable for any amusement enterprise.

Many German theatres are antiquated and inadequate—no one will dispute that—but new construction is proceeding as rapidly as can be expected. I am not so certain that the strictly American type of picture theatre would be either wanted or appreciated in Europe.

Our type of front, in particular, seems to be superfluous in Europe. Possibly a taste could be developed for it, but at the present time I do not believe that any elaborate front in the American style would have the slighest effect on business at the box-office. Europeans are accustomed to the severely plain facade and expect nothing more.

Comfort and attractiveness inside are, however, important. American types of ventilating and cooling systems would probably meet with favor. Electric displays before the theatre, such as I saw, were very bad. German poster art is excellent, but the Germans do not seem to have mastered electrical display. Some of the theatre fronts have as many lights as ours, but the placing of them is such as to give a rather cheap and tawdry effect, although the same materials might be rearranged to provide a brilliant and valuable display.

Projection is usually good; in fact, I found projection of surprising excellence throughout Europe. A leading German optical firm put out a projection machine of considerable size but great excellence, which gives clear, steady projection. In several European projection booths I saw devices and attachments of the greatest ingenuity which would undoubtedly be of value here.

The Ufa company has a projection room which deserves a whole article by itself, if space permitted, since it is probably the most remarkable to be found anywhere. Designed for experimental purposes, it has every type of apparatus, every attachment, every feature that could be imagined.

It is in practical features, therefore, that there is the greatest room for improvement. If a leading American theatre architect could go to Germany for some little time, make a thorough study of conditions there, and draw up certain standards and model plans, much good might be accomplished. At present, efforts are being made to copy leading American theatres, but there is some question about the success of this in the absence of experts thoroughly familiar with the building of American cinema palaces.

An effort is being made in Berlin at present to build up a theatre district around the Kurfurstendamm, a leading thoroughfare, where several of the new houses are going up. At the same time, Berlin has a certain similarity to a city such as Chicago, where large and magnificent neighborhood houses are the rule. There is a splendid opportunity in Berlin for the same thing, as the city consists of several "cities within a city," and there are a number of prosperous residential suburbs offering a good field. As an example of this, Ben Blumenthal's Scala theatre, located in a neighborhood district, has been used on a few occasions for showings of pictures, and no difficulty has been found in filling it, although it is the second largest in Berlin.

Your German does not just "drop in at a picture" because he happens to be walking along a certain street. His existence is too well ordered for that. He plans to see a certain picture, has his dinner at a certain hour—and wants to know that he will be able to see the picture. For that reason, the reserved seat policy is in favor, and a lobby display has little selling value. The neighborhood house profits by this, since it is convenient for persons in that particular district to reach.

In a general way, the German public likes good pictures, regardless of what country they were produced in. As far as I could learn, the fact that a picture is German-made neither helps nor hurts it. The question is: "Is it a good film?" If so, it can be American, Italian, British or any other nationality.

Soon after the war, Western films were tremendously popular, since they came as a distinct novelty, but that popularity has waned. Now they like our big productions, pictures with some novel angle, society or problem plays, such comedians as Chaplin, Lloyd and Keaton—but especially novelty. The picture which has something strikingly unusual about it has an excellent chance on this market. Such pictures as "Nanook" and "King of the Wild Horses" are eagerly welcomed by the German public.

It must be remembered, too, that educational pictures enjoy a popularity in Germany which they have never held here. A special production of this sort, "Ways to Strength and Beauty," was running while I was in Berlin, and despite mid-summer conditions it was doing remarkable business, although the picture has no story or plot in any sense.

Under the Kontingent system, an equivalent footage of German-made film must be distributed for each foreign production, but this system does not guarantee exhibition and American films are heavily in the majority in the theatres. At the same time,

Proposes Permanent Campaign Body

Buhler in Letter to Hays Suggests National Organization to Exploit Industry; Cites Movie Season Accomplishments

FORMATION of a permanent national organization of the active men in the Greater Movie Season Campaign to function the year round as an agency to exploit and promote the interests of the picture industry as a whole is proposed in a letter written to Will H. Hays by Frank W. Buhler, managing director of the Stanley Company of America.

In his letter suggesting such a movement Mr. Buhler says:

I am of the opinion that a permanent organization of the active men in the Greater Movie Season Campaign might be perfected —not only for Greater Movie Season each year, but for the general exploitation of the Motion Picture Industry as a whole, bringing it constantly before the public.

The will to do has been the thing that has made the picture industry and I am sure that the motion picture distributors would welcome and would help an organization that would be perfected for the purpose of selling pictures to the public.

Acting immediately upon Mr. Buhler's plan the Greater Movie Season Headquarters is communicating with the general managers of the Campaigns to learn their thoughts regarding the suggestion. If the active workers in the various campaigns favor such a move, the Hays organization will assist in every possible manner, serving the exhibitors with material and acting as a clearing house.

Whether or not a definite organization is perfected, the Hays Organization plans to furnish to all exhibitors who can use such material, a service of publicity and advertising matter that can be used as a follow up on this year's Greater Movie Season Campaign, and for leading into next year's.

Announcement from the headquarters of the Greater Movie Season Campaign states that there is no question now as to whether there will be a Greater Movie Season next year. Many exhibitors have declared that the drive should be made an annual affair. Among theatre men in smaller towns who have written to headquarters asking for another campaign next year is Billy Connors of Marion, Ind., who reported his business was "about forty percent better than last year. We certainly do want another next year." John C. Ingram, for the Midwest Amusement and Realty Co., of Scottsbluff, Neb., writes, "We're for Greater Movie Season strong. Please put our name down at the top of the list for 1926."

Charles W. Krebs, general manager of the Louisville campaign, writes, "I am informed that the box office receipts in a number of theatre increased from 20 to 50 percent over the same week last year in spite of the fact that the weather here Sunday to Wednesday was the hottest we have had in Louisville this summer. I have no doubt that Louisville will celebrate Greater Movie Season every year."

Earle D. Wilson of New Bedford, Mass., writes, "Unquestionably this campaign should be made an annual affair. Its business and showmanship possibilities are too evident to need even discussion."

Harry Crandall of Washington, D. C., believes that plans should be made for carrying on the campaign for at least five years.

Dorothy Gish May Appear in Stage Play

DOROTHY GISH may make her debut on the speaking stage with her husband, James Rennie, in a contemplated stage version of the film production, "Clothes Make the Pirate," if plans of Sam Rork, producer of the picture, do not miscarry. Miss Gish, is considering the offer made by Rork, who is endeavoring to interest Flo Ziegfeld in associating with him in the venture.

Another name that would add lustre to Rork's plans, if arrangements could be made, is that of Leon Errol, star of "Louis the 14th," the current Ziegfeld New York musical comedy hit. Errol is now dividing his time between appearances in the stage play and the filming of "Clothes Make the Pirate," in which he is starring with Miss Gish. The picture is being produced for release through First National.

Labor Strikes On in Four Cities

Musicians Quit Theatres in Des Moines and Cleveland; All Union Workers Out in Niagara Falls—Settlement in Baltimore

THEATRE men and representatives of the Musicians' Unions in Cleveland and DesMoines failed to reach an agreement over contracts calling for pay-increases and picture houses in those cities commenced to operate without music on September first as a result. A strike also hit three theatres in Niagara Falls, where the musicians, stage hands and operators walked out at the Strand, Bellevue and Cataract theatres. No agreement has been reached between the theatre managers and musicians in Atlanta and theatres there continue to show pictures without orchestral accompaniment. The difficulties arising over a new contract for operators in Baltimore have been ironed out after rather prolonged discussion of the terms of the new contract submitted theatre men by the operators' union there.

The union men in Niagara Falls quit the Strand, Bellevue and Cataract theatres on August 29 and their places were taken at once by 43 members of the National Theatrical Federated Union, all of whom were taken to Niagara Falls from New York City. The stage hands there demanded an additional man on every stage crew as well as a 12 per cent increase. Operators demanded thirty-three and one-third per cent increase in wages, while the musicians wanted an increase of 10 per cent. The Lumberg and Amendola theatres in Niagara Falls both gave in to the demands of the unions.

After seven hours of battling on Saturday night, August 29, the stage hands of Buffalo theatres reached an agreement with the Buffalo Theatre Managers' association, whereby the men are to receive a five per cent increase in wages effective September 1 and covering a period of two years.

Des Moines' picture houses have been without musical accompaniment since September 1. A. H. Bland, head of the organization which operates the Des Moines, Capitol, Garden, Palace, Strand and Majestic theatres, today made public a statement in which he definitely announces that the theatres will not pay the increase in salaries demanded by the musicians' union.

"The contracts with the musicians and stage employees will expire August 31," Blank's statement says.

"Representatives of these bodies have approached us with a demand for a substantial increase in the wage scale and when we found it impossible to accede to these demands they notified us that with the ending of the existing contracts we will have no musical accompaniment in our motion picture houses."

Blank promises that the theatres will remain open, however.

So far as known the Casino theatre and Riverview park are the only theatres which have reached an agreement with the unions.

The musicians playing in the first-run motion picture theatres of Cleveland have asked for a forty per cent increase for the coming season, starting September 1st. The other musicians have asked for a proportionate increase. Asked how this affects the leading first-run houses operated by Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., it was stated by an official of the company that the demand means an added expenditure of $100,000 a year for music at the Stillman, Allen and Park theatres.

"The public will not stand any boost in admission prices, and the theatres cannot stand $100,000 a year increase in operating expenses. So Cleveland fans can look forward to having their pictures served to them without music until an equitable settlement is made with the musicians," he added.

No change has been developed this week in the situation existing between the theatre managers of Atlanta and the Federation of Musicians. The orchestras in all first run motion picture houses are still out, and notwithstanding the belief that a settlement of the existing controversy is impending, so far nothing definite has come about.

Most of the theatres continue to use special attractions in the way of dance revues and jazz orchestras, and report that business has not made any drop or appreciable change that may be attributed to the lack of orchestras.

Seider, For M.P.T.O.A., Offers New Form Of Contract

Important Changes on Arbitration Proposed

A NEW form of exhibition contract, whose adoption will be urged by the M. P. T. O. A., was made public this week by Joseph M. Seider, chairman of the organization's Contract and Arbitration Committee.

Mr. Seider made it clear that the contract was being submitted to the whole industry. "We offer it with the firm conviction that it contains a solution to our contract and arbitration difficulties; that it is equitable and that it affords every protection to both sides," said Mr. Seider.

"We do not demand that it be accepted without change," he continued. "We solicit and will welcome constructive criticisms and suggestions."

The chief provisions of the proposed contract were outlined in detail by the M. P. T. O. A. official as follows:

"We have given the subject much study, have investigated the application of the present contracts and arbitration system in many states and have gone far afield to obtain assistance so that this proposed contract should through its terms, brevity and simplicity serve to minimize disputes and thereby lessen, if not entirely eliminate, litigation through both law and arbitration.

"The proposed contract is in two sections. The contract proper and a set of rules or supplemental contract. We feel that the contract proper should cover those provisions which need be agreed upon at the signing of the contract, such as price, names of pictures, protection, run, etc. The terms that would assume importance only in the event of a controversy are covered in the Rules. There is provision made for the Rules being binding and a part of the main contract. Thus the theatre owner has only a short document to check up when signing for pictures and he will easily detect the addition or omission of clauses. This together with the fact that the proposed contract contains a warrantee that the contract is the approved Standard Exhibition Contract will assure a uniform contract.

"Mr. Nathan Burkan's suggestion for a solution of the designation of play dates problem is in our opinion the most feasible offered. We have incorporated in our proposed contract Mr. Burkan's clause relating thereto with the addition of a provision for specific dates for second or subsequent runs and a provision for relief in the event a theatre owner is forced into an overbought condition because the pictures he had contracted for had not been made available to him.

"All pictures contracted for must be made available and played within a year. No running into another year. A playdate becomes a pay-date.

"The Arbitration clause in the proposed contract is in accordance with the law. It is fair to both sides and it is ample. It only exempts a dispute arising out of the violation or attempted violation of protection. In such a dispute provision is made for injunctive relief.

"The theatre owner who does not want to enter into a contract providing for compulsory arbitration is given the option of protecting the distributor through depositing with the distributor a sum equal to ten percent (10%) of the amount of the contract as security for the faithful performance of the contract.

"The theatre owner who agrees to arbitration with such an option will not, if a dispute arises, refuse to submit same to an arbitration board. He will in every instance if it is against him carry out the decision or award of the Arbitration Board.

"This together with the provisions made for open hearings, for the availability of the records to the disputants and the press, for the right to the disputants to challenge the appointed arbitrators and replace them with their personal choice, for the refunding to the exhibitor who successfully defends an arbitration claim, his railroad fare and expenses, for the giving to the Arbitration Board jurisdiction over matters arising out of ethics and fair dealings and for a Contract Commission and Appeals Board, will win over many opponents of Arbitration.

"The theatre owner is entitled to and must have relief from the present contract and arbitration procedure. If distributors have honest objections we in all sincerity beg them to state them. If they have none they should not withhold a square deal from us any longer."

Rules Provided for in Proposed Contract

Following are the Rules provided for in the approved Standard Exhibition Contract and made a part thereof:

Identified this .... day of ....., 19...

1. The Board of Arbitration shall consist of four persons, two Distributors who do not own or operate theatres and two Exhibitors who are not directly or indirectly affiliated with a producer or distributor.

The two Distributors' representatives shall be selected by the ..... to serve for one month. The two Exhibitors' representatives shall be selected by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America to serve for one month.

No member of the Board of Arbitration shall sit in any case or controversy in which he has an interest direct or indirect.

In case of a tie vote the Board of Arbitration shall appoint a fifth arbitrator, and if they are unable to agree, then the Chairman of the Board of Arbitration shall request the presidents of the respective organizations of which both litigants are members to make the appointment and in the event they are unable to agree then the Chairman shall request the Mayor of the City in which the dispute is arbitrated to make the appointment.

The Exhibitor shall have the right to challenge the Exhibitors' representatives on the Arbitration Board appointed as herein provided and shall have the right to name the two exhibitors who shall serve on the Arbitration Board in his particular case or controversy.

Likewise, the Distributor shall have the right to challenge the Distributors' representatives on the Arbitration Board appointed as herein provided and shall have the right to name the two distributors who will serve on the Arbitration Board in his particular case or controversy.

2. The Board of Arbitration shall have general power, after a thorough and impartial hearing of any dispute or controversy (1) To determine such dispute or controversy, (2) to make findings thereon, (3) to direct what shall be done by either party or both parties with respect to the matter in dispute, (4) to elect its chairman, (5) to, in any decision or award, include a rovision therein requiring the payment by one party to the other of compensatory damage and or indemnity, (6) to also provide in any decision or award that the railroad fares and hotel bills incurred by the Exhibitor shall be paid to the Exhibitor by the Distributor, in the event the Board of Arbitration shall find in favor of the Exhibitor against the Distributor in the pending controversy or shall dismiss the grievance brought by the Distributor against the Exhibitor, (7) to have jurisdiction over all matters in dispute arising under an application for a contract, (8) to have jurisdiction in all matters of fair dealing and ethics arising out of a contract, even though not specifically provided for therein.

3. There shall be formed an Arbitration Commission consisting of three Exhibitors and three Distributors. The exhibitor members shall be appointed by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and the Distributor members shall be appointed by ..... This Commission so constituted shall have the power of supervision of all Arbitration Boards, to review such decisions of Arbitration Boards as may in its discretion merit review and shall have the power to avoid or amend or modify the award thus reviewed and to make such changes in the Approved Standard Exhibition Contract and these rules as may from time to time become necessary.

4. The hearings before the Arbitration Boards shall be open. The records of the Arbitration Boards shall be available and open to the Press, Exhibitor Distributor and their organizations and counsel. Copies of complaints, awards, minutes and calendars shall be available to the Distributor and Exhibitor and their organizations.

5. Both the Distributor and the Exhibitor agree:

(a) None of the photoplays specified in the contract shall be reissues from old negative except it is so expressly noted therein.

(b) The photoplays specified in the contract shall not contain any paid advertising.

(c) Contracts may be assigned by either party providing the assignment is in writing and accepted in writing by the assignee and approved in writing by the Distributor or the Exhibitor as the case may be, in which event the assignor shall be released from his or its liability hereunder.

(d) The exhibition date of each photoplay which has not otherwise been specified on the contract shall be fixed as follows:

(D-1) For all purposes herein the release date of such photoplay shall be construed to be the date when such photoplay shall have been exhibited for the first time in a first run theatre in the key city or exchange centre in the district in which the theatre specified in the contract is located.

Prompt notice of such exhibition date and the date of the expiration of the protection period of said first run theatre shall be given to the Exhibitor.

From and after the date of the expiration of such protection period, such photoplay shall forthwith become available to the Exhibitor for exhibition under his contract.

(D-2) If the Exhibitor is entitled to a first run of a photoplay the Exhibitor shall fix an exhibition date, such date to be within a period not exceeding three weeks following the expiration of the protection period aforementioned. The notice of the exhibitor fixing the exhibition as aforementioned shall be given to the Distributor at least two weeks prior to such exhibition date.

If the Exhibitor shall fail to fix such exhibition in the manner above provided, the Distributor shall, promptly after the expiration of three weeks following the protection period, fix such exhibition date, such date to be within two weeks following such three week period and in such case the date so fixed by the Distributor shall, for all purposes hereunder, be deemed the exhibition date of the photoplay.

(D-3) In case the Exhibitor shall have a run subsequent to a first run, and the number of days, subsequent to the run immediately prior to the Exhibitor named in the contract, after which the Exhibitor

"The Approved Standard Exhibition Contract"

Proposed for the Industry's Consideration by Joseph M. Seider, Chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Contract and Arbitration Committee.

THE Distributor warrants that this contact conforms in every respect and detail with the APPROVED STANDARD EXHIBITION CONTRACT, on file with ...., and identified by the signature of its President, on the ..... day of September, 1925.

AGREEMENT, made in triplicate, this ..... day of ....., 19...., between ....., a corporation (hereinafter called the "Distributor") and ....., operating the ..... theatre, at ....., City of ..... and State of ..... (hereinafter called the "Exhibitor") as follows:

1. The Distributor hereby grants to the Exhibitor, and the latter accepts, a license under the respective copyrights to the several photoplays hereinafter in the schedule below designated and described, subject to the terms and conditions herein specified, to exhibit, during and within the year commencing on the ..... day of ....., 19...., and ending the ..... day of ....., 19...., and the Distributor agrees to furnish to the exhibitor during and within the said period, each of such photoplays in the theatre herein specified only, for the number of successive days herein specified, and to deliver to a common carrier or to an agent of the exhibitor, a positive print of each of such photoplays, in time for exhibition at the theatre and on the dates herein specified or determined as herein provided.

2. The Exhibitor agrees:

(a) To pay for such license as to each of such photoplays, the sums herein specified, at least three (3) days in advance of the date of shipment of each of such photoplays by the Distributor.

(b) To pay the cost of the delivery of each of such photoplays to the theatre from the local exchange of the Distributor and their return to the said local exchange.

(c) To return each of such photoplays in the same condition in which they were received, reasonable wear and tear excepted.

(d) To be liable in an amount not exceeding four (4) cents per lineal foot for each foot of the positive prints of such photoplays, that is damaged, lost or stolen while in his possession.

3. The Distributor agrees not to permit or authorize or license the exhibition of any of such photoplays in violation of the run and protection granted to the Exhibitor as follows:

4. Each of such photoplays shall be available to the Exhibitor, unless a definite exhibition date is specified herein, in the manner provided in the Rules hereinafter provided for.

5. SCHEDULE.

Release No.	Title of Production	Cast	No. of reels	Play dates	No. of days	Price

6. Excepting always and only the right of the Exhibitor to take such proceedings as he may deem advisable to enjoin any breach or threatened breach or violation by the Distributor of any of the provisions relating to run or protection provided for herein, the Distributor hereby consenting to the granting of an injunction restraining such breach or threatened breach, it being agreed that in case of any such breach the damages to be sustained by the Exhibitor is irreparable and incapable of definite ascertainment and computation, the parties hereto agree that before either of them shall resort to any Court to determine, enforce or protect the legal rights of either hereto, he shall submit to a board of arbitration consisting of an equal number of Distributors and Exhibitors, which board of arbitration shall be formed and shall function as provided in a set of Rules on file with ..... and identified by the signature of the President of said Association, which rules are made a part hereof the same as if they had been fully set forth herein, all disputes, claims and controversies arising hereunder, including those based upon a repudiation or rescission, or attempted repudiation or attempted rescission of this contract, for determination.

The parties hereto further agree to abide by and forthwith comply with any decision or award of such Board of Arbitration in any such arbitration proceedings, and agree and consent that any such decision or award shall be enforceable in or by any court of competent jurisdiction pursuant to the Laws of the State of New York, now or hereafter in force and the parties consent to the introduction of such findings in evidence in any judicial proceedings.

7. The foregoing clause Six relating to arbitration shall become null and void and the parties hereto shall retain all their rights and powers at law and in equity in the event the Exhibitor deposits with the Distributor a sum equal to ten (10%) percent of the total sum payable by the Exhibitor to the Distributor under the terms of this contract, and in the event the Exhibitor so elects to deposit said sum of money with the Distributor, the Distributor agrees to pay to the Exhibitor interest on said sum or any balance remaining due from time to time at the rate of two (2%) percent per annum. Such moneys shall constitute trust moneys, and shall not be commingled with its other moneys unless and until and at the time when the sum shall be applied on account of the last sums payable hereunder. It is hereby expressly provided and understood however, that Clouse Fve of the Rules referred to and provided for in the said Clause Six shall at all times and in any event be in force and effect and a art of this contract.

8. This contract shall be deemed an application for a contract only and shall not become binding upon either party ..... unless accepted in writing by an officer of the Distributor and notice in writing of acceptance sent to the Exhibitor within ..... days from the date hereof. The Exhibitor may withdraw this application at any time prior to its acceptance by the Distributor as provided for herein.

9. No terms or representations have been made by either party to the other except as herein set forth.

In witness whereof, the arties hereto have hereunto set their signatures and seals this day first above written.

is entitled to such photoplay is not specified, then the Exhibitor's exhibition date shall be fixed in like manner as herein above provided for the exhibition with respect to a first run, except that all periods shall run from the date of the expiration of the protection period of the exhibitor having a run immediately prior to that of the exhibitor named in the contract.

(D-4) In the event any photoplays shall not be exhibited in a first run theatre in the key city or exchange center in the territory embracing the theatre named in the contract within a reasonable time after its production, and within such period no definite booking therefor shall have been fixed by any such first run theatre, then the Distributor obligates itself to fix a general release date which shall be within a reasonable time after the completion of the production of the photoplay and such release date so fixed shall be deemed the release date for all purposes under this paragraph. Said photoplay shall thereupon forthwith after such date become available for exhibition under contracts, with the same force and effect as if such release date were the date of expiration of the protection period herein above in the preceding subdivision referred to.

(D-5) In case the contract shall embrace a series of featured photoplays featuring a particular star or director, the Exhibitor shall not be required to exhibit more than one photoplay of such series every five weeks.

(D-6) So far as the same may be feasible, the Distributor agrees to distribute the photoplays embraced under the contract at equal intervals apart, to the end that the Exhibitor shall be enabled to exhibit such photoplays within a year at approximately equal intervals.

(D-7) In the event of the failure of the Distributor to make available to the Exhibitor the photoplays embraced under the contract as provided herein, the Exhibitor may at his option cancel the contract embracing such photoplays not made available by giving written notice of cancellation to the Distributor.

..(D-8) If any of the photoplays specified in the contract shall be released by the Distributor after the year specified in the contract, the Distributor shall be obliged to deliver such photoplays to the Exhibitor as though released within the year specified and the Exhibitor may at his option accept such photoplays at such later period and pay for and exhibit same pursuant to the terms of the contract.

In case the Exhibitor shall be delayed in or prevented from performance of the contract or any part thereof by the elements, accidents, strikes, fires, Court orders or Acts of God, such delay in or prevention of performance shall be excused and all damages arising therefrom are hereby expressly waived by the Distributor.

In case the Distributor shall be delayed or prevented from making deliveries of a photoplay or photoplays as provided in the contract by reason of accidents, elements, strikes, fires, Censor Pulings or an Act of God, such delay in or prevent of delivery shall be excused and all damages arising therefrom are hereby expressly waived by the Exhibitor.

The Distributor or the Exhibitor as the case may be shall give prompt notice in writing to the other of the happening of any of the above mentioned contingencies, and the reasons therefor.

West Coast Gets San Diego Houses

AS a result of the acquisition of the Balboa and Cabrillo theatres in San Diego, the West Coast Theatres circuit now extends from San Diego to Sacramento in California. A. M. Bowles, general manager of the West Coast concern, said the San Diego houses will be operated along the same lines as all others of the company. H. L. Hartman, recently manager for West Coast in San Bernardino, has been placed in charge of the company's interests in San Diego, with H. E. Holcomb as assistant, and Robert Collier in charge of Publicity.

Pantages Will Build Coast Chain

ALEXANDER PANTAGES, head of national vaudeville enterprises, announced last week in his home in Seattle that he would soon begin construction and operation of a chain of motion picture theatres on the Pacific Coast.

The first move in the plan will be the construction of large houses in Seattle and Tacoma, the estimated cost of which will be in excess of $1,000,000 each. Following the establishment of a chain of considerable proportions, Pantages declared it was his intention to enter the field of production. He will produce the pictures for his own and other independent theatres.

Washington Theatres Only in Deal

Crandall and Stanley Company Merger Also Includes First National Franchise

WASHINGTON theatres only, are involved in the merger of the Crandall Theatres and the Stanley Company of America, and the First National franchise and Crandall's Exhibitors Film Exchange are included in the deal, according to the latest announcement regarding the transaction.

Details of this big financial transaction, whereby the eleven Crandall Theatres in Washington are merged with the Stanley Company of America, were made public by Harry M. Crandall, founder of the circuit of fifteen motion picture houses of the first class in Washington and vicinity that have always been known by his name.

The monetary consideration involved in the deal was in the neighborhood of $8,000,000 and the local theatres which become a part of the immense holdings of the Stanley Company, with headquarters in Philadelphia, Pa., are Crandall's Metropolitan, Tivoli, Ambassador, Central, Savoy, Avenue Grand, Apollo, York, Home, Lincoln and the new Colony under construction at the corner of Georgia Ave., and Farragut St., N. W. In addition to these popular picture houses control of the regional First National franchise for the Washington territory and the Exhibitors Film Exchange, owned by Mr. Crandall, passes to the Stanley Company. This integral unit in the vast Stanley combine will be known as The Stanley-Crandall Company.

While the Stanley Company of America acquires a majority of the stock in the new company through the merger, Harry M. Crandall is not eliminated from the local amusement field. The deal resulting in the formation of the Stanley-Crandall Company was predicated upon an imperative stipulation that Harry Crandall sign a long-term contract to continue as the guiding genius in full control of the chain of playhouses which he established and has brought to such a high point of popularity and profit. It is also declared that the Crandall executive staff, as well as the operating personnels of the individual theatres will continue to function, without change, as in the past.

Harry M. Crandall retains a substantial stock interest in the Stanley-Crandall Company and by this new move becomes an important executive in the operation of an immense theatrical enterprise of which the total capitalization may conservatively be said to be $30,000,000.

The financial considerations involved were not paramount in the mind of Mr. Crandall in consummating this amalgamation. Under the expert advice of the leading legal and financial minds of this and other cities, he was convinced that at a time when mergers are the order of the day throughout the United States, with a probable final outcome of centralized control of the motion picture industry in its every ramification, he would best be serving the interests and safeguarding the hopes of the Washington public whose staunch support has been the basis of his success in the amusement field by affiliating his interests with one of the most powerful exhibiting concerns on the continent.

The operation of the various lines of service not directly allied with the box-office will be continued precisely as in the past. The Public Service and Educational Department, which has never been looked upon as a source of revenue but merely as a valuable liason department between the Crandall Theatres and that segment of the public not directly concerned with the picture industry or any form of theatricals, will be continued under the personal direction of Harriet Hawley Locher, and the Crandall Saturday Nighters, the popular radio broadcasting unit that takes the air through station WRC every Saturday night from 10:30 P. M., to midnight, will not be stilled by the new arrangement.

The officers and directors of the Stanley-Crandall Company will be as follows for the period of one year:

Jules E. Mastbaum, president and director; Harry M. Crandall, vice-president, treasurer and director; Fritz D. Hoffmann, comptroller and director; George A. Crouch, assistant treasurer and director; Morris Wolf, secretary; Irving D. Rossheim, assistant secretary and director; Abe Sabolsky and John J. McQuirk, directors.

The local executive staff, as in the past, will consist of Joseph P. Morgan, general manager; John J. Payette, assistant general manager; Nelson B. Bell, director of advertising, publicity and broadcasting; Fritz D. Hoffmann, comptroller; Paul B. Davis, auditor; George A. Crouch, treasurer; George C. Larkin, assistant auditor; Nat. B. Browne, private secretary, and Daniel Breeskin, musical director-in-charge. Nat Glasser will continue as head of the Crandall technical and mechanical department.

Famous Pennsylvania Deal Confirmed

Company Will Acquire a Number of Important Theatres From the Wilmer and Vincent Chain

POSITIVE confirmation was obtained in Harrisburg, Pa., on August 28, from Sydney Wilmer, president, and Joseph Egan, general manager of the Wilmer & Vincent Company, of New York, that, despite recent reports to the contrary, a big deal is about to be consummated whereby the Famous Players-Lasky Company will acquire a number of important theatres from the Wilmer & Vincent chain in Pennsylvania.

This confirmation came after the flood of conflicting rumors that had been in circulation all summer,—but without heretofore any official authority,—to the effect that Famous Players-Lasky were to purchase sixteen Wilmer & Vincent theatres in various Pennsylvania cities, including Harrisburg, Reading, Allentown, Altoona, Easton and elsewhere. Until Mr. Wilmer and Mr. Egan went to Harrisburg on August 28 the impression had become general that the reported negotiations had been abandoned, but the positive statement is now made in their behalf, through C. Floyd Hopkins, the Wilmer & Vincent Harrisburg representative, that a deal is now certain to be effected whereby Famous Players will get "at least some of the Wilmer & Vincent circuit."

Mr. Wilmer and Mr. Egan declined to be specific as to which theatres are to be included in the transaction, but gave assurance of a detailed announcement in Harrisburg at a very early date. The statement prepared by Mr. Hopkins and given to the press of Harrisburg for publication, said: "There has been some cause for the numerous rumors that have been floating thick and fast for the past several months concerning the possible transfer of one or more of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg to the Famous Players-Lasky company, and transfers of other theatres in the state. Until this time no information as to the probable base for such rumors has been given by officers of either organization, although it has been known that the Famous Players-Lasky people have been endeavoring to locate here."

Prior to their coming to Harrisburg Mr. Wilmer and Mr. Egan, with Mr. Hopkins, attended the formal opening of the New Strand theatre, by the Nathan Appell interests, in York, Pa., on the night of August 27, where they were guests of Mr. Appell. They were in Harrisburg only a few hours and then went to Reading, where there are a number of Wilmer & Vincent theatres.

The purpose of Famous Players-Lasky in acquiring Central Pennsylvania theatres is understood to be to establish freer channels for the showing of Paramount pictures. Announcement already has been made in advertisements in Harrisburg that Paramount pictures are to be shown hereafter at the Victoria Theatre, one of the Wilmer & Vincent Harrisburg houses, and the unofficial impression in that city is strong that the Victoria and also the Colonial are two Harrisburg houses that Famous Players will include in the pending purchase.

It is pretty certain the Wilmer & Vincent company will retain the Majestic and the Orpheum in Harrisburg, the former a vaudeville house, which, however, will become a legitimate theatre this Fall, when the Orpheum, heretofore a legitimate theater, is rebuilt, at an expenditure of $750,000, for a vaudeville house that will seat 2,600.

Full details of the pending deal, as affecting Wilmer & Vincent theatres in various cities of the state, are expected to be forthcoming almost immediately.

WalkerDemonstrationPlanned

Luncheon and Rally at Hotel Astor, September 9—Big Crowd is Expected

A LUNCHEON and demonstration in honor of Senator James J. Walker, Tammany candidate for mayor of New York City at the primaries to be held September 15, will be staged at the Hotel Astor on Wednesday, September 9.

A big attendance of representatives of the industry is expected and arrangements are being made by the Motion Picture Division of the Walker Campaign, with headquarters at 1600 Broadway, to take care of a record crowd.

It is planned to make the demonstration a monster rally in behalf of the Senator, who will of course be present and will speak. The names of the other speakers will be announced later. They will include prominent personages both in and outside the industry, and several surprises will be sprung. Everybody in the industry will be invited.

The Motion Picture Division, which has been actively at work since the campaign started, announced this week that its plans were now perfected for the final stretch of the battle, and made public the complete list of committees and officials in the drive.

Former State Senator Walter R. Herrick, a prominent attorney and personal friend of the Senator, is General Chairman. Samuel I. Berman, long a leader in exhibitor organization affairs, is the executive secretary and A. H. Schwartz is treasurer.

The Executive Committee is composed of the following: Charles L. O'Reilly, President of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, Chairman; Sydney S. Cohen, former President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and now Chairman of the board of that organization, Associate Chairman; J. Arthur Hirsch, prominent exhibitor, Secretary. The other members are: Harry L. Reichenbach and Mr. Schwartz.

Finance Committee — A. H. Schwartz, Chairman; Oscar A. Price, President of Tri-Stone, representing producers; Felix Feist, general manager of distribution, Metro-Goldwyn, representing distributors; Harry L. Reichenbach, representing publicity and advertising men; William A. Johnston, editor of Motion Picture News, representing the press; S. Eckman, representing exchanges; and Joe Hornstein, representing accessory dealers.

Publicity Committee—J. Arthur Hirsch, Chairman; Clarence Cohen, Marty Schwartz, Fred Wilson, I. Weinberg and H. Mackler.

Exhibitors Committee—Sol Raives, Manhattan; John Manheimer, Brooklyn; Rudolph Sanders, Brooklyn; Joseph Jaime, Bronx; B. Noble, Bronx; Sol Brill, Queens; Hy Gainsboro, Queens; Charles Moses and L. Rosenblatt, Richmond.

Salesmen's Committee—L. Weinberg, Bronx; S. Title, Manhattan; S. Trauner, and B. Schultz, Brooklyn.

An important feature of the campaign is the supplying of trailers and slides to theatres in New York and this work is being handled from headquarters.

Connecticut Situation Still Involved

distributors and exchanges to the number of 105, has no war with the people of the State of Connecticut. It believes that the film tax law imposes a hardship which, if duplicated in the other states, would cripple the motion picture business, and which in the State of Connecticut imposes too great a penalty on an already too heavily taxed industry.

"It believes this law to be unfair, and, from information received from wide spread sources in Connecticut, that it is not a law popular with the people, who naturally must eventually bear its burden. It believes that this law should be repealed, but it also believes that the people of Connecticut, as part and parcel of a free commonwealth, have the right to settle their own propositions without outside interference.

"This Association is against depriving the people of the State of Connecticut of its amusement in the motion picture theatres by any boycott or other reprisal.

"It believes that the entire matter can be left with safety to the judgment and sense of fairness of the people of the State of Connecticut and that the local motion picture theatre owners are capable of presenting their case to the people fairly and openly, without the annoying aid and blundering interference on the part of paid attorney rsepresenting certain well meaning but misguided persons in the motion picture business.

"The motion picture theatre men of Connecticut have their business existence at stake and they foresee the sweeping away of their investments by the operation of this tax, because to them it is a problem as to how it is possible for the public to absorb the burden.

"For the present at least nothing can be done toward having this burden shared by the public, the motion picture theatres of Connectiut have had to expend thousands of dollars in the middle of one of the worst seasons in their history, and there is no way that they now see that they can get it back.

"As far as the independent motion picture exchanges are concerned some have closed their New Haven offices, not from a desire to boycott anybody, but because their slim resources are in danger of being wiped out by the tax.

"This association is not in favor of any carpet-bagging activities, and does not desire in any way to enter into the situation except to give such aid as is necessary to keep the theatres open and the business running.

"If this can be made plain to the public, possibly the people would have a better understanding of the actual situation. It is the purpose of the Independent Motion Picture Association of America to cooperate insofar as possible with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connectiut and the owners and managers of the independent exchanges serving theatres in htat state."

Legislative Committee is Named by I. M. P. A.

BEFORE leaving for the Coast Saturday, President I. E. Chadwick, of the Independent Motion Picture Association of America, appointed a special Legislative Committee necessary. Selection of the committee to act for the Association wherever was authorized at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Association last Friday, and one of its first duties will be to consider the Connecticut tax situation if it develops that a special session of the General Assembly is to be called by Governor Trumbull.

The committee is made up as follows:—

Chairman Price said that he contemplated no immediate activity for the committee unless it develops that it may be of assistance in Connecticut.

Pathe Earnings for Year Equal to $9 a Share on Outstanding Stock

PATHE EXCHANGE, Inc., earnings for 1924 were equal to $9 per share on 155,000 shares of stock outstanding, according to the Wall Street Journal. In an interview with a representative of the Journal, Bernhard Benson, vice-president, discussing Pathe's financial condition for the first six months of this year, is quoted at follows:

"Profits for the first six months of this fiscal year should be fully as large as in the corresponding period last year. Fall is usually the best season for the moving picture business, but current bookings are very satisfactory.

"The Pathex camera and projector recently placed on the market are meeting with pronounced demand and inquiries are coming in from all parts of the United States. Substantial orders have been received from leading department and sporting good stores.

"Business of du Pont-Pathe Film Manufacturing Corp. is showing improvement and ratio of profits to sales is satisfactory. We look for a very good year for Pathe from every standpoint."

In and Out of Town

NAT G. ROTHSTEIN, of F. B. O., has returned to his desk after a four weeks' vacation in the Maine Woods.

PRESIDENT Joe Brandt, of Columbia, is back after a motor and golfing vacation in New York State, New England and Canada.

HENRY GINSBERG left this week for a short business trip to Chicago.

K. HIRATA, of the Star Film Corp., Tokyo, Japan, is in New York making purchases of pictures for his territory.

F. C. MUNROE and John C. Flinn of Producers Distributing Corp., are back after a trip to Hollywood.

Minnesota Court Upholds Theatre Bond Law

Discontinuance of free shows in Minnesota is forecast following the action of the district court at Mantorville in upholding the conviction and fine of William Jamieson, Claremont, Minn.

Jamieson was arrested on complaint of R. V. Morse, exhibitor and constable at Claremont, in a test case of the new Minnesota law providing that license from the state fire marshal and indemnity bond to cover possible damages must be taken out.

He waived a jury trial and was fined $15 to expedite appeal. The case may be taken to the state supreme court by the Community Amusement Association of Minneapolis which sponsored the project and which it is believed will be virtually eliminated from the state if the decision stands.

Montreal Poster Censor Change Effected

An important technical change is being made in the poster censor's bureau at Montreal, Quebec, which is under the direction of Martin Singher, a former local newspaperman. The bureau was opened a year ago as a division of the Montreal Police Department as it was considered as a disciplinary feature of the civic administration.

The bureau has now been transferred to the city treasurer's department because of the recognized and admitted fact that it has become more of a revenue producing office than anything else, local exchanges and exhibitors paying the bill. More than a $1,000 per month is being collected through the poster taxation locally.

Mason Building House in Goldsboro, N. C.

Rudolph Mason, who is now operating the Acme theatre in Goldsboro, N. C., is building a new theatre there, to be called the Maxon. It is understood the house will cost approximately $750,000, and will be ready for its opening October 1st. The theatre when completed will seat 1,000 people, and will be modern and attractive in every way.

Roxy Sails for Europe This Week

S. L. ROTHAFEL leaves for Europe September 5th in the interest of the new Roxy Theatre Corporation. He will return some time in October. His trip will take him to England, France and Germany. Accompanying Roxy will be Arthur H. Sawyer, one of the leading spirits of the new organization; Mrs. Arthur H. Sawyer, Dorothy Sawyer, Clark Robinson, Rothafel's art director and Yascha Bunchuk, cellist.

One of the purposes of the trip will be to make an exhaustive study of the folk lore and folk songs of various European countries, his intention being to present this folk music in conjunction with the contemplated entertainment program at the new Roxy Theatre.

During Rothafel's absence, Herbert Lubin and William E. Atkinson, his associates in the theatre building project, will push to completion the plans involving the contemplated Roxy chain of houses.

Shelbyville, Ill., is scheduled to vote September 3 on an ordinance to permit the showing of motion pictures and the holding of other amusements on Sundays. The vote is expected to be close.

Germany Key to Growing Market

the German producers are doing well and those who are content to make pictures at a reasonable cost are making money on them. A more critical condition will exist in regard to pictures now being made for the world market, at great expense, and the cost of which cannot be returned in Germany alone. If an outside market can be found for these, well and good. If not, the production branch of the industry may find itself in serious straits.

As mentioned in a previous article, Germany is the key to the Central European market, which includes also Austria, Hungary, the Balkans, Russia, perhaps Sweden and Holland. Austria and Hungary are small markets and are showing more and more American films. The Balkans are not a great factor. Russia is questionable. The time has not yet arrived when any great amount of money can be grossed there. There are many theatres in Russia, apparently, and doing good business, but the monopoly which exists makes it necessary to take the price offered for whatever pictures are desired, subject to acceptance by the censor board. All in all, it is not now especially profitable. Sweden, as mentioned last week, is strongly organized and taking care of much of her own wants, so that she is less open as a market than before. Holland is not grossing a great deal of money at present. Germany, however, is a rich and growing field, and her production methods are so interesting as to deserve separate consideration.

Yeggs Work as Policemen Prosecute

While 200 St. Louis policemen crowded the city courts to prosecute men and women for petty offenses such as playing pinnochle and lotto for doilies and the like, two youthful bandits held up three employees of the Grand Opera House, 514 Market Street at 10:40 a. m. Monday August 24, and escaped with the Saturday and Sunday receipts totaling $5,500. It was the third hold-up of the morning.

James P. Brennan, manager, Schuyler French treasurer, and Miss Agnes Rempe, stenographer, were the employes of the theatre stuck-up by the bandits.

Warners Acquire State in Pittsburgh

WARNER BROS. added this week to their rapidly extending list of first run theatres by taking over for a long term the State Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., from the Rowland & Clark interests. This is a downtown house, one of the best known in Pennsylvania.

The State is the latest acquisition of Warner Bros., who are taking over leading theatres in key centers throughout the country to assure first runs for their productions. It is acquired just following the formal opening of Warners Theatre, formerly the Piccadilly, New York, and almost simultaneously with the opening as a Warner house of the Circle, in Cleveland.

Announcement of the acquisition of several others also has been made recently.

Schulberg Schedule Arranged

Will Deliver Fourteen by Middle of April, With Six Others to Follow

B. P. SCHULBERG, producer of Preferred Pictures, and J. G. Bachmann, general manager of distribution have mapped a production and release schedule providing for the delivery of fourteen pictures by the middle of April, the balance of six to follow by early Summer.

The first two pictures, "Parisian Love" and "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work" are already available for first runs. "With This Ring" is the third release and it is set for September 5th. Fred C. Windermere directed, while the cast includes Alyce Mills, Lou Tellegen, Forrest Stanley, Donald Keith and Dick Sutherland.

"Free to Love," directed by Frank O'Connor and featuring Clara Bow, will be delivered September 25th. "The Other Woman's Story," a Gasnier production, is due on October 16th. Robert Frazer, Alice Calhoun, Helen Lee Worthing, Mahlon Hamilton, Riza Royce and David Torrence are the principals.

Following this production on November 16th comes "The Plastic Age," one of the highlights of the Schulberg schedule. Clara Bow and Donald Keith head the cast. The picture story is an adaptation of the Percy Marks novel.

The second Marcel De Sano production on the schedule will be released November 27th. It is titled "Lew Tyler's Wives." The first De Sano production was "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work."

"The Lawful Cheater" is due for release on December 18th, with Clara Bow as the featured player. The production was directed by Frank O'Connor. The first Schulberg release of the new year will be "Horses and Women," adapted from the L. B. Yates Saturday Evening Post novel, "The Biography of a Race Horse."

"Eden's Fruit," directed by Gasnier will be the release for January 28th, to be followed by "The Romance of a Million Dollars" on February 18th. This will directly precede the screen version of Bronson Howard's play "Shenandoah," to be released on March 11th.

"Dancing Days," another Gasnier production will be shown on April 2nd, while the Larry Evans story, "The Aristocrat" will follow on April 25th.

T. Roy Barnes Signed for Columbia Feature

T. Roy Barnes has been engaged to appear with Elaine Hammerstein in the Columbia Pictures production of "Ladies of Leisure," which Tom Buckingham is to direct, it has been announced by Harry Cohn, production head of the company. The picture will be offered on one of the Columbia specials.

Director Horne Completes One, Starts Another

James W. Horne has completed the direction of the Pathe comedy for which he took a company of thirty to Yosemite Valley recently, and has already started a new Hal Roach comedy in which Lucien Littlefield, Katherine Grant and Tyler Brooke have the principal roles.

"The Gold Rush" Screened for President Coolidge

Charlie Chaplin's "The Gold Rush" was screened for President Coolidge and a party of friends at White Court, Swampscott, the "Summer White House." A print of the picture was sent to White Court by Hiram Abrams, of United Artists at the request of the President.

Matt Moore in Male Lead With Marie Prevost

Warner Brothers have selected Matt Moore to play the leading male role opposite Marie Prevost in "The Jazz Bride," which Herman Raymaker is directing. Supporting Miss Prevost and Moore are, John Patrick, Mabel Julienne Scott, George Irving, Don Alvarado, Margaret Seddon and Helen Dunbar.

Beery and Hatton Chosen for "Two Solidiers"

Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton will appear with Mildred Davis in "The Two Soldiers," the Paramount production which will bring Miss Davis back to the screen after an absence of some time. Camera work on the picture will start when Victor Fleming, who is to direct, completes "Lord Jim," which he is now filming.

Tom Ricketts to Appear in Dorothy Revier Feature

Tom Ricketts has been added to the cast which will support Dorothy Revier in her next Waldorf production, which Columbia Pictures will release. The leading male role is to be played by Cullen Landis and Antonio Gaudio will direct.

Conway Tearle and Aileen Pringle in "The Mystic", a Metro-Goldwin-Mayer production.

M-G-M Get "The Mysterious Island" Rights

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have secured picture rights to "The Mysterious Island," by Jules Verne and it will go into production at an early date under the direction of Jack Conway.

From the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer publicity offices comes the word that this will be the greatest underwater motion picture ever made. The underwater scenes will be filmed under the direction of J. E. Williamson, owner of the undersea equipment and laboratory at Nassau, Bahamas. Wyndham Gittens, M-G-M scenarist, is now adapting the story for the screen.

Ralph Lewis to Star in Gotham Feature

Ralph Lewis will play the starred role in "One of the Bravest," the Gotham Production now being filmed for distribution through Lumas Film Corporation, according to an announcement by Sam Sax, head of the organization. Lewis will have the role of a fireman, the central figure in this melodrama, which is to be staged under the personal supervision of prominent fire department officials.

Douglas Gilmore Joins Cast for "Only Thing"

The addition of Douglas Gilmore to the cast of "The Only Thing" is announced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He only recently joined that stock company. The story was written by Elinor Glyn and she will also direct it. Aileen Pringle and Conway Tearle have the leading roles in this production. The balance of the cast is now being selected.

Director Edward's Son Makes Screen Debut

J. Gordon Edwards, Jr., twenty years old son of the film director, will make his debut as a screen actor in a role in "The Plastic Age," a B. P. Schulberg Preferred Picture now in production under the direction of Wesley Ruggles.

$100,000 Improvements at F. B. O. Studios

IMPROVEMENTS amounting to approximately $100,000 have been completed at the F. B. O. studios on the coast, which are now housing five F. B. O. companies at work and ten other independent companies on a rental basis. The improvements embrace extension of construction in all departments of production.

Three new projection rooms have been built and stages 1 and 2 have been combined into one mammoth stage. Twenty new offices have been erected for occupancy of outside concerns. Additional dressing rooms and store rooms have also been provided.

Among the F. B. O. units at work are Fred Thomson in "Ridin' The Wind," Evelyn Brent in "Three Wise Crooks," Ralph Lewis in Emory Johnson's "The Last Edition," Dick Talmadge in "The Prince of Pep," Maurice Flynn in "Heads Up," Tom Tyler in "Let's Go Gallagher" and Alberta Vaughn in "The Mazie Series."

P. D. C. Opens British Offices

Eight Branches Established Throughout United Kingdom With London Headquarters

PRODUCERS Distributing Corporation has established eight branches throughout the United Kingdom and "supervising" offices in London and Berlin, it was announced this week. The organization which will handle the company's own product in Great Britain was established by William M. Vogel, general manager of the Producers International Corporation, the foreign division of P. D. C., who returned to the States last week after a three months trip in Europe.

The new British distributing agency has been incorporated as the Producing Distributing Company, Ltd., with headquarters in London at No. 12 Great Newport Street, and eight subsidiary exchanges throughout the provinces. Mr. A. George Smith who headed the British Goldwyn Limited prior to its merger with Metro, has been engaged as managing director of Producers Distributing Company, Ltd., and will be in complete charge of the release of the D. C. product in England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales.

Film Booking Offices of England handled the 1924-1925 releases of Producers Distributing Corp. during the past year.

While in Berlin Mr. Vogel arranged for the distribution of the P. D. C. releases throughout Germany with National Film, A. G., of which company Herman Rosenfeld is Managing Director.

The interests of Producers International Corp. are being supervised for France, Belgium, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal and Italy by Mr. F. de Sacadura with offices at No. 2 Rue de Lanery, Paris, France. And during the next thirty days an office will be opened for the supervision of the P. D. C. distribution through Central and Northern European countries and the outright sale to other European markets reached directly from Berlin.

Columbia Denies Sale Rumors

Cohn Says Company Will Stay Independent in Answer to the Rumors of Affiliation

AN emphatic denial that Columbia Pictures had been sold to a large producing and distributing company was issued this week by Jack Cohn, who with Joe Brandt and Mr. Cohn's brother Harry, are the owners of the Columbia company. Rumors to the effect that the company would be absorbed by one of the larger organizations gained currency recently and in his statement denying these reports as absolutely groundless Mr. Cohn declared that "Columbia would stay independent and is not on the market despite all the stories which have been published of late."

He stated that a number of offers have been made for the company within the past few weeks. In his statement Mr. Cohn said in part:

"As proof of the fact that we do not intend to sell out, we are formulating plans for a bigger production season the coming year and we have completed plans for the acquisition of one of the largest studio units on the coast.

"We have already acquired several plays, books and stories of wide circulation. And on top of this, because of the support of the exhibitors this year we have backed up our promises by our cash in order to help the exhibitors make more money.

"We have the support of the best exchange men in the country, men who know all the 'ins and outs' of picture distribution, to handle our product. They want us to continue making pictures for them. Such keen exchangemen as North, Charnas, Amsterdam, Ellman, Hyman, Sheffield, Oldknow, McConville and Montague Rosenthal & Steinberg, Mayne, Grauman, Friedman, and H. & W. distribute Columbia Pictures everywhere successfully.

"We are in the business of making pictures as independents and as long as we have the support of the exhibitors we will continue as independents and we will not consider any offer to sell out no matter how flattering it may be."

Paul Whitcomb Made Studio Manager of Glendale Plant

Paul Whitcomb of Haverhill, Mass., has been appointed studio manager of the Whitman Bennett Studio at Glendale, according to an announcement this week. Mr. Whitcomb, who has been making a study of picture production, will assume his duties immediately. New electrical equipment is being installed at the plant and production on four pictures is expected to start soon.

Schuessler Appointed "U" Casting Director

Universal announces the appointment of Fred Schuessler as casting director at Universal City to succeed Fred Datig, who resigned last week. Schuessler has been in the employ of Universal for the past three years as assistant to Datig and is regarded one of the most capable casting directors in Hollywood.

"Madam Lucy" Now Titled "Madam Behave"

The Al Christie feature starring Julian Eltinge, famous female impersonator, will be released by Producers Distributing Corporation under the title of "Madam Behave" instead of "Madam Luey," the original title.

Saxton Now Associated With Chadwick Pictures

Charles Saxton, formerly cartoonist with the New York World, is now associated with the Chadwick Pictures Corporation as title writer and gagman. Saxton first entered pictures with Chadwick in the capacity of gagman for productions in which Leon Lee was interested. Later he collaborated with Lee in titling Larry Semon's "The Wizard of Oz." He recently resigned as director of the art department of the Vanderbilt Newspaper Syndicate to return to the Chadwick company and he is now writing the titles for "The Perfect Clown," Semon's new feature comedy.

Leatrice Joy to Star in "Made for Love"

"Made for Love" is the title of the next feature in which Leatrice Joy will be starred by Cecil B. De Mille. The production, which will be released by Producers Distributing Corporation, will be put into work immediately upon completion of the star's current feature "The Wedding Song." Paul Sloane will direct "Made for Love," which was written by Garrett Ford.

Van Loan Writes Original Story for Fox

Fox will start production shortly on "Streets of Six," an original story just completed by H. H. Van Loan. Among the previous stories Van Loan has written for Fox production were "The Speed Maniac," "Three Gold Coins," "Red Terror" and "Winning With Wits."

Moberly Mayor Vetos Sunday Openings

The fight of Moberly, Mo., a town of 25,000 inhabitants, to obtain Sunday motion picture shows, apparently has just begun. J. M. Jefferies, mayor, Monday vetoed a measure passed by the city council providing for Sunday shows. The bill had passed the council by a vote of 5 to 3. The mayor in his veto said that if the ordinance went into effect it would produce a "long vexatious struggle and agitation through the prosecuting attorney, grand jury and others to enforce the law."

One more vote for the measure will be necessary to pass the ordinance over the mayor's veto. Ministers waged a warm fight against the proposed ordinance, obtaining a list of more than 2,000 names to a petition, but exhibitors, on the other hand, obtained a petition with more than 4,000 signed names, so the theatre owners are hopeful that the measure again will be passed by the city council.

Helen Lee Worthing Cast for Schulberg Feature

Helen Lee Worthing, former "Follies" girl who is now devoting herself exclusively to picture work, has been engaged for a principal role in "The Other Woman's Story," a Schulberg production being directed by Gasnier. Alice Calhoun is playing the wife with Robert Frazer as the husband in this feature.

"Eden's Fruit" to Be Next Gasnier Production

B. P. Schulberg has announced that "Eden's Fruit" will be produced by Gasnier as his next work for the Schulberg company. The story was written and adapted by John Goodrich. Gasnier is now filming "The Other Woman's Story" and upon its completion will start the Goodrich story.

Warners Announce New Sales Appointments

SAM E. MORRIS, general manager of distribution for Warner Bros., this week announced new appointments in the sales organization of that company.

Jacob M. Klein has become manager of the Albany office. His work previously has been largely in the Boston territory. Lloyd Willis, a veteran in film sales work, is now special representative out of the New York office, and Edwin Silverman in addition to his duties as district representative has taken over the management of the Chicago Exchange.

Appointments of managers for several of the Warner Bros. theatres in the South were announced by George H. Dumond, general manager of the company's theatres. B. H. Stough is now assistant manager of the Broadway in Charlotte, N. C. Ed. C. Pearce is manager of the Broadway in Columbia, S. C.; Ed. W. Williamson is the new manager of the Lexington Theatre, Lexington, S. C.; and M. Merriweather becomes manager of the New Concord at Concord, N. C.

JOSEPH SCHILDKRAUT Signs Exclusive Contract With De Mille

JOSEPH SCHILDKRAUT, stage and screen star, has signed a long term contract to appear exclusively in Cecil B. De Mille productions after completion of his starring contract with the producers of "The Firebrand," the stage success.

The actor recently completed work in "The Road to Yesterday," De Mille's personally-directed production for Producers Distributing corporation release. He interrupted his work in "The Fireband" to play the picture role and the engagement of the play was suspended to permit members of the cast a vacation and allow the star to fill his contract with De Mille.

Universal Purchasing Stories

Production Plans Are Practically Completed for Season of 1926-27

THOUGH the 1925-26 season is only just getting under way, Universal has already practically completed the story lineup for the 1926-27 season. With the exception of a half dozen stories and plays now being negotiated for, the schedule is all but provided for.

This announcement was made following the return from the coast of Mrs. Winifred Eaton Reeve, Universal's scenario editor. She was in conference for two weeks at Hollywood with Raymond L. Schrock, general manager of Universal City, and the coast production and scenario departments. It is likely there will be four more Jewel productions next year than this, in addition to three super-Jewels of the type of "The Phantom of the Opera."

Two of the Denny pictures have already been purchased. They are "Rolling Home" by John Hunter Booth and "Signs" by Dorothy Grundy. Of about ten stories which are under consideration, Universal will purchase three more in the next two or three weeks to complete the Denny schedule.

So far two stories have been chosen for Louise Dresser. They are "Perch of the Devil," a dramatic novel by Gertrude Atherton, and "The Vehement Flame" by Margaret Deland.

For Norman Kerry Universal plans a big racing story, a big naval story, and the Frederick Isham story, "This Way Out," which was announced for Reginald Denny but was crowded off of this year's Denny schedule. The racing story is entitled "Racing Blood" and was adapted by Winifred Eaton Reeve from the "Blister Jones" stories by John Tainter Foote. For the naval story Universal has purchased "The Big Gun" by Richard Barry, published first in the Argosy All Story Magazine.

For Mary Philbin Universal plans a production of the anonymous novel, "Another Woman's Life." "Folle Farine" by Ouida is already being put into film form, and two original stories are being written for Miss Philbin also.

For Laura La Plante are "Brides Will Be Brides," a newspaper serial by Lucille Van Slyke which ran in between four and five hundred daily newspapers this year.

"Click of the Triangle T" by Oscar J. Friend, which recently appeared in novel form, is the first of the Hoot Gibson stories to be purchased. Another Hoot Gibson story is "Cow Jerry" a novel by George W. Ogden.

Among the all-star pictures which have been purchased are "The Quest of Joan," by James Oliver Curwood, "The Old Soak" by Don Marquis, previously announced; "Crimes of the Arm Chair Club" by Arthur Somers Roche; "Spangles," a big circus story by Nellie Revell; "The Whole Town's Talking," a play by John Emerson and Anita Loos; "The Cow Girl" by Arthur Stringer; "Cap Fallon, Fire Fighter" by John Moroso.

Kane Changes Title of His First National Feature

Robert Kane has changed the title of his production for First National, based on Frederick Palmer's novel "Invisible Wounds" to "The New Commandment." The work is being filmed under the direction of Howard Higgin with Blanche Sweet, Ben Lyon, Holbrook Blinn, Claire Eames, Dorothy Cummings, Pedro de Cordoba, Effie Shannon, Lucius Henderson, George Cooper and Diana Kane in the principal parts.

Five From Fox Due This Month

Widely Varied Attractions Are Offered to Exhibitors During Month of September

FIVE widely varied attractions are on the Fox release schedule for the month of September. They are titled "Kentucky Pride," "As No Man has Loved," "The Wheel," "The Timber Wolf" and "Havoc."

"Kentucky Pride" is first on the list, scheduled for September 6th. It is the autobiography of a racing fillie. John Ford produced the picture in which such horses are seen as Man O'War, Negofol, Morvieh, Fair Play and The Finn. In the cast are Henry B. Walthall, J. Farrell Mac Donald and Gertrude Astor.

"As No Man Has Loved" is based on Edward Everett Hale's story, "The Man Without a Country." It has already had a successful three months' run on Broadway. Edward Hearn enacts the title role, with Pauline Starke and Lucy Beaumont chief in the supporting cast. September 13th has been set as the release date.

The second attraction of the John Golden unit of clean American pictures, "The Wheel" by Winchell Smith, will be presented on September 20. Victor Schertzinger directed. Margaret Livingston, Harrison Ford, Claire Adams and Mahlon Hamilton head the cast.

On the same date as "The Wheel," Buck Jones will appear in his first starring vehicle of the season, "The Timber Wolf," based on Jackson Gregory's novel. Elinor Fair is the heroine and Dave Dyas, the villain.

The greatest picture of the five is "Havoc," based on the international stage success of the same name by Henry Wall. The action of the picture takes the hero and the villain, George O'Brien and Walter McGrail, to the front in France. Madge Bellamy is the heroine, and Margaret Livingston is the heartless woman who laid waste men's hearts. Leslie Fenton, Bertram Grassby, Eulalie Jensen, David Butler and Harvey Clark have important roles. This is the second Rowland V. Lee production of the season.

Ochs on First Trip for Warner Brothers

Lee Ochs, until recently managing director of the Piecadilly, now the Warner Theatre in New York, has started on his first trip as field representative for Warner Brothers. It will take him through the Pittsburgh territory. Ochs is visiting first run exhibitors with a view to closing deals and remedying conditions existing in various territories.

"Free Lips" Next Vehicle for Norma Shearer

"Free Lips," by Carey Wilson, will be Norma Shearer's next starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Hobart Henley will direct and Lew Cody is to have the leading male role. The story was adapted for the screen by Hope Loring and Louis Leighton.

Henry King Completes Work on "Stella Dallas"

Henry King has completed production work on "Stella Dallas," which he is producing for Samuel Goldwyn and scheduled for distribution by United Artists. The picture has been in production four months. A Broadway presentation of the picture will be given in October.

Louis N. Jaffe Enters Independent Field

Louis N. Jaffe, prominent New York lawyer and realtor, has entered the picture field as an independent produeer, under the name of the Jaffe Art Film Corporation, of which he is president.

The new organization will produce a number of pictures during the coming season. The first work, now nearing completion at the Tec Art Studios, will star Lila Lee with Maurice Schawtz, noted Jewish dramatic actor, in the main supporting role. The story is based on a stage play of immigrant life.

Paramount's "Lord Jim" Cast Completed

Victor Fleming has completed the cast for Joseph Conrad's "Lord Jim," which he is directing for Paramount. The featured players are Percy Marmont, Noah Beery, Raymond Hatton, Joseph Dowling, George Magrill, Duke Kahanamoku and Madeline Hurlock. Others in the cast are Jules Cowles, J. Gunnis Davis and Nick de Ruiz.

Vignola to Direct "Fifth Avenue" for Belasco

Robert G. Vignola has been engaged to direct the production of "Fifth Avenue," which Belasco Productions, Inc., will make for distribution by Produeers Distributing Corporation. The story is an adaptation of a work of the same title by Arthur Stringer and will be published in the near future by Saturday Evening Post.

Two More of Warner Bros. Forty Finished

"The Clash of the Wolves" and "Compromise," two more of the Warner Brothers forty for the season have been completed at the Hollywood studios of the company and are now in the cutting room in preparation for distribution.

Rin-Tin-Tin is the star of "The Clash of the Wolves," and is supported by a cast that includes June Marlowe, Charles Farrell, Charles (Heinie) Conklin, Will Walling and Pat Hartigan. The story and scenario are by Charles Logue. Noel Smith directed.

Irene Rich is starred in "Compromise," which is an adaptation from the story by Jay Gelzer. In the supporting cast are Clive Brook, Louise Fazenda, Pauline Garon, Helen Dunbar, Winter Hall, Raymond McKee, Frank Butler, Muriel Frances Dana, Lynn Cowan and Edward Martindel. Alan Crosland directed.

Associated Arts Starts on "Flaming Waters"

Associated Arts Corporation was scheduled to start production this week on "Flaming Waters" for F. B. O. release. It is a melodrama of the oil fields from an original story by E. Lloyd Sheldon and was prepared for the screen by Fred Kennedy Myton, scenario editor at the F. B. O. studios. The production will be supervised by Ludwig Erb and direction will be by Harmon Weight.

Announce New Title for "The Sea Woman"

First National announces that the title of Edwin Carew's new production will be changed from "Dangerous Currents" to "Barriers Aflame." The story is based on Willard Robinson's play, "The Sea Woman." Blanche Sweet, Robert Frazer, Charles Murray, Russell Simpson, Fred Warren, Dorothy Sebastian and Edward Earle play the leading roles.

Murphy Named Universal Production Manager

Martin Murphy will succeed William Koenig as production manager at Universal City, according to an announcement by Raymond L. Schrock, general manager. Koenig resigned recently. Murphy has been in the employ of Universal for more than ten years, starting as an assistant director with the old I. M. P. company at the Fort Lee Studios.

Hobart Henley Has Signed Long Contract

HOBART HENLEY has signed a new long term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to direct a series of pictures, the first of which will be "Free Lips," an original story by Carey Wilson. Hope Loring and Louis D. Leighton have been assigned to prepare the scenario.

The new contract is said to be largely the result of the good work done by Henley in the direction of "The Slave of Fashion," Norma Shearer's initial starring vehicle, and "Exchange of Wives," which has just been completed.

Film Booking Offices Will Produce "Life of Theodore Roosevelt"

F. B. O. is to produce "The Life of Theodore Roosevelt" as the most lavish production on the company's program since its inception. J. I. Schnitzer, vice-president of F. B. O. in charge of production, now at the coast studios of the company, and B. P. Fineman, production manager are perfecting details so that actual production on the film may be started immediately.

The production will vividly depict the high lights in the romantic and interesting career of this great soldier and statesman. A graduate of Harvard, Roosevelt served in the New York state assembly from 1882 to 1884. Later he became Police Commissioner of New York. He then became a member of the National Civil Service Commission and from 1897 to 1898 he acted as Assistant Secretary of the Navy. He resigned that post to organize with Surgeon Leonard Wood, the 1st U. S. Cavalry, known throughout the world as Roosevelt's Rough Riders, which served in Cuba in the Spanish American War, and of which he became Colonel.

In 1898 he was elected Governor of New York and in 1900 was elected Vice-President. When President McKinley was assassinated in 1901, Roosevelt became President and in 1904 was elected by a vast majority to serve another term. Following his occupancy of the Presidential chair, Roosevelt spent the remaining years of his life largely in the hunting of wild game in Africa and South America.

The player who will impersonate Roosevelt and the director have not yet been announced. The picture will be included as a Gold Bond special on the 1926-27 program of F. B. O.

New Plan for F. B. O. Managers

Branch Heads to Be Placed on Percentage Basis Throughout the United States

BRANCH managers in all F. B. O. exchanges throughout the United States are to be placed on a percentage basis for remuneration of services in lieu of salary, according to announcement by Major H. C. S. Thomson, president and managing director of the company. The new arrangement is not a bonus plan in the commonly accepted sense of the word, but is a percentage that will be earned by managers on the business that is done by each exchange.

The executive heads of F. B. O. have long been considering a plan whereby the managers of the exchanges might share in the profits of the business, and finally evolved the percentage basis as being the simplest and most practicable.

In commenting on the percentage arrangement Major Thomson said:

"F. B. O. is moving forward at a fast pace. The organization has been built up in the past three years until today we have one of the finest selling organizations in the business. This plan of remuneration, we expect, will not only encourage the managers to the maximum sales effort, but will stabilize the organization and permanently settle the problem of remuneration. It means, on the basis of the present business, a raise for every manager in the organization."

F. B. O. is the second company in the industry to adopt the percentage plan of remuneration for branch managers.

Coogans Enter Theatre Field

Purchase One-Third Interest in the Langley Circuit in Southern California

JACKIE COOGAN PRODUCTIONS has entered the theatre field, according to word received from the west coast. The announcement is made that Arthur L. Bernstein, production manager of Jackie Coogan Productions has purchased from C. L. Langley, president of the West Coast Langley Theatres, the latter's interest in the Langley circuit, which constitutes one-third of a chain of twenty-one theatres.

This deal is reported to have come as a complete surprise to theatrical interests on the west coast. It is said that not even the closest associates of either the Coogans or Langley knew anything of the deal until the announcement was made in the morning papers. The consideration is said to have been around half a million dollars. The theatres included in the deal are located in Southern California towns.

There was no secret to the fact that the Coogan's were to enter the theatre field. Jack Coogan Sr. had announced that Jackie's money would be used to build a 3,000 seat house in Los Angeles and that that would be the first of a prospective chain. The nucleus of that chain undoubtedly will be the purchase just concluded. The 3,000 seat theatre will be built on Western Avenue between Fifth and Sixth Streets.

Independent to Produce Only

Goldburg Announces Withdrawal From States Rights; Will Release Through National Co.

INDEPENDENT PICTURES CORPORATION will withdraw from distribution through state rights exchanges after completion of the current series of Bill Cody features and henceforth produce exclusively for release by national distributors, Jesse J. Goldburg, president of the company, announced this week.

Other than maintaining an office representation in New York, Mr. Goldburg's entire Eastern organization will move to the West Coast where production activities will be centered.

Mr. Goldburg, who returned from Hollywood last week, made the following statement:

"I have been an independent Producer and State Right Distributor for about thirteen years, but my activities were centered largely on the distribution end of my business. For the past two years my production activities were confined to California which necessitated my presence there in the personal supervision of my productions. The result was, that I had to abandon personal supervision of either distribution or production.

"I have been approached repeatedly by not alone National distributors operating their own exchanges, but also by National State Right Distributors to make pictures for them, and it is that end of the business that I will hereafter concentrate on.

"I find that one must specialize in this industry, and a Producer must be a Producer, and a Distributor must be a Distributor only, when the results are dependent largely on the efforts of the individual."

Mr. Jack Lustberg, in charge of the New York office of the Independent Pictures Corp., will be placed in charge of the studios and act as studio manager of that company on the West Coast.

Independent Completes "The Power of the Weak"

"The Power of the Weak" has been completed by Independent Pictures Corporation as its first special production. Alice Calhoun has the featured role and is supported by Spottiswood Aitken, Carl Miller, Arnold Gregg and Marguerite Clayton.

The story was written by James Ormont and produced under the personal supervision of Jesse J. Goldburg. There are to be six of these Alice Calhoun productions, the distribution plans for which have not yet been determined.

Betty Francisco is in Cast Supporting MacLean

Betty Francisco has been added to the cast which will support Douglas MacLean in "Seven Keys to Baldpate," the star's first production for Paramount. Others previously engaged for the picture, which is now being made under the direction of Fred Newmeyer, are Edith Roberts, who has the role of leading lady; Wade Boteler, William Orlamonde, Maym Kelso, Edwin Sturgis, Ned Sparks, Anders Randolf and Crauford Kent.

Swedish Star Signs Long M-G-M Contract

Lars Hansen, one of the most popular motion picture stars of Sweden and continental Europe, has been signed to a long term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He was scheduled to sail from Stockholm on September 4th.

Hansen, a discovery of Mayer's, has been connected with the Svenska Film Industre of Stockholm, the same concern from which came Victor Seastrom and Benjamin Christianson, directors now serving under the M-G-M banner.

Leon Abrams Will Direct for M-G-M

Leon Abrams, author of "The Masked Bride," Mae Murray's next for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been signed as a director by that company. He was formerly a director for the late Sarah Bernhardt in France, and has been assigned to the direction of "Nocturne," the screen version of Frank Swinnerton's novel and play for M-G-M. It was erroneously announced last week that Leon Adams had been signed to direct for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"Checkered Flag" Script is Completed

The script for "The Checkered Flag" has been completed by Charles and Fanny Hatton and it will be made as the fourth of the Banner Productions for release through Henry Ginsberg. It is an adaptation from the novel of the same name by John Mersereau. Ben Verschleiser will be in charge of production.

DeMille Buys Out Stromberg

"The Last Frontier" Among Properties Taken Over in P. D. C. Production Rearrangement

THE Cinema Corporation of America, the holding company back of Cecil B. De Mille's independent activities, has purchased the Hunt Stromberg Producers Distributing Corporation interests, it was announced this week. The company also has purchased the controlling interest in the Hollywood Studios from Charles and Al. Christie.

The transaction which has brought about a realignment of the Producers Distributing Corporation production program, means that De Mille's activities will be increased about fifty per cent over the twelve features originally announced as his production schedule for the year.

In the transaction with Hunt Stromberg, the Cinema Corporation of America secured all of the Harry Carey pictures and Hunt Stromberg productions released and scheduled for release through Producers Distributing Corporation, including the producing rights of "The Last Frontier."

This spectacular western, for the filming of which elaborate preparations have already been made, will now be produced by Cecil B. De Mille, either under his personal direction or supervision. De Mille's producing activities will be still further increased by his assuming supervision of the filming of the several other stories, originally scheduled for production by Stromberg, and now, under the terms of the deal, the property of the Cinema Corporation of America.

Will Furnish Perfect Prints

Warners to Recondition Film After the First Run Showings in Own Laboratories

A PLAN for reconstructing prints after showings at the first run houses in order to insure the smaller theatres of perfect film has been worked out by Warner Bros., whose bookers have been instructed to send prints to the laboratories for inspection and servicing at certain intervals during a picture's currency.

Prints from all exchanges east of the Rockies will be shipped to the Laboratory in Brooklyn and western prints will go to the Hollywood plant of the company.

In announcing this service innovation Warners state that the plan will enable the company to furnish only perfect prints to exhibitors large and small. While efforts have been made to give the smaller exhibitor as good a print as the bigger showman, of a necessity in receiving the prints after they had been used over the country the smaller house owner got the worst of the wear and tear on the film.

Under the new plan prints will be put into brand new condition after they have been in use by the bigger houses. Following the first run period of the prints' service they will go to the laboratories where all scratches, torn sprocket holes, etc., will be eliminated and repaired and the print put in as good condition as when it first left the laboratory.

"Kiki" to Be Next for Norma

"Kiki" will be Norma Talmadge's next production to follow "Graustark" on the First National program, according to an announcement just received.

Joseph M. Schenck has engaged Clarence Brown to direct this Andre Picard play. Hans Kraly will make the screen adaptation.

Bert Lytell Engaged for Warner Feature

Warners announce the engagement of Bert Lytell to play the role of Lord Windermere in support of Irene Rich in the Warner Brothers production of the Oscar Wilde classic, "Lady Windermere's Fan." May McAvoy will appear as Lady Windermere and Carry Dammery has been engaged for the role of the Duchess.

New Auditor Appointed by Arrow

W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow Pictures Corporation has appointed Louis L. Baudry auditor of the company to succeed Hugh Davis, resigned. Baudry has had wide experience as an accountant and auditor. He installed the audit system now in force at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, and also instituted an audit system used by the Congress Hotel in Chicago.

Anthony Paul Kelly Writing for Hines

C. C. Burr has engaged Anthony Paul Kelly to write the scenario of Hines' second First National vehicle, "Rainbow Riley," adapted from Thompson Buchanan's original stage play, "The Cub," in which Douglas Fairbanks appeared on the legitimate stage.

Four More Selected for "Martinique" Cast

Edith Yorke, Brandon Hurst, Evelyn Sherman and Billy Franey have been added to the cast of "Martinique," Bebe Daniels next starring vehicle for Paramount. In addition to Miss Daniels the featured players already announced include Ricardo Cortez, Wallace Beery, Arthur Edmund Carew, Dale Fuller, Robert Perry, Eulalie Jensen and Emily Barrye. William K. Howard is directing.

Royal Pictures Completes "Big Pal" Cast

Royal Pictures has completed the cast for "Big Pal," second of the features to be distributed by Henry Ginsberg. William Russell is the featured star, while the main supporting roles are in the hands of Julianne Johnston, Mickey Bennett and Mary Carr. The production is scheduled for release in September.

Lionel Barrymore Signed for "The Splendid Road"

Lionel Barrymore has been engaged to play one of the three leading roles in "The Splendid Road," Frank Lloyd's next production for First National. Anna Q. Nilsson and Robert Frazer have the other two featured parts in this adaptation of Vingie E. Roe's novel.

Herrick in Chicago for New Picture

F. H. Herrick, who already has completed four of "The Fragment of Life" series, being distributed by the Davis Distributing Division, Inc., arrived in Chicago, to make the fifth of the series, which will be called "Memory Lane." Included in the cast according to Mr. Herrick are Eleanor King, Reginald Simpson, Harry Stone and William Calhoun. William J. Miller is the camera man.

Forming 2 New Feature Units

First National Studios in East Ready to Start Errol Vehicle and "Mismates"

LEON ERROL'S new screen vehicle and a screen adaptation of "Mismates," a stage play by Myron C. Fagan, are scheduled to go into production at the First National studios in the east within the next few weeks.

The Errol picture will be "The Lunatic at Large," written by J. Storer Clouston. The book had an immensely successful career in England when it was first published and the continued popularity results in the two sequels "The Lunatic at Large Again," and "The Lunatic Still at Large," by the same author.

The cast for "Mismates" has not yet been selected. The script is being written by Earl Snell and C. L. Yearsley. It is a powerful melodrama, the story of a manicure girl who marries the son of a wealthy family who object to her.

Work on the filming of "The Unguarded Hour" and "The Scarlet Saint" now in production, is going on rapidly and the pictures are expected to reach the cutting room within a few weeks.

Other pictures in line for production in the near future by the eastern units include "Men of Steel," a super-special to be made with Milton Sills in the stellar role, "Mademoiselle Modiste," "Pals First," "The Savage," "Bed and Board" and "Atlantis," the big sequel to "The Lost World."

Opposed To Uniform Contract

Wisconsin M. P. T. O. Convention Appoints Committee to Discuss Revisions With Board

THE uniform contract and arbitration occupied the centre of the stage at the convention of the Wisconsin M. P.T.O. held in Milwaukee last week. The real basis of the complaints lodged by exhibitors against the present system was the contract, for while vigorous opposition to the existing method of handling disputes was generally expressed, the complaints cited cases resulting directly from the contract.

Definite action to bring revisions of the arbitration system was taken when the convention appointed a committee of three exhibitor members of the arbitration board to confer with the Film Board of Trade. The particular nature of the changes sought were not made known, the conference being relied upon to affect revisions which will make the system acceptable to the exhibitors.

Though a clash over the election of a new president of the organization was anticipated in some quarters no conflict on this score developed at the convention, and Fred Seegert, of the Regent, Milwaukee, was re-elected for a third term without opposition. Other officers elected include F. J. McWilliams, Madison, vice-president; Max Krofta, Milwaukee, recording secretary, and Ernest Langemack, Milwaukee, treasurer.

The Wisconsin exhibitors pledged their full support to Independence Week, to be held in October, a move which assumes added significance in view of the fact that the Greater Movie Season movement received no organized support there.

Editors to Collaborate on "U" Serial

Universal has inaugurated a contest that should be interesting to newspaper men. Members of the National Editorial Association will be asked to write a ten-episode chapter play for Universal production and $5,000 will be paid for the best story.

From the synopsis submitted the ten best will be chosen and the one then adjudged the best will be produced, while the writers of the other nine will colaborate by outlining in detail the action of one each of the chapters of the serial. Each of the ten winners will receive $500 for his synopsis.

Six months will be given to prepare the stories and the picture will be produced next year during the time the Editorial Association is convening in Los Angeles. It is more than likely more than one story will be suitable for production, in which event Universal will make offers for the successful ones.

Martha Franklin in Cast of "Masked Bride"

Martha Franklin, known thirty-five years ago to every theatre-goer in America, has been added to the cast of "The Masked Bride," Mae Murray's new starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Francis X. Bushman plays opposite Miss Murray in this picture.

Miss Franklin played second lead in the original "Belle of New York" Company, the musical comedy that made Edna May the idol of Broadway. It later played for years in England with Miss Franklin in the cast. "The Masked Bride" is being directed by Christy Cabanne. Roy D'Arcy, Basil Rathbone and Karl Dane are in the supporting cast.

Rex Ingram Has Completed "Mare Nostrum"

"Mare Nostrum" has practically been completed in Nice for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by Rex Ingram. Alice Terry has completed her role and is due back in New York about September 8th. Tony Moreno, who played the leading male role, is scheduled to sail for America about the middle of September. Ingram will probably remain in France until he completes his next picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

First Half of Gotham Program Completed

SAM SAX, head of Gotham Productions, this week announced that company has completed the first half of the schedule of features to be made for the 1925-26 season, sixty days ahead of schedule. The productions so far completed and delived to exchanges with all exploitation material and ready for release are "The Overland Limited," "The Police Patrol," "A Little Girl in A Big City," "His Master's Voice," "The Part Time Wife," and "The Shadow on the Wall."

Camera work has been started on "One of the Bravest," the seventh Gotham for the season. This will be followed by "Hearts and Spangles," "The Phantom of the Forest," "Racing Blood," "The Speed Limit," "The Sign of the Claw," and the comedy special "McFadden's Row of Flats."

W. C. Boothby Appointed Comptroller of First National

FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES, INC., has appointed W. C. Boothby, formerly of the First National Bank of Boston, to the responsible executive position of Financial comptroller made vacant by the resignation of C. S. Pinkerton. Mr. Boothby has already assumed the duties of his new position.

He was born in Somerville, Mass., and after finishing the grammar and high schools of that city began his banking career in 1902. Four years later he joined the staff of the First National Bank of Boston, which is now one of the foremost financial institutions of America. He worked rapidly up through the various departments to the position of executive head of the loan and discount departments from which he was promoted to the First National Corporation, a subsidiary corporation owned entirely by the bank and one of the largest organizations of its kind in the country, as assistant treasurer. Three months later he was made treasurer and executive officer which position he held up to the time of joining the staff of First National Pictures, Inc.

Independents Report New Sales

Gotham Closes With Independent Films for Canada Rights—Chadwick Sells Cuba Franchise

IMPORTANT foreign territorial sales were announced this week by Chadwick and Gotham. The latter concern's program of twelve productions will be handled in Canada by Independent Films Limited. This deal was consummated by Sam Sax, of Gotham and Lumas Film Corporation, distributors of the Gotham pictures, and Jules Levine and L. Rosenfeld, representing the Canada company. The sale gives the Independent concern a total of 18 Gotham productions, as the latter's series of six features for last season were purchased by Levine and Rosenfeld.

In addition to the extensive territory already closed for the entire 1925-1926 product in Domestic and Foriegn territories, Chadwick Pictures Corporation this week completed arrangements with Carrera and Medina, one of the most prominent exchanges in Cuba, for the distribution of fourteen of its pictures in that territory.

Besides operating their important exchange, Carrera and Medina are also owners of a string of theatres in Cuba, and are planning an intensive exploitation campaign to put over these productions.

One of the most important domestic sales of the week past was negotiated by W. E. Shallenberger of Arrow Pictures and Richard Fox, of the Freedom Film Corporation of Buffalo. Under this deal the Freedom company acquired the franchise for the twenty-four Arrow features for 1925-26 for the Upper New York territory. Shallenberger also announced the sale of "Lost in the Big City," "North of Nome," "The Lost Chord," and "Lena Rivers," Arrow features, to W. D. Ward of Detroit for the district known as the Lower Michigan Peninsular.

Louis Weiss, Managing Director of Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, announced that he has sold his new series of Six Single Reel Special Features entitled "Guess Who" to Mr. Bru, representing the Unity Film Company Ltd. of London, England.

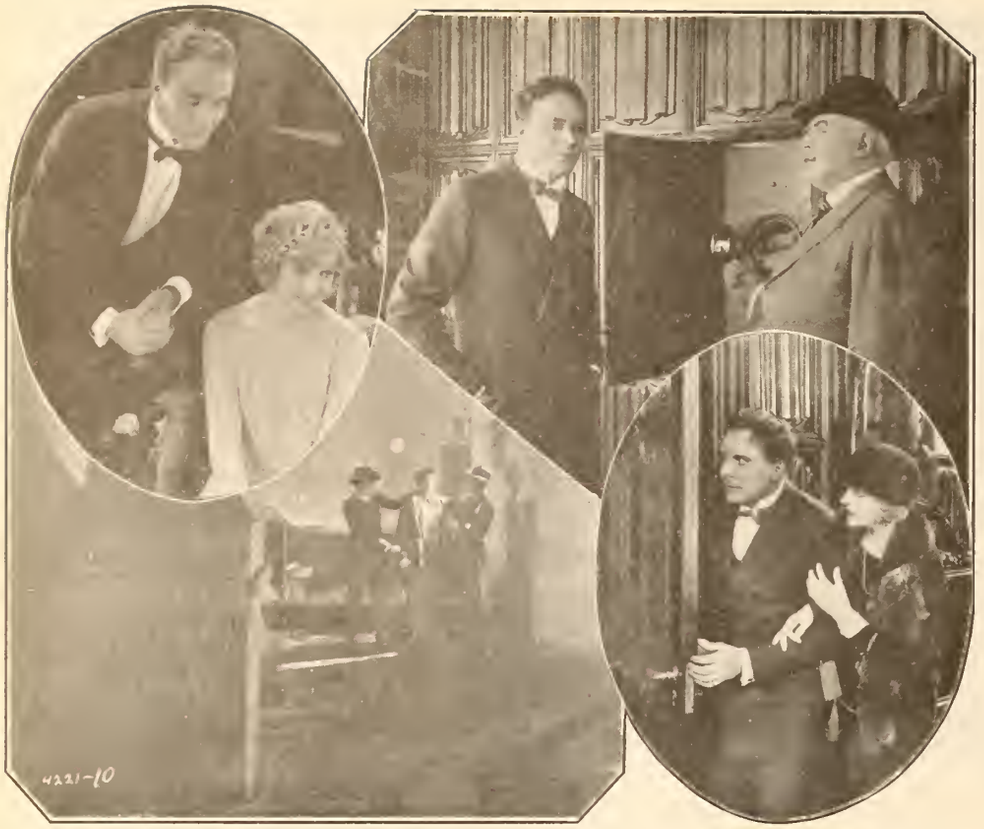
The deal covers the distribution of the series in the United Kingdom and Continental Europe.

Nine Features Ready for Weiss

With the arrival in New York this week of "Action Galore" Weiss Brothers Artclass Pictures have nine pictures belonging to the 1925-26 program ready for release.

These nine are as follows: In the series of Fire-Reel Tough Riding Romances featuring Buddy Roosevelt, "Reckless Courage," "The Galloping Jinx," "Action Galore;" in the Buffalo Bill Jr. Series "Quicker 'N Lightnin," "The Desert Demon" and "The Saddle Cyclone;" in the Wally Wales Series "Tearin' Loose" and "The Hurricane Horseman;" and the first of the eight Westerns featuring Leo Maloney with Bullet, the Wonder Dog and Senator, the Human Horse "Win, Lose or Draw."

The fourth Buddy Roosevelt feature is ready to start and the third Wally Wales feature will be completed this week.



Leo Maloney is making active preparations to start the second of his series this week while stories have been completed on four more and preliminary work done on the following two.

With the two production schedules going along as they are Louis Weiss expects that his whole year's product will be in his office by the end of November.

Chadwick Has Acquired Full Ownership of Studio

I. E. Chadwick, head of Chadwick Pictures Corporation, has purchased from Jesse J. Goldberg the latter's interest in the Independent Studio at Sunset Boulevard and Gower Street, Los Angeles, it was announced this week. Under the purchase the Chadwick organization gains full ownership of the studio property, a half interest in which was bought from Goldburg a short time ago.

Chadwick will leave for Los Angeles soon to organize a complete studio staff to handle the future productions made by his company, which will do its producing at the Independent plant.

Gala Premiere For "Phantom"

Universal Makes Elaborate Plans for Presentation in New York Sunday Next

UNIVERSAL has completed elaborate plans for the gala premiere which "The Phantom of the Opera," spectacular screen production of Gaston Leroux's famous mystery romance, will be given at the Astor Theatre, New York, on Sunday, September 6th.

The Sunday night presentation will be surrounded by all the color and brilliance which a wide exploitation campaign and special invitations can accomplish for a first night. Celebrities of the stage and screen as well as prominent New Yorkers have accepted invitations to attend the affair, which will also be open to the public, Universal reporting a lively demand for tickets at the box office.

The Universal company has attempted to duplicate the lavishness of the production in the presentation that has been arranged for "The Phantom of the Opera." One of the main features of the presentation will be the musical accompaniment. A score based mainly on the opera "Faust" has been written for the picture and will be rendered by an orchestra under the direction of Eugene Conte, composer of the musical setting.

Another highlight in Universal's presentation plans will be the staging by Thurston, the famous magician, of the appearance of a "phantom" during the prologue. Universal offered a large cash prize to the person who would cause the appearance of a "spirit" during the premiere showing. Thurston took up the challenge.

A further interesting phase of Universal's presentation plan is a ballet which has been staged by Albertina Rasch, internationally noted ballerina.

Seeking American Beauties for Universal Feature

Universal is conducting a nationwide search for the most beautiful girls in America to appear in "See America First," a forthcoming production. The search is being made by a director and cameramen who are touring the country in the automobile trailer built for Reginald Denny's "California Straight Ahead." Camera tests will be made of the winners of beauty contests to be held in various cities.

Edgar Norton Joins "Lady From Hell" Cast

The Associated Exhibitors cast for "The Lady From Hell" has been augmented by the addition of Edgar Norton, character actor, who has been assigned an important role. The picture is being directed by Stuart Paton and has Blanche Sweet and Roy Stewart in the featured roles. It will probably be released in the second group of Associated Exhibitors attractions for the new season.

Extended Run of "Phantom" at Roosevelt, Chicago

Universal's "The Phantom of the Opera" will have its Chicago premiere sometime in November at the Roosevelt Theatre, where it will play an indefinite engagement. The engagement was arranged by Ned Marin, Universal sales director and Balaban & Katz, operators of the theatre, during Marin's recent tour of the middle west.

Finish Casting for "The Scarlet Saint"

The principal roles for "The Scarlet Saint," which First National is producing in New York, have been filled, the most recent addition to the cast being Jack Raymond, who will have the role of a comedy valet. Other principals in the cast are Mary Astor, Lloyd Hughes, Frank Morgan and Jed Prouty. George Archainbaud is directing.

First National Convention Ends

Most Harmonious and Successful in the Organization's History, Declares Eschmann

THE recent national sales convention of First National, held last week, and attended by every branch and district manager was the most successful in the history of the organization, E. A. Eschmann, general manager of distribution declared this week.

In commenting on the convention, after it was over and the branch and district managers had returned to their territories, Mr. Eschmann said: "The convention was the most harmonious yet held by First National and was a developer of ideas, of unified spirit and of enthusiasm. We know from past performance what our sales force can do with good pictures, and we are giving them still greater box-office productions for the new season. First National has hit a stride that can't be beat; the momentum already attained will carry its sales to steadily increasing volume."

In his address to the convention at the Wednesday session, Richard A. Rowland, general manager of production, emphasized the spirit that animates the production end of First National.

He said in part:

"We in production know that you have to have pictures to sell that the market wants. We realize that you have to have good pictures and I assure you that we are doing everything in our power to give you good pictures.

"This year we have more than held our own and I am very hopeful for the future. I have recently returned from Hollywood and I can assure you that you have good product coming from the West Coast.

"You must not forget that a picture is not better than its cast value. The public wants names that are familiar to them—standard names.

"The big specials and the star productions are the box-office magnets. Next come the all-star productions. They are always a gamble, but they serve to develop the stars that the industry needs. This is a personality business and the public wants personalities. That is why we are constantly endeavoring to create stars. Star pictures are easier to sell and they bring in more revenue.

"The lack of good stories is another problem that we are constantly facing. In the course of the year it is impossible for all the companies combined to get more than twenty outstanding stories. We have to take the best we can get and give them the treatment necessary to turn them into photoplay entertainment."

Walter Long Engaged by Cecil De Mille

Cecil B. DeMille has engaged Walter Long for a leading role in "The Road to Yesterday." This will be De Mille's first personally directed production for release through Producers Distributing Corporation.

Two-Faced Winking Moon is "Forty Winks" Display

"Forty Winks" showing at the Superba, Raleigh, N. C., was uniquely exploited by Manager J. L. Williamson, who hung a winking two-faced moon from his attraction sign where it could be seen both up and down street for a considerable distance.

The double-faced moon was made of two pieces of beaverboard, each face painted gold and black to represent a smiling "man in the moon." Each face that two large eyes cut out and covered with yellow crepe paper with eyeballs and eyebrows painted on. One eye was equipped with a 40 watt lamp, remaining stationary, while other was equipped with a 60 watt lamp attached to a flasher which kept the eye winking at close intervals. The two-faced laughing moon with its winking eyes attracted a world of attention.

Local Girls Featured in Campaign on "Sally"

"Sally" at the Palace, Fort Worth, was aided by Manager Barry Burke's splendid campaign which embraced every available method of exploitation.

One of the highlights of the campaign was the publicity given the two Fort Worth girls appearing in a scene from the photoplay. This, Manager Burke accomplished by getting pictures of the two young ladies from their parents, which together with special write-ups were printed in the local newspapers. Both girls have won beauty prizes in their home town and are well-known there. Their pictures exhibited in the lobby of the theatre created a lot of attention.

Manager Burke entertained the Tarrant County Orphans at a special matinee, after which they were treated to ice cream and cake. The Kiwanis club provided automobiles which transported the children to and from the theatre. As the playhouse is located in the heart of the business section, the arrival and departure of the orphans drew crowds. Pictures taken of the juveniles at the theatre were printed in the newspapers accompanied by special stories. The stunt added greatly to the good-will already enjoyed by the Palace, the management receiving many expressions of gratitude for the thoughtfulness.

Tie-ups were effected with all music stores on the song "Sally" and the theatre's orchestra and organist rendered special selections from the "Sally Hits."

The lobby had a beautiful cutout of the star, surrounded with stills and pictures from the photoplay.

C. D. MacGregor, the projectionist and exploiteer of the Princess theatre at Chatham, Ont., designed and carried out this snappy front for "Gold Heels" (Fox) reccently.

Drawing Contest Given for "Black Cyclone"

In connection with his showing of "Black Cyclone" at the Rex, Spartanburg, Manager J. H. Stelling conducted a drawing contest, offering passes for the best drawing of Rex, the Wild Horse. The stunt, advertised both on the theatre screen and in the local newspapers, met with hearty response. The drawings received were put on display in the lobby during the showing of the picture, creating a lot of discussion.

Valuable word-of-mouth advertising was gained through the special morning matinee held for the boys and girls of Spartanburg on the opening day of the picture, the admission price of which was a horse shoe. Over 600 kiddies attended the matinee, and the horse shoes they brought were piled in the center of the theatre lobby, with a card announcing that to the one guessing the nearest the correct number, would be given passes to the Rex. In this way added interest was created for the photoplay.

Good use was made of mounted poster paper in making up the lobby display on "Inez from Hollywood" (First Nat'l) at the Royal theatre, Laredo, Texas, recently.

Mirror Display Piece for "Proud Flesh" Showing

An ingenious lobby display piece was devised by Manager D. Roscoe Faunce for "Proud Flesh" at the Strand theatre, Birmingham.

The background consisted of beaverboard cut and painted to represent a beveled mirror on the surface of which was painted the figure of a woman getting a back view of herself in a small hand mirror in her left hand. Her reflection was visualized by artist's impression, giving a very realistic effect.

Several stills from the photoplay were artistically arranged on the mirror.

An important tie-up was arranged with the book department of a leading department store in which they displayed a large hand painted book, the cover of which carried advertising copy on the attraction with a line announcing that the book was on sale.

"Goose Hangs High" Plays Take-a-Chance Week

"Take A Chance Week" was well put over at Peterson & Woods' Palace theatre, Jamestown, N. Y. "The Goose Hangs High" was the feature and "every unit on the program from overture to final curtain was shrouded in mystery." The entire campaign was very well handled with the assistance of George E. Williams, Paramount exploiteer.

Cuts from the press-sheet were used in the newspaper advertising with absolutely no hint about the production they represented. The cuts were used with the copy "you have taken a chance at fairs, carnivals, and bazaars, but never in your life have you bought a ticket to a theatre not knowing what you were going to see."

In the half-tone cuts used in the movie columns of the papers, the faces of the people in the cast were partially routed out so that it would be impossible to identify the players and thus get a clue to the picture.

The main catchline for all advertising was: "A Big Surprise Show—Will You Take A Chance?"

Trackless Train Succeeds Strongly in Chicago

America's first Trackless Train, now crossing the continent from New York to Los Angeles, has proved such a sensation in Chicago that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the producing organization sponsoring its historic cross-country rtip, has acceded to demands made by exhibitors in the Windy City and extended the train's visit from three days to five.

Fully 150,000 people turned out to view the parade staged by the Illinois Automobile club, which was headed by the Trackless Train. The mayor and other city officials inspected the special at hte height of the ceremonies, while guests aboard it during the parade included the president of the club, the vice-president and Ralph Kettering, in charge of the Greater Movie Season campaign for the Hays organization. The Trackless Train bore banners exploiting Greater Movie Season, and was awarded first honorable mention by officials of the parade, no prizes being awarded.

Enormous crowds were attracted about the train when it parked before the Chicago theatre, while equally enthusiastic interest was aroused at every stop made in the Windy City. Other theatres visited by the special were the Balaban and Katz Riviera, Ascher's Chateau, the State and Lake, the Roosevelt, McVicker's, the Bugg, Standard, Plaza Ideal, Rosewood, Commodore, Rivoli, Vision, Hoyne, Biltmore, Rose, Sittners, LaSalle, Crown and numerous others.

Free Ticket Daily Boosts "Heart of a Siren"

A two-column head news reader, a two-column reader cut, and a quarter-page advertisement announced the coming of "The Heart of a Siren" at the Capitol theatre, Victoria, B. C., week commencing June 29th.

The free Loge Seat coupon is still appearing in all Capitol theatre advertisements and Manager Denham is absolutely positive that this form of advertising is bringing direct returns. The newspaper gives the space occupied by the coupon gratis and the Capitol furnishes three loge seats. The Colonist changes the name daily, the names being taken from their new subscription list. Manager Denham did not have to argue with the Colonist to try this stunt. They immediately fell in line and are of the opinion that they obtain new subscribers through this novel form of advertising.

As an added attraction Thomas McLean, baritone, of the International Opera Company, rendered a number of popular songs through the week.

Dailies Cooperate for "The Great Divide" Stunt

Arrangements were made with both local dailies in Newark, O., when "The Great Divide" played there recently at the Auditorium to award free tickets to names selected at random from their subscription lists and printed among the want ads. This stunt achieved front page space on both papers.

The leading music dealer contributed a window display, and special cut-outs decorated the lobby. The town was heavily billed for two weeks in advance, 100 one-sheets being used, 39 three-sheets, 15 six-sheets, 5 twenty-four sheets, 100 window cards and 5,000 heralds. There was also a special lobby display.

Snappy artwork and prominent lettering featured this lobby display on "The Unholy Three" (Metro-Goldwyn) at Keith's Majestic theatre, Louisville, Ky. Combined with the electric marquee signs, it made a splendid flash from any side.

"Making of O'Malley" is Advertised in Program

To build up the advertising in his program issued weekly as Gordon's Olympia Screen Review, Manager Harry ("Tod") Browning of Gordon's Olmypia Theatre, New Haven, is offering a pair of free tickets to every person who makes a purchase at three of the firms advertising in the Screen Review. There is no restriction as to the amount of the purchase. All that is necessary to get a pair of free seats is to present reciept of purchase from three advertisers in the program together with the clipped ads.

In the current issue of the Screen Review, Browning is making the offer outlined above. He also advertises his coming attretion, "The Making of O'Malley," by running a cut of the star, as a policeman, on the front cover, with a few words of text, in black and orange. On an inner page appears his opinion of the picture in the form of an advance review. He continues to advertise his pictures in the local baseball score-cards.

Race Track Built in Lobby for "Gold Heels" Run

For his showing of "Gold Heels," Manager Oscar White of the Liberty theatre, Greenwood, converted his lobby into a veritable race track by the use of compoboard cutout and painted black and white to represent a fence, behind which was placed a huge cutout of a horse shoe with the head of a horse painted in the center.

Three bales of hay were used, one on each end and in front of fence. On top of hay pile in front of fence was placed a borrowed saddle, bridle and blanket. Vines decorated the fence, giving an added touch of color to the display, the effectiveness of which was only equalled by the attention it attracted.

Neat Miniature Display in Lobby for "Chickie"

For "Chickie," playing the Modjeska theatre, Augusta, Manager F. J. Miller built a miniature display in a shadow-box extending across lobby front.

The display depicted a couple canoeing on a lake with the sky and woodland greens for a background. A Japanese parasol held by the lady in the canoe gave a distinctive touch to the scene. Illuminated by colored lights which greatly enhanced its beauty, the exhibit brought forth many favorable comments from patrons.

Distribution of Newsettes Aids "The Monster"

The distribution of 10,000 attractively made-up Newsettes containing cuts and special stories were a feature of the campaign recently waged in connection with the showing of "The Monster" at Loew's Temple in Birmingham, Ala., by C. D. Haug, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, and E. A. Vinson, director of publicity for the theatre. Two thousand of these Newsettes were distributed through the Independent Laundry.

Sidewalk stencils reading "The Monster is Coming" were imprinted on all corners in the heart of the city and on sidewalks leading to the theatre. Thirty-one Yellow Cabs carried 30-inch signs over their spare tires, while street cars carried 100 dash cards on front and rear. Fifty window cards in gold frames were displayed to advantage in prominent locations, and 150 one-sheets were posted throughout the community.

Dallas House Ties Up With Newspaper Contest

Publicity Director R. B. Jones, at the Melba theatre, Dallas, recently tied-in with "The Times Herald Standard Brand Food Coloring Contest."

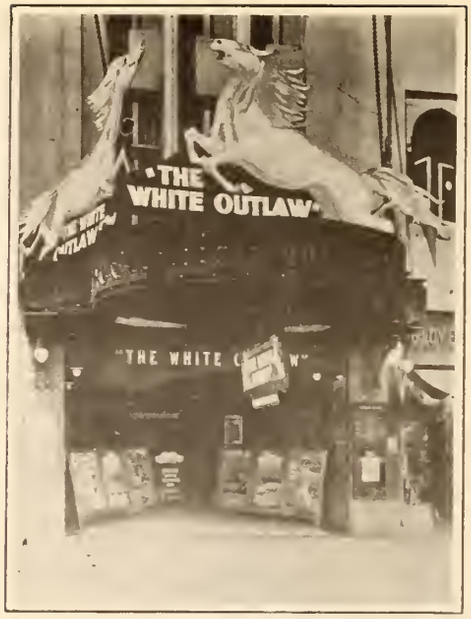
Every Friday, for three consecutive weeks, the newspaper printed a full page of ads, each featuring different products of the food company.

Prizes of 40 Melba tickets were awarded to the kiddies turning in the most effectively colored ads. All answers had to be sent direct to the newspaper's office, where pictures were passed upon by selected judges.

The contest proved valuable, not alone for the inspiration it afforded the children, but for the enviable publicity it brought theatre, merchant and newspaper.

Fantastic lobby display in brilliant colors, carrying out the style of the picture, by Manager Jean Wildenstein of the Princess theatre, San Antonio, on "Beggar on Horseback" (Paramount).

Striking Hat Shadow-Box on "Paths to Paradise"



The most striking feature of Manager D. Roscoe Faunce's campaign on "Paths to Paradise" in Birmingham, was the shadow-box used in the lobby of the Strand. This was in the form of a high silk hat made from compoboard and painted black. An opening was cut in the front of hat and faced with two layers of screenwire, in back of which was placed a scene painted to represent a room with Raymond Griffith and Betty Compson trying to open a safe. A powerful spotlight attached to an oscillating fan traveled all around the room and in its sweep revealed the figures at the safe. The moving light is especially noteworthy, its action arresting the attention of everybody. The cast and title were printed in white, directly underneath the opening.

The regular newspaper and billing campaign was augmented by the use of 2,000 special stickers carrying a huge black arrow with copy as follows: "Paths to Paradise"—Strand theatre—Now Playing.

Five Displays in St. Paul to Aid "Proud Flesh"

When "Proud Flesh" played recently at the Tower theatre in St. Paul, Minn., Morris Abrams, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, secured five striking window displays which attracted much attention to the run. Two were contributed by the leading cigar stores and featured stills showing Harrison Ford displaying a cigarette holder, and two more were donated to the caused by haberdashery stores, which exhibited stills of Pat O'Malley. A still showing Eleanor Boardman wearing a shawl was displayed by a dealer in women's apparel.

Special cut-outs decorated the lobby, and extra space was taken in the local dailies. The town was well posted in addition.

Mounted wood cut-out on the marquee of the Laughlin theatre, Long Beach, Calif., for "The White Outlaw" (Universal). E. D. Tracey is manager

Rag Patch Contest Boosts "Rag Man" Showing

A Jackie Coogan Rag Patch contest recently stimulated interest in a showing of "The Rag Man" at the Majestic theatre in Findlay, O. C. C. Deardourff planted this contest in the Findlay Republican-Courier and offered cash prizes amounting to $7, with 25 free tickets as consolation awards.

The town was lavishly posted in addition, and there was a vigorous press campaign which achieved the placing of special stories and cuts, as well as increased display space. Heralds were distributed and a trailer was brought into play at the Majestic.

Memphis Manicurists See "Manicure Girl"

When "The Manicure Girl" played the Strand theatre, Manager Walter League invited the manicurists of Memphis to attend a private showing of the picture.

A card with clever copy and attractive lay-out was issued to each girl, inviting her and an escort to attend the preview. The screening was well attended by the manicurists, their companions, and the press. Result was enviable word-of-mouth advertising and newspaper publicity.

In addition, every beauty parlor in the city had a framed 11 x 14 photo on their manicure tables.

The News Scimitar also furnished a lady reporter to cover the beauty parlors, interviews resulting in a feature story.

One of the strongest selling forces of the campaign was the exhibition of photos of Memphis manicurists held in the theatre lobby. This was the work of a local photographer who did same gratis in exchange for the advertising accorded his display.

Girl in Riding Habit Is "Sporting Venus" Aid

A young woman dressed in a snappy riding habit and mounted on a beautiful black horse recently exploited a showing of "The Sporting Vensus" at Loew's State theatre in Boston, and proved a sensational feature of the campaign waged by Jerry Fraenkel, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer.

This young woman rode through the principal streets daily for five days and attracted attention to the run which was announced in large letters on the saddle blanket. The best saddlery and sporting goods store in the citw was tied up for a large window display, in which a 6-sheet cut-out was displayed.

A real circus in miniature provided the prologue to "Sally of the Sawdust" (United Artists) staged by Edward L. Hyman, managing director of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, Brooklyn, the other week. The Mark Strand artists took part in it.

Treasure Hunt Put Over on "Paths to Paradise"

Manager Ed. Roberts got his inspiration for a "Treasure Hunt" on "Paths to Paradise" at the Majestic, from two sources. From an old "treasurer" map belonging to the Austin Statesman, and from an Aztec map found in the basement of the theatre several months ago when it was being remodeled.

Manager Roberts obtained possession of the Statesman's "treasure" map after reading an account of its discovery in a story printed by the paper a week prior to picture's opening.

A translation of the Aztec map, along with a picture, was published in the Statesman with the announcement that the Majestic theatre would conduct a "Treasure Hunt" on the evening before showing of "Paths to Paradise." Only requirements were that participants be at the Majestic at 7 p. m. with a car, a flashlight and plenty of perseverance. Upon starting out they were given numbered cards containing directions written in code, the solution leading to the next post, where another clew was given, and so on until entire route was covered.

The "hunt" started at the Capitol grounds, then to the dam on Colorado River, then to golf links a Lion's Club, then on to confectionery shop, famous for its "gem" sherbets, where "hunters" were given a "gem" cone free of charge. At drug store station, participants received samples of powder, tooth paste and shaving cream. The "hunt" ended with "the pot of gold" at the end of the trail.

A first prize of $10.00 was awarded by the Statesman to the first person completing the "Treasure Hunt," second prize, a month's pass to the Majestic, third prize, a year's subscription to the Statesman, fourth prize a three weeks' pass to the Majestic, fifth prize a two weeks' pass and sixth prize a one week's pass. Ten additional prizes of 2 passes each to see "Paths to Paradise" were given to the next ten winners.

Showing for Orphans Aids "Making of O'Malley"

Taking his cue from the fact that Milton Sills, in "The Making of O'Malley," plays the part of a big-hearted New York policeman who is a special friend of the children, the manager of the Savoy theatre, Wilmington, Del., captured much publicity through a special morning performance for the children of St. Peter's Female Orphanage, at Riverview.

The showing was five days in advance of the opening date and netted a good amount of newspaper space in addition to the word-of-mouth advertising it received.

Special Halifax Showing of "The Lost World"

Before its showing at the Casino theatre, Halifax, N. S., "The Lost World" came in for much excellent publicity through a private screening at the Casino, arranged for with W. J. Melody, branch manager in St. John for First National.

Newspaper men and many well-known resident were invited to the showing; among them the Archbishop and the Dean of Novia Scotia. Letters of commendation of an unusual sort were received from Mrs. Anne F. Worral, wife of the Most Rev. Clare L. Worrell, D.D., Archbishop of Nova Scotia; the very Rev. J. P. D. Lloyd, D.C.L., Dean of Nova Scotia; and Thomas Hilliard, president and managing director of the Dominion Life Insurance Company. Their opinion of the production not only carried weight in Halifax but throughout Nova Scotia and the Dominion.

Train of 1931 Advertises "The Limited Mail"

The showing of "The Limited Mail" at the Warners theatre (formerly the Piccadilly) in New York City was given the aid of a strong exploitation campaign put across by Warner Bros., which included one especially striking piece of advertising.

Through arrangement with the New York Central, the old De Witt Clinton train, the first operated by that railroad, was borrowed and mounted on motor trucks, one to each piece of historic rolling stock. This was paraded through the streets daily, exciting the greatest interest. A special guard was provided for the valuable property. On the first day of its use, the train was taken down to City Hall, where the Mayor made a talk.

As the showing came concurrently with Railroad Men's Week, the display and parade was especially appropriate.

The handsome facade of the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago, was decorated in true circus fashion for "Sally of the Sawdust" (United Artists), a regular "big top" being erected over the marque, as shown here.

Strong Campaign Made on "Don Q" Premiere

An effective advance publicity and advertising campaign was that which Mark Larkin, publicity director for the Douglas Fairbanks company, handled in connection with the New York World premiere of "Don Q, Son of Zorro," showing at the Globe theatre.

Perhaps the most important feature of the campaign was the policy under which it was conducted. Harry D. Buckley, special business representative for Douglas Fairbanks, who came to New York from Hollywood to handle the premiere showing, issued but one order. "No hokum," he said. "Run your campaign on a strict line of square dealing."

As a result absolute frankness featured the campaign. No attempt was made to hoodwink the newspapers with so-called exploitation stunts. No editor was tricked. The copy was written, for its genuine news or feature value, and placed solely on that basis. The same held true of the art. Every effort was made to oblige the newspapers, and when requests were made for special stories, they were supplied with despatch.

The advertising campaign consisted of outdoor display on billboards and in windows, and of paid-for newspaper space.

Eight days ahead of the opening of the picture, a one-half motion picture showing, consisting of 100 24-sheet stands, was posted. A "motion picture showing" in New York means billboards situated at the most advantageous spots in the city, none of them being in the theatrical district.

On Wednesday of the week preceding the opening, advertising began in the newspapers with 35 lines—two and one-half inches—in the five leading morning newspapers. No afternoon papers were used until the day of the opening, when the principal evenings were given an even break with fifty along with the morning papers.

A Tampa jeweler was induced to give this window display to "Paths to Paradise" (Paramount) at the Victory theatre, which John B. Carroll manages.

Most extensive window tie-ups were arranged, and included "Don Q" photographs in 500 windows; also department store window displays of productive costumes worn by Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Astor, his leading lady. Through the advertising managers of the stores, displays of these picturesque movie clothes were obtained for Fifth Avenue and other principal shopping centers. One man devoted two weeks to the placing in advantageous store locations of 500 beautifully made, and highly artistic photographs, each hand-lettered with the billing, of the picture, the theatre and opening play date.

Russian Dancers Support "Madonna of Streets"

When Manager Jack Rowley of the Royal theatre, at Laredo, Texas, began the exploitation work for "Madonna of the Streets," he did not depend upon the stars alone to put over the picture. Two popular Russian ballerines, Mlle. Gali de Mamay and Mons. Thaddeus Loboyko, the former a ballet dancer who had been a member of Pavlowa's ballet, and the latter formerly Pavlowa's dancing master, happened to be in Laredo on their way to Mexico City to fill an engagement.

When Manager Rowley learned that the Russian dancers would be detained in Laredo several days, he stated: "I am going to put on a prologue with these renowned Russian ballet dancers that will give the movie patrons a 'Russian' program and one of the best ever put on anywhere in Texas." He advertised extensively in the newspapers that in addition to the showing of "Madonna of the Streets," with Nazimova, the Russian motion picture star, and Milton Sills, two of the greatest Russian ballerines in this country would put on classical Russian interpretations of famous dances. Manager Rowley not only used this announcement in the newspapers in readers and advertisements, through handbills and heralds, but he had printed about a thousand announcements on fine linen paper and sent them through the mail to the citizens of Laredo.

On the opening date the front of the Royal Theatre was a mass of painted bulletins announcing the presence of the Russian dancers, while setting in the lobby, just inside the large double entrance, was a large cut-out of Nazimova and Milton Sills from a one-sheet and in this cut-out was arranged a smaller cut-out through which filtered a spotlight on the faces of the two stars, this effect being provided day and night.

Clever idea in billing the star's name used in the lobby of the Modjeska theatre, Augusta, Ga., by Manager F. J. Miller for "Paths to Paradise" (Paramount).

Mr. Exhibitor: Ask at the Film Exchanges for the

It's little to ask for, but it's the only reliable aid you can give your musicians to help put the picture over.

: : : : "THE CHECK-UP" : : : :

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage — a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

YOUR IDEA

IN THE MAIL

FROM Toledo, Ohio, comes an invitation to the dress rehearsal of the opening performance of the Temple theatre, extended by the Collins Theatre, Inc., which is to open the house with "The Iron Horse" on Friday evening, September 4th. By the time this appears, the opening will be over. A special music score is announced for the occasion, interpreted by the Temple Cinema Orchestra under the direction of Abram Ruvinsky. It is a source of real regret that it is not possible for us to attend more of these premieres of new theatres in person.

Another opening, though not a new house, is that of the renovated and redecorated Mount Morris theatre, in uptown New York City, under the managing directorship of MIKE EDELSTEIN. This event was also set for this Friday evening, on which occasion Johnny Hines and other stars were booked to appear, the feature being "The Crackerjack." A ten-piece orchestra under the direection of Mauritz Swanson will be a feature of the new policy.

FRANK W. PURKETT, enterprising pilot of the Kinema theatre, Fresno, Calif., sends in a comprehensive group of material and photographs on his Greater Movie Season campaign, built around "The Ten Commandments." Next week we hope to be able to reproduce some of it in the way it deserves.

BEN FERRIS, advertising director for the St. Paul theatres of Finkelstein & Ruben, mails us a remarkable full page ad on Greater Movie Season put over by that firm, which we hope to use. He recently sent us a remarkable story, with photos, on the personal appearance of Anna May Wong at the Capitol, when the F. & R. department "got away with murder" in the matter of space-grabbing, but to date we haven't had the opportunity to use it.

MORE TAKA-CHANCE STUNTS

SINCE the Take-a-Chance week idea was first described in these pages, some little time ago, the idea has traveled across the country and back. Paramount used it over its circuit for "The Goose Hangs High." But two of the best stunts of this nature have just come in from Greeley, Colo., and Vancouver, B. C.

In Greeley, the Sterling theatre carefully concealed the nature of the bill in all its Take-a-Chance week advertising, and in addition a strong mercantile line-up was obtained.

A string of leading local stores came in on the proposition, and page advertising was run. Question marks appeared frequently in the merchants' advertising. It was stated that every evening during the week advertising of an interesting and surprising variety would be presented at the Sterling theatre. The stores described no merchandise and quoted no prices whatever in their newspaper insertions.

The Sterling theatre said in part "and we're paging all of Greeley's gamblers to take a chance on the Sterling this week. Every number a secret! Every unit a surprise! And the whole show is a hit!

"Sh-h-h, just between frineds, here's the whole program:

"The overture. It's lilting, and fulla pep! You'll probably whistle the melody on the way home.

"The joker. This number will be orally announced from the stage. Merchants named here are responsible.

"Novelty. The greatest surprise you've had since you saw your first movie. You can't see it with your own eyes!

Feature production. All we can tell you is that James Cruze directed it—nuf said! Let's go!"

The proposal is to make Taka-Chance week a semi-annual event in Greeley.

Ralph Ruffner, manager of the Capitol tlheatre, Vancouver, B. C., probably went further with the "Take-A-Chance Week" idea than any other theatre man and the stunt worked out very satisfactorily for all concerned. Manager Ruffner declares that when he decided to stage a "Sight-Unseen Week," he recognized the importance of delivering the goods in every respect so that there would be no comeback and he left no stone unturned to pack the show with unusual effects. The result was that there were fully a dozen real surprises in the mere presentation of the programme.

At the start of each show a request was made by trailer that every person in the audience treat as confidential anything and everything which was revealed. Each number on the bill was preceded with a trailer or slide detailing the subsequent item as "Surprise No. 2 or 3, etc."

The performance opened with a bugle call, followed by the playing of "O Canada" in place of the National Anthem, the latter having been used as the opener for over four years. Incidentally, the National Anthem was played at the end of the show instead. The orchestra overture was played without the announcement regarding the name of the selection and the audience was asked to "Guess the tune." After the news weekly and film magazine, the following announcement was screened.

"You've all been good sports and taken a chance, now the orchestra will take a chance. They will play that popular overture 'Light Cavalry' without a conductor; in other words, every man for himself."

After this the house lights were turned up and the orchestra director walked off sheepishly. Manager Ruffner reported that this got a laugh at every performance. An unknown young lady next rendered a solo, with piano accompaniment only, the soloist concealing her identity with a domino mask. The film comedy was introduced by a trailer reading "Surprise No. 6. Look who's here and in———." This revealed "A Raspberry Romance." A musical feature was presented without a title, a man and woman singing "Let it Rain." During the chorus, storm effects were used and, at the finish, the spotlight was switched suddenly to a remote section of the auditorium showing a traffic cop in oilskins with a traffic semaphore, the officer repeating the chorus. A moment later, a shapely girl in one-piece bathing suit appeared in the rain on the stage and sang the chorus, after which a chorus of 20 girls in one-piece thimble suits appeared when the stage lights were turned on full. As an encore, 10 little girls, 3 to 5 years, in bathing suits like their big sisters, paraded across the stage and tried to sing the chorus too. For this specialty, the whole orchestra also appeared in slickers and sou-westers.

"Surprise No. 8" was introduced by the following screen announcement: "This will thrill you to tears and tickle you pink—Watch—". This was the feature, "When the Goose Hangs High."

Here and there throughout the show were other little surprises and stunts but the above description, touching the high spots of the presentation, gives an indication of the manner in which Manager Ruffner worked out the mystery angle of the week's engagement.

Recording thermometer used in front of the Rivoli theatre, New York City, to prove to the skeptics just what the temperature is inside since the new air refrigerating system has been installed.

AND OURS

NOT CONSTRUCTIVE PROPAGANDA

NOT every theatre has a house organ, but most theatres have one way or another of getting constructive messages to the public on such things as censorship, the theatre as a community institution, house policies, Sunday opening, and the like, from time to time. A good piece of copy was run recently under the heading "Destructive Criticism is Valueless" in the Majestic Revue, a newspaper size house organ issued by the Majestic theatre, Grand Junction, Colo. This paper incidentally, is a splendid example of what can be done in the smaller cities with a house organ. The editorial in question, which might be easily adapted for use elsewhere, was as follows:

Getting up in club meeting and denouncing bad pictures will not accomplish a thing. Letters about the bad pictures, article about bad pictures, sermons about bad pictures, are all equally valueless—just as all destructive criticism inevitably must be valueless. The sure way, the quick way, the way that cannot fail, is to patronize those pictures which already exist and unquestionably are good. By patronize is meant go to see them, pay your money at the box office, make them financially successful.

Here is what will happen: The theatre owner of your community will find that he has had a prosperous day or a prosperous week. He will say to the producers, "I must have more pictures like that last one. I made money with it, and it pleased my patrons. That's the kind of pictures I want." The producer, whose business is to rent his pictures to the theatre owner, is bound to heed such a request. He says to his scenario chiefs, to his directors, "we must have more pictures like that one that we just turned out. It pleases the theatre owner because it pleases his folks, and shows good profit. There is a popular demand for that kind of a picture. Lets go ahead and do it.

When you see a good picture let us know on your way out of the theatre. If you will do that, then we know the kind of pictures you want. That is what we are striving and aiming to give you. We started out this Editorial about you getting up in club meetings and denouncing bad pictures. We know there are lots of bad pictures, but we are not present at that club meeting, and if instead of talking about the bad pictures in your clubs or meetings by giving us your criticisms on your way out of the theatre then you are hitting the nail on the head, and your criticism will bring results and be of value instead of being valueless. We are all hopped up on our ability to pick pictures, the kind we think you want and we are continually striving to pick only the best the market affords. In all fairness to our efforts you should at least tell us when leaving the theatre whether you like the picture or not, by doing so you are helping yourself to good entertainment. In last week's issue of The Revue our Editorial gave you a list of the pictures and we believe we gave you the best for the month of August. Last week we presented you with three of what we thought were big wonderful pictures and we believe we gave you the kind of entertainment you most desire, because the week proved one of the biggest we have enjoyed in a long time.

For this, the second week of August, and which we claim to be the one month of the best pictures we have ever booked into the Majestic we offer three more corking good pictures. Friday and Saturday, "The Code of the Wilderness," a western picture on which we have failed to find one single bad comment from the press critic or theatre manager that have already shown the picture.

Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, we show "The Scarlet West," the picture that was made at Dolores, Colorado. This is one we feel sure that you will like better than any previous western pictures you have ever seen—not beca use it wa s ma de in Colorado, but because the picture actually is better.

The feature for next Wednesday and Thursday is "Inez From Hollywood." It will prove very interesting because it is Hollywood and the Movie Folks brought right to your door—we advise you to see every one of these productions—and when you leave the theatre tell us whether or not you enjoyed the picture.

NOVEL REVIEWS

COLUMBUS, OHIO, newspapers have recently put into action a novel means of advertising the current films at the theatres in the city by having several members of their staffs review the films on the opening night, and the following day the reports are printed in the papers over the initials of the reporters.

This system has given an added impetus to the public to attend the shows, since absolutely impartial reports are made and the shows are being given good boosts for the most part in a way that brings the theatre and the film into almost personal touch with the public.

The Columbus Citizen also plays another good stunt for the benefit of the motion picture houses in running a column under a catchy head entitled "Let's Go To The Movies." In this column, short and clever reviews are given and the attractions are thus placed before a busy public in such a way as to draw attention and attendance.

The Columbus Dispatch runs a longer column with several signed articles covering all of the current attractions, giving each a good write-up and thereby aiding the picture houses in more ways than one.

BOB GETS UNDER WAY

BOB LA PINER, the new exploitation man for the Finkelstein & Ruben circuit, has started off with a variety of strong stunts that augur well for his future efforts. Just now he is working on a campaign which will be one of the strongest ever used in the Twin City territory, it is hoped.

It is to handle "The Iron Horse" and will tie up with every railroad in the Northwest with the display of gigantic modern locomotives as well as old timers, together with an automobile caravan which will accompany the picture.

The caravan will carry music, special lobby displays and a 15-foot captive balloon with 28 foot streamer. Essay contests will be organized for grade school children with a special sketching contest for those who would rather draw than write.

Several models of their new engines are being furnished by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific and negotiations are under way with the Hill estate to obtain use of the original oil painting of the picture "Jim Hill's Dream" showing the two types of engines, one used in the early days and the monster Mogul of today.

For exploitation of "The Wheel" F. & R. procured a roulette wheel from Tiajuana and displayed it in a downtown window with appropriate placard.

Century's Ambitious Schedule

Improved Product and Novelty Innovations Promised in Fifty-Two for New Season

CENTURY FILM CORPORATION has an ambitious schedule of Century Comedies for the 1925-26 season with a declared improvement in production and a number of novelty innovations. There are fifty-two of these comedies on the list, one for each week in the year.

A grouping of the season's output into star series is among the innovations. The pictures made by each star, such as Wanda Wiley, Edna Marian and others will be considered as separate brands. Another innovation was the acquisition of the screen rights for a novelty series of two-reel comedies. This is the Buster Brown Comedy Series, being made from the newspaper cartoons of R. F. Outcault.

The Century schedule shows a contemplated release of 52 comedies, one a week during the period from August 5th, 1925, to July 28th, 1926. In addition, there will be a Century special production, "Little Red Riding Hood." This is a novelty two-reeler made with Peter the Great and Baby Peggy. It is scheduled for release November 21st.

The 52 Centuries consist of a series of twelve Buster Brown Century Comedies, a series of twelve Wanda Wiley-Century Comedies, a series of twelve Edna Marian-Century Comedies, six comedies featuring Eddie Gordon, six featuring Al Alt and four featuring Charles King.

The Buster Browns are being made by Charles Lamont, one of Century's veteran comedy directors. Little Arthur Trimble has the role of Buster, Doreen Turner plays Mary Jane and Pete, the comedy dog, plays Tige Buster's famous canine companion. The two Buster Brown comedies already completed are "Educating Buster" and "Buster Be Good."

Sennett Adding Beauties to Roster

Mack Sennett is continuously adding beautiful girls to the Sennett roster. He now has eight under contract, five of whom have been signed in the past two months. Alice Day, Madeline Hurlock and Natalie Kingston have been appearing in Pathe-Sennett comedies for over a year.

The new girls recently signed to contracts are: Eugenia Gilbert, former bathing girl; Ruth Hiatt, leading ingenue with Harry Langdon; Thelma Parr, playing leads with Ralph Graves; Ruth Taylor, with Billy Bevan in Del Lord comedies and Marion McDonald, a newcomer from Boston, who has just been given a contract.

"Transients in Arcadia" is Finished by Fox

"Transients in Arcadia," second of the series of O. Henry stories, has been completed at the Fox West Coast Studios. The leading roles were played by Mary Akin and Hugh Allan. Daniel Keefe directed under the supervision of George T. Marshall. The scenario was by Beatrice Van.

Fox Starts Third Story of O. Henry Series

Production was started this week at the Fox West Coast studios on "Failure," third of the two-reel comedies adapted from the O. Henry short stories. Daniel Keefe, who made the first two, is again directing. Kathryn McGuire has the feminine lead and the principal male character is played by Harvey Clark. The other principals include Maine Geary, William Bakewell, William Norton Bailey, Vivian Oakland and Roy Atwell.

Fox Starts Production on Imperial Comedy

A new Imperial Comedy has just been put into production at the Fox West Coast Studios under the working title of "All At Sea." Lew Seiler is directing this new short subject with Sid Smith and Judy King in the leading roles. The other principals are Stanley Blystone, James Farley and Nora Cecil.

"Crying for Love" Current Century Release

"Crying for Love" is the Century comedy for release this week through all Universal exchanges. Eddie Gordon is the featured player. The comedy was written and directed by Noel Smith. Blanche Payson plays opposite Gordon.

"No Father To Guide Him" is a two-reel comedy from the Hal Roach studios with Charlie Chase featured. The above scenes are taken from this Pathe release.

Red Seal Will Release Nine in September

Nine subjects of the ninety-five featurettes on the Red Seal schedule for the season, will be released during the month of September. The first two are companion pictures titled "The Silvery Art" and "Flirting With Death." They reveal the possibilities of adventure lurking in a pair of skiis.

"Swanee River" is the first of a series of Ko-Ko Song Car Tunes. It was pre-released at the Capitol, New York. The first of the "Marvels of Motion" is also on the list. "Ko-Ko Nuts," of the Out of the Inkwell series, "Up the River Conway," a scenic, two "Animated Hair Cartoons" and another issue of "Film Facts" are also among the September releases.

Beth Brown Appointed Red Seal Editor

Max Fleischer and E. M. Fadman have appointed Beth Brown editor-in-chief of the Out-of-the-Inkwell Studio and Red Seal Productions. Miss Brown will assist Mr. Fleischer in writing scenarios and editing and titling the entire Inkwell product for Red Seal release.

Martha Sleeper to Appear With "Our Gang"

Martha Sleeper, who for the past year or two has been featured in grown-up roles in Hal Roach comedies, is to appear in the "Our Gang" comedy, "Better Movies." Miss Sleeper, who is but fifteen years old, will appear as one of the "gang." This two reeler is the "gang's" contribution to the national Greater Movie Season.

Pathe Announces New Schedule

Two Hal Roach Comedies on Program for September 13; Tryon and Finlayson Stars

GLENN TRYON and Jimmie Finlayson will be the comedy stars of the Pathe schedule for the week of September 13. The comedy contributions are both from Hal Roach studios and consist of a two-reeler titled "Madame Sans Jane," and "Unfriendly Enemies," a single reel offering with Finlayson appearing in the role of a volunteer cameraman with the A. E. F. in France.

The schedule also provides an episode of the "Play Ball" serial, in which Allene Ray and Walter Miller are featured. The chapter is titled "Into Segundo's Hands," and is the ninth release in this ten-episode play written by John J. McGraw of the N. Y. Giants.

Glenn Tryon appears as an ardent lover in "Madame Sans Jane," in which he has the support of Fay Wray as the object of his affections, Jimmie Finlayson in the role of an objecting father, and Lucien Littlefield in the principal roles. The picture was directed by James W. Horne. The story is concerned with the adventures of a very resolute young man who masquerades as a woman in order to get the job of traveling companion for his sweetheart on a trip to Europe, whither she is being sent by her father, who wants to get her away from the hero. At the last moment the father decides to make the trip himself, announcing that he will occupy one of the two staterooms he had engaged for the daughter and her companion.

Pathe Review No. 37 brings four interesting subjects to the screen: "The Swanee Shore," a sacred spot in the Southland; "Handle with Care," the story of glass manufacture; "Country Life a la Mode," the French idea of a good place to spend a vacation; and "Dog Days," a novelty produced by the new "process-camera," invented by Alvin V. Knechtel of the Pathe Review Camera Staff.

"The Ugly Duckling" is the animated cartoon release of the "Aesop's Film Fables" series. The release schedule for September 13th is completed with "Topics of the Day" and two issues of Pathe News.

Short Subjects and Serials

"Wild West"
(Pathe Serial)
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

THE first three episodes of this serial produced by C. W. Patton serve to demonstrate the fact that Pathe is about to release another elaborately staged episode play as a follow-up to "Play Ball," the current offering. Colorful and rather striking are the backgrounds for the action, concerning the affairs of a pretty bare-back rider with a circus, and a Carlisle graduate who manages a huge ranch in Oklahoma.

The scenarist chose two broadly appealing story elements for his play. There is the west, the west of great open spaces with cattle-rustling as the basis of conflict between hero and villains, and the circus, the big top with its sawdust rings, its sympathetic clowns, plotting managers and charming bare-back rider. Both of these settings separately have served many photoplays that have made a great success at the box office. Their blending here is typical of a serial age wherein the producers put in two thrills where one was given before.

The play seems more a series proposition than the usual serial story. No "papers" are planted in the first chapter, as is usual. The initial episode of "Wild West" is concerned with the shuffling about of babies, as though they were cards in a deck and in view of the subsequent episodes it seems as though the scenarist has wasted much time setting his play. The action, however, holds immediate interest and is possibly justified on that count, even if it is now all necessary to the progress of the plot as developed later.

There are several well known players in the cast. Jack Mulhall is featured with Helen Ferguson. Then there are Eddie Phillips, Virginia Warwick, Milla Davenport, Fred Burns, Ed Burns, Dan Dix, George Burton, Inez Gomez and Larry Steers.

Most of the scenes were filmed at the Miller Brothers 101 Ranch in Oklahoma. The establishment has afforded the director ample material for "production" scenes and atmosphere as well as for the incidental situations which build up the story and characters.

It is a serial which the majority of the picture patrons should receive warmly. It may lack the story construction and plot substance of "Idaho" and "Play Ball," but there is certainly enough in the way of "action" and atmosphere to hold the attention and stir the emotions of the average serial devotee.

(The Cast)

Jimmy Whitehawk.....Jack Mulhall
Polly Breen.....Helen Ferguson
Bob Miller.....Eddie Phillips
Elsie Withers.....Virginia Warwick
Chalky Withers.....Milla Davenport
Joe Miller.....Fred Burns
Col. Hardcastle.....Ed Burns
Pat Casey.....Dan Dix
Dan Norton.....George Burton
Wynca.....Inex Gomez
Dr. Alonzo Powers.....Larry Steers

Scenario by J. F. Natteford. Directed by Robert F. Hill

The Story.—Among the thousands who awaited the opening up of the Cherokee Strip in Oklahoma to homesteaders, were Dr. Powers, owner of a medicine show, Col. Hardcastle and his wife and the three Miller brothers, cowboy. Hardcastle is deserted by his wife, who takes their daughter with her. Twenty years after the land rush Hardcastle is the owner of a big ranch and is known as Tom Osborne. His property adjoins that of the Miller Brothers, one of whom has reared Powers' son as his own. The half-breed son of the showman is manager of the Hardcastle ranch and on a visit to see a traveling show he meets Polly Breen, the star performer of the troupe. The boy adopted by the Millers is in league with cattle rustlers and has joined the circus "to see the world." When the show is sold at auction Bob Miller buys it with the money he has made from the cattle-stealing deals and brings the entire outfit to the 101 Ranch, an event which brings another meeting between Jimmy and Polly. At the conclusion of the third episode a maddened elephant is shown running head-on into the automobile in which Polly is riding with Bib and his foster-father Summary.—A finely staged presentation of Concentional serial play. The western local is enchanced by the introduction of a line of action dealing with a circus, the star performer of which is the heroine. The action is well-paced and the first three episodes close on rather stirring events, the outcome of which is illustrated at the beginning of the succeeding chapters.

"Spooky Spooks"
(Bischoff, Inc.—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

THIS is all that its title implies. Mystery stories have been burlesqued to death in the film comedies and the proposition seems very cold at this time. Al Herman, the director, has crammed every gag on the list of "spook" stunts into the two reels and therefore keeps his action going at top speed.

There is a Sherlock Holmes character and several turbaned gentlemen, a heroine and an innocent messenger boy, the animated suit of armor, the trap doors, or trick panels, skeletons, etc., etc. If there is any fun left in these over-worked devices then "Spooky Spooks" may get laughs.

The detail of the production is fairly well handled and the settings and properties are as elaborate as the occasion demands. From the first the pace of the action is fast and it increases until a speedy climax, in which there is a sort of paper chase, with the valuable document passing from one person to another as the characters dash from one room to another.

The Story.—A messenger boy is halted by two mysterious men, who take the message he is bearing to a certain house and substitute another, commanding him under pain of death to deliver it. At the address he finds a beautiful girl. The note is a threat of death for herself and her father unless she delivers certain documents to the senders. The messenger boy goes to get Sherlock Bones, famous detective. Later the mysterious gentlemen get into the house and there is enacted a series of mysterious and baffling events, the outcome of which is that the messenger boy triumphs over the forces of evil and wins the girl.

Summary.—"Spook" slapstick of a very familiar variety. The gags are all standard and there is little sense or reason to the affair.

"The Merchant of Weenies"
(Bischoff, Inc.—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

H. C. WITWER supplies the story presented in this two-reel production dealing with a certain "leather pusher" who takes to reading Shakespeare in order to improve his education. The story has novelty to recommend it. The fighter gives in slang his idea of how the "Merchant of Venice" could be brought up-to-date and be made vital and interesting to your modern.

There is a broad and farcical burlesque of the Shakespeare drama, with fighters and fight-managers making up the figures of the play. This is all very well, but the play does not last as long as the film, with the consequence that the last reel is padded out with fight scenes of the usual sort seen on the screen.

The story has an adequate production and fair acting. Its burlesque of "The Merchant" may prove highly diverting to the lovers of obvious screen entertainment.

The Cast

Charles Delaney, Eddie Phillips, Charlotte Morgan

The Story.—A not very successful fighter is in love with a girl who works in a book store and he yearns for education. He takes to reading Shakespeare and then gives a slang recital of the story as he would tell it. This becomes a visualized burlesque of "The Merchant of Venice" with a fighter and a manager serving as the central characters. The fighter, who has borrowed in advance from a promoter, is about to have the pounds he is overweight sliced from him, as per the contract, when the girl who waits on the book shop intervences and renders Portia's decision. The last reel is devoted to some fight scenes which introduce comedy and some dramatic action.

Summary.—This "Classics in Slang" story presents a rather novel burlesque of "The Merchant of Venice" and on that count may score with the audiences of the smaller houses. There is not sufficient story to last through the two reels and the latter half is little more than pure action with nothing much in the way of plot to hold it together.

"Hollywouldn't"
(Bischoff, Inc.—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

JOHNNY SINCLAIR, featured in this "Biff Comedy" is a mighty good tumbler and with the able assistance of Charlie King stages some acrobatic falls that make the action of this film as vigorous as the situations are broad.

The play goes behind the scenes at a picture studio, with a flash here and there of amusing burlesque of the masters of the megaphones. The director in this play is shown with an assortment of megaphones. one for closeups, one for long shots, etc.

The story is about a farmer boy who falls in love with a movie queen. He steals the family flivver and starts out for Hollywood. At the studio where the charmer works they need someone to do a spanish dance and the rural steps in which Johny is skilled seem just the thing, so he gets a job. The heroine refuses to do the dance, asking for a double, a role in which another man is cast, He appears in make-up resembling the movie queen and Johnny is overjoyed to think he will dance with the famous actress. The dance starts as a dance and ends up as a wrestling match.

The picture provides some amusement in spots here and there but for the most part it is just knock-about action of the broadest slapstick type.

Johnny Sinclair, Charlie King, Billy Jones, Dorothy Dorr, Sailor Sharkey.

The Story.—A farmer boy, infatuated with a movie queen whose pictures he has thrilled to, arrives in Hollywood to meet her. He is fortunate enough to get a job as extra at the studio where she makes her productions. The experience furnishes him thrills and excitement he had not banked upon and after a rough session with the villain he is glad to get back to his flivver and head her for home. .....

Summary.—A burlesque of the movie studios done in slapstick style. The picture has some amusing moments and plenty of action, which is supplied by the featured player, an expert tumbler.

"Wild Beasts of Borneo"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

MR. AND Mrs. Lou C. Hutt of San Francisco spent considerable time and quite evidently went through many hardships, for all of which they should be well repaid by returns from this good animal picture. It is nicely arranged, with some vivid and interesting shots of wild animals of all kinds apparently taken as close up as those of the ordinary picture.

Not only is it interesting because it depicts these animals in their native haunts, but it is educational, because it shows their customs and various methods through which they are captured. The Hutt expedition was an eminently successful one and its results should be appreciated wherever pictures are shown. There have been other wild animal pictures, but none better arranged or showing the beasts under more intimate conditions.

The Hutts reveal that their lens brought an object ten times closer than it really was and then they take you down to the actual capturing and tieing of a leopard putting up the most desperate fight to avoid being tied.

A herd of the white elephants worshipped as Gods by the Siamese is first shown at a distance and then is revealed in a playful closeup which makes them appear but a few feet away. Later a pitfall was dug and camouflaged and the captured tusker is shown from the rim of the pit trying furiously to disentangle himself and make for his capturers.

The capture of a crocodile, which animal is said to annihilate five percent of the local population, was shown in an interesting sequence. The native guides apparently tied the jaws of the beast within a few moments after capturing him with bait that consisted of a piece of meat on a block of wood.

A touch of humor is loaned to the picture by the artful manner of capture of several monkeys. A cocoanut trap is used with a cord that ties the wrist, but does not hurt. The evolutions of the monkeys when the traps were sprung were quite amusing. The capture of a giant python, most powerful of all reptiles was extremely interesting and should be most thrilling to any movie audience. All in all the picture is quite worth while.

"Madame Sans Jane"

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

GLENN TRYON, featured in this Hal Roach comedy, essays a female impersonation as part of his contribution to the entertainment. The motive behind the masquerade is a desire to be with his sweetheart, whom the iracible father is sending to Europe in order to get her away from our hero. Not to be bested said hero gets himself up in finery and a wig and obtains the job of acting as companion to the girl.

The customary farce complications appear when the father announces at the last moment that he also is going to Europe and will use one of the two state rooms he has engaged for his daughter and her professional companion.

There are moments when "Madame Sans Jane" is amusing, some where it is dull and a few where the comedy is broader than it is clever or original. However, we think a fair majority of the screen fans will find the picture a satisfactory offering and will derive therefrom the fun and entertainment they seek in short comedies.

Fay Wray in the role of the girl has the leading feminine part—next of course to Tryon's masquerade as a lady of looks and importance. Jimmie Finlayson does his best with the part of the father and Lucien Littlefield does a good bit in the role of an inquisitive and knowing steward. The best single performance, we think, is that of Mr. Walker or whoever wrote the titles, which are funny and easily the most amusing thing about "Madame Sans Jane."

THE CAST

The Boy.....Glenn Tryon
The Girl.....Fay Wray
The Father.....Jimmie Finlayson
The Steward.....Lucien Littlefield

Directed by James W. Horne.

The Story—The hero, much in love with a girl whose father is sending her to Europe in order to get her out of his way, impersonates a woman and answers the advertisement of the father for a traveling companion for his daughter. He gets the job and it proves bigger than he at first thought when the father decides to go to Europe also, the father being much smitten with the companion. Aboard ship several complications arise when the boy arranges to have the captain marry him to his adored one, but finally the cat gets out of the bag and the father yields to the importunities of the hero for his daughter's hand.

Summary—Obvious but rather effective comedy situations are presented in first rate fashion, with the result that the picture should prove satisfactory in the majority of cases.

"Off His Beat"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is one of the Walter Hiers series of comedies and it is unfortunate a better vehicle could not have been provided for a comedian of his ability. It is just a hodge podge of slapstick and forced comedy situations that were hardly new or amusing.

Hiers has the role of a cop and his pal is a detective. A neglected baby is left on their doorstep and for two reels they go through some embaressing situations because of the youngster. Walter is accused of deception by his girl, when with his pal they try to secrete the youngster as the girl pays them a visit.

Later on the action takes the pair into the policeman's annual parade and having nothing else to do with the kid they take it with them. Both are members of the band and their difficulties are increased as both play horns.

Following the parade comes the drill with Walter as drillmaster, handicapped by the necessity of carrying the babe. The fact that a strange cat crawls up his trouser leg is also supposed to add to the general merriment. Back to his post as traffic cop Walter takes the youngster in its baby carriage. A speeding autoist hooks on to the carriage and the usual wild chase starts, with the youngster finally rescued by Hiers as it is about to be run down on a railroad crossing.

The Cast

The Cop.....Water Hiers
The big cop.....Bill Blaisdell
The bandmaster.....Jack Duffy
His daughter.....Evelyn Francisco

Story by Earl Rodney. Direct by Archie Mayo. Photography by Gus Peterson and Frank Sullivan.

The Story—Hiers and his pal discover a neglected baby on their doorstep and take it in. Walter is accused of deception by his girl when he tries to hide the youngster. They participate in the policeman's parade and are compelled to take the baby with them. On his post as traffic cop Hiers lays the baby in its carriage beside him and a speeding autoist hooks the carriage in passing. A wild chase starts and the baby carriage becomes disentangled on a railroad crossing. Walter on the cowcatcher grabs the baby from the speeding train.

Summary. A story whose comedy situations are somewhat forced and whose action is almost devoid of new material. Hiers is worthy of a considerably better vehicle.

"Too Much Mother In Law"

(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THAT ever new theme of the newlyweds and the visiting mother-in-law supplies the comedy for this two reeler in which Beth Darlington is featured. The difference between this one and some of the others is that this is fairly good. At least it abounds with some fairly fast action and some comedy situations that should develop laughs.

All is happy as usual with the newlyweds until they reach the train with their motorcycle and its side-carriage to pick up mother. The latter as usual attempts to dominate the situation and unfortunately takes a dislike to the new son-in-law and his ways. But for all of that mother gets decidedly the worst of things. Riding atop her bundles the motorcycle gets stalled beside a truck on which is a pet dog that becomes enamoured of mother-in-law to the point where he insists upon lavishing kisses upon her.

Upon arrival at the house a parrot adds to the gaiety of the occasion when he takes a dislike to the visitor and applies to her all of the names in his vocabulary. When she insists upon having tea, booze is poured into it, which adds considerable jazz to the party as the young friends of the newlyweds arrive.

Finally in desperation, Hubby lifts mother-in-law into his motorcycle and gives her a ride which makes her call quits. He slows down only when she agrees to leave town and he makes her exit sure by dumping her off at the railroad station.

The Cast

The Young Wife.....Beth Darlington

The Story—Mother-in-law calls upon the newlyweds and proceeds as usual to make life miserable for them. She attempts to dominate the situation in the home and succeeds until liquor is poured into the tea. Then the young hubby with renewed nerve assumes command, hustles mother-in-law into his motorcycle and rides her dizzy. She agrees to leave town and he makes sure of it by dumping her right on to the train.

Summary—A good lively comedy with some clever situations that should be good for many laughs. It is well directed and well acted by a competent cast.

"Tricked"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

EDMUND COBB is featured in this western which has more of the comedy element and less of thrills than most of the kind. The story is a simple one of cowboy life and cowboy fun, but it provides some good riding and enough action to make it fairly interesting.

Ten boys of the Diamond Bar Ranch figure largely in the action with Cobb and the new schoolteacher. The latter is fair to look upon and soon gets the entire bunch of cowboys enrolled in her class. Cobb is the last to succumb, which apparently makes his fall the most decisive.

When he discovers the others at the schoolhouse he works a successful ruse in the form of a fire to clear the road for himself. When they realize they have been tricked they decide upon revenge. They disguise one of their number as the new teacher and Cobb proceeds to make love to "her," to the amusement of all hands. Again they frame the abduction of the teacher, whom Cobb rescues, much to the amusement of the boys. In the end, however, the cowboys aid him in his suit and he wins the hand of the fair lady.

The Cast

The Ranch Foreman.....Edmund Cobb

The Story—The new school teacher in a small town wins the admiration of the boys of the Diamond Bar Ranch, all of whom decide that higher education is a much desired thing. They enroll singly in the class, with Cobb the last to succumb. The latter frames a fire in order to more successfully ply his suit. In turn the cowboys frame a number of tricks to embarrass their leader, who eventually, with their aid wins the hand of the teacher.

SYNOPSIS—A fairly good western a trifle lacking in action, but containing some good comedy. It is well acted and well directed and should be an attraction wherever the western is liked.

Pathe Review No. 37

(One Reel)

THE Swanee River much sung but little seen in picture theatres has its innings on the screen as the leading article in this number of Pathe Review. Scenes along the beautiful and famed stream whose calm surface mirrows the moss draped trees which line its banks are offered in a short "travelogue" of sufficient visual appeal to justify its presentation in any theatre. "Handle With Care" is the title of some pictures made in a glass manufactury, where delicate articles are "knocked out" by huge machines. "Dog Days" gives some more "trick pictures" made with the Process Camera and "Country Life a la Mode," the color subject, completes the issue.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Don Q"—United Artists, Roosevelt, Chicago

Tribune: "'Don Q' is magnificently staged, counts its thrills by the dozen, furnishes plenty to laugh at and has been an enormous box-office success wherever it has played. Some boy, Zorro! Some boy, Don Q! This follow-up to 'The Mark of Zorro' is full of stuff—the stuff that dreams of adventurous youth are made of. Douglas Fairbanks has never been in better form."

News: "'Don Q' is a tricky picture, full of the tricks of story-telling and of romance, and of death and danger. As an entertainment it is of 100 per cent quality. It beings with the aim of entertaining and when it ends it has accomplished its purpose of entertaining. As a piece of story-telling on the screen it is a rarely good picture. It is decidedly on the list of recommended and indorsed pictures."

Post: "A fine picture is 'Don Q' and as good an entertainment as you can ask for. It is a true melodrama de luxe. It is moviesque, gorgeously so. It is the sort of gay, thrilling spectacular film drama which makes one realize how good a photoplay can be when it stays in its own field. Fairbanks is more than ever the acrobat and so graceful that his movements are a joy to watch."

Journal: "Douglas Fairbanks has struck twelve again in 'Don Q' which began an engagement at the Roosevelt amid applause and laughter. It is an ideal movie. The story is satisfactory in every detail and so are the direction, the photography and the supporting cast. The action is swift and long sustained, but so cleverly alternated between gayety and thrill that it never tires the eye or the nerves."

American: "Put down 'Don Q' as one of the things to see. It is of the fine stock of which that earlier stirring adventure melodrama, 'The Mark of Zorro,' was composed. There is never a let-up in the succession of thrills, moments of humor and other qualities that go to make up an hour of solid entertainment."

"Sun-Up"—M. G. M., Capitol N. Y.

Telegraph: "'Sun-Up' is a poignantly absorbing story of the hill people in South Carolina. While this play achieved success on the stage, it was rather difficult to conceive it as a picture, but Edmund Goulding has done a wonderful job and he should be very proud of himself. The ignorant mountain people are presented in such simple fashion that they become not merely shadows but living, breathing people, in whose fate the spectator takes keen interest."

Evening World: "Having conquered several other branches of the motion picture industry, Edmund Goulding has now tried his hand at direction. The result, a picture called 'Sun-Up', is a living, breathing proof that this interloper has leaped right into the front rank of directors. For 'Sun-Up' rates extremely high. It tells a deeply moving story, as any one who saw the Vollmer stage version will attest, and it is admirably enacted."

Sun: "The motion picture version of 'Sun-Up' serves excellently as starring vehicle for Conrad Nagel and is excellently directed and acted and convincing photographed. There are, moreover, many scenes productive of authentic emotion—the films have seldom more sincerely and graphically portrayed an incident than is here portrayed the slow deciphering by Emmy Todd for the Widow Cagle of that fateful telegram telling of the death of Rufe."

Telegram: "'Sun-Up' is predestined for popularity. It passes the supreme test where movie votaries are concerned. It brings the handkerchiefs out and that hint of moisture in the manly eye. And that's that. Conrad Nagel gives a convincing impersonation of the boy who goes out to fight 'some enemy of the govment called Huns.' But the histrionic palm undoubtedly goes to Lucille LaVerne, who duplicates in the movie the role she made popular on Broadway last year. The stern woman of the hills, who can neither read nor write, whose creed in life is to go out 'an' git' the family foes, stood out as a vivid thing of flesh and blood in her sensitive interpretation."

Mirror: "Director Goulding has turned out a powerful picture. With a heavy revenge story of ignorant backswoodsmen to deal with, Goulding has injected flashes of humor and developed his character with rare deftness. Pauline Starke gives a beautiful performanec as Emmy Todd."

Tribune: "The cast is perfect. Lucille LaVerne plays the Widow Cagle quite as well as she played it in the original. Pauline Starke is fascinating as the girl and Conrad Nagel does better work than he ever has done in his life. Many of the scenes are poignant and thrilling."

"Hell's Highroad"—Prod. Dist. Corp., Forum, Los Angeles

Illustrated News: "You will of course see it. If anyone deserves to be a star of the first magnitude it is Leatrice Joy. Her gowns are beautiful, the sets spectacular, and the acting all that can be desired."

Herald: "The scenes are spectacular and gorgeous. There are beautifully gowned women, magnificently furnished mansions and all the scenes are typically 'De Millean.' Leatrice Joy lives up to the high standard of acting she has set for herself."

Herald-Tribune: "The cast is excellent. Leatrice Joy seems to have acquired a new archness and is a fascinating figure. There are big, big ballrooms, beautiful boudoirs, gorgeous gowns, gaudy girls, insurgent innocents, wealthy widows, recherche rich men, palpitating poor men, a warring wife, a happy husband and a daring denouement."

Journal: "Cecil De Mille's pictures are there when it comes to entertainment. Take 'Hell's Highroad,' the film at the Colony for instance."

American: "Pleasing entertainment with original touches that show the unmistakable hand of Cecil B. De Mille. It is well worth a visit to The Colony and is a credit to both Cecil De Mille and Producers Distributing Corporation."

"Don Q"—United Artists, Colonial, Boston

Telegram: "Douglas Fairbanks never was better than in 'Don Q'. With amazing agility and speed he races through a series of adventures and never once does he lose his pleasing powers. From the opening of the film until the end he sets a pace of thrills which never falters."

Traveler: "'Don Q' is a swift action melodrama, full of glamor and bravado and heroic deeds calculated to make the blood tingle and the breath come faster. The screen's most athletic star is as full of surprising stunts and feats, as resourceful and tireless as can be imagined. And there is as gallant a series of superhuman feats as ever an audience rose and cheered. It is a gorgeous production."

Post: "From the first crack of the whip 'Don Q' is a joyous, swaggering, thrilling romance. Mr. Fairbanks leaps through a series of breath-taking adventures without losing his high-powered smile."

Globe: "There is a dash and verve and thrill to 'Don Q' that keeps the spectators at fever heat. It is so good a picture that one doesn't even hear the music."

Herald: "Douglas Fairbanks has added another to his amazing list. The action in 'Don Q' is graphic and continuous. Never does it slacken for a moment."

American: "A hero of zestful deeds, in a role that hits the high mark of adventurous romance is Douglas Fairbanks in 'Don Q.' Once more Fairbanks proves that melodrama, infused with imagination and humor and dominated by his all-conquering vivacity can be fine film entertainment. There are many fine adventures and a grand finale of fighting."

Transcript: "'Don Q' is one continuous, often hilarious romp—sheer essence of Fairbanks, undiluted, self-confessed."

"The Gold Rush"—United Artists, Orpheum, Chicago

Herald: "Charlie Chaplin is still the world's greatest—an artist, a comedian, an entertainer finer than any one else alive today. And his 'The Gold Rush' proves again that fact. A fine picture, I think, a picture taking Chaplin closer to the serious ambition that evolved 'A Woman of Paris' but not a step away from hilarious buffoonery. 'The Gold Rush' is a marvelous entertainment. It is far more elaborate than previous Chaplin productions and behind its laughs are tears."

Carmel Myers, now playing in Benjamin Christianson's initial production for Metro-Goldwyn-Maver, as yet untitled.

Tribune: "Ten reels of Charlie Chaplin as you like him. Ten reels sounds like a heap, and it would be if 'The Gold Rush' weren't 'The Gold Rush.' The Lone Prospector gives you lots of original and fascinating comedy. And always there is the note of sadness. He's so lonesome and so game and so darned unlucky. 'The Gold Rush' really is a dandy, and you'd just better see Charlie's latest if you know what's good to see and what's good for you."

American: "He's the same old Charlie. Years may have grayed his hair and swelled his pocketbook, but in his screen characterizations he is still the same vagabond you've laughed at and nearly cried over since Keystone Comedy days. All in all, he is just as funny as ever he was. Go and see him, listen to the laughter of yourself and those around him, and see if you don't think so."

News: "Charlie Chaplin of the derby, cane, baggy trousers, funny mustache and wabbly walk, who has made the whole world laugh more than any other comedian, has built into 'The Gold Rush' a structure of fun and laughter. He has built what many say is the funniest and most hilarious comedy of his career. Pathos and suffering are converted into comedy and laughter—there is a laugh in every one of the 8,000 or so feet."

Journal: "There are many new things in Charlie Chaplin's new film. It has a plot. It has dramatic tensity. It has laughs of an order even Chaplin himself has never aroused before. Not content with making the whole world laugh, he now asks it to drop a trickling tear, a film that marks a new epoch in the account of Chicago movies."

Post: "It is hard to imagine anybody being disappointed in the treasure of comedy this newest Charlie Chaplin film, 'The Gold Rush' contains. It's pure gold from the first flicker to the end. The Gold Rush' is gay and pathetic, fantastic and human.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Mystic

(Metro-Goldwyn—6147 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

DIRECTOR Tod Browning, whose previous production of "The Unholy Three" created such a sensation, scores again with an extremely clever crook melodrama. This time, the members of a gang of fake spiritualists unite in fleecing the unwary and the revelations of their fraudulent tricks, as well as a pleasing romance, considerable suspense and not a few thrilling situations, combine to make this a very entertaining picture. Conway Tearle gives a uniformly excellent performance as the "master mind" of the band, Aileen Pringle offers a genuinely fine and artistic characterization of Zara, the gypsy medium, while Mitchell Lewis and Robert Ober distinguish themselves in their respective roles of Zazarack and Anton. The seance episodes are admirably handled, as are the scenes in which the detectives try to dope out the puzzling methods employed by the swindlers.

THEME. Crook melodrama, with fake spiritualists doing their stuff, numerous thrills and romantic interest.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The carnival settings in Hungary. Scene where phony clairvoyant is convinced she actually sees a ghost. The seances. Realistic atmosphere. Reform of hero.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Street ballyhoo with gypsy wagon and occupants. Lobby display including crystal ball on pedestal and fortune teller. Where possible, prologue with Hungarian dances, etc. Feature Conway Tearle and Aileen Pringle.

DRAWING POWER. Good attraction for any house.

SUMMARY. Crook melo, exposing methods utilized by fake spiritualists. Has heart interest, thrills and glints of comedy. An entertaining film with universal appeal.

THE CAST

Zara	Aileen Pringle
Jimmy Burton	Conway Tearle
Zazarack	Mitchell Lewis
Anton	Robert Ober
Carlo	Stanton Heck
Bradshaw	David Torrence
Doris Merrick	Gladys Hulette

Author and Director, Tod Browning. Photographed by Ira Morgan.

SYNOPSIS. Jimmy Burton, American crook, with Zara, fake gypsy medium, and her Hungarian associates, starts a criminal campaign, using phony spiritualistic methods. Bradshaw, Wall Street man and guardian of orphan Doris Merrick, is a victim. Doris is shown her father's ghost and learns that Bradshaw has speculated with her money. The remainder of her fortune is given the girl and annexed by the gang. In love with Zara, Jimmy reforms. He escapes with the loot during a police raid and returns it to Doris. Zara and the others are deported. Jimmy weds her abroad.

PRESS NOTICE

A startling expose of fake spiritualistic methods is offered in "The Mystic," sensational underworld melodrama, which is billed for the ———— theatre on ————. This picture, a wonderful combination of thrills and romance, presents Burton, American crook, who, with Zara, phony gypsy medium, and her associates, extorts money by means of fake seances.

The gang fleece Doris Merrick, young orphan. Love for Zara makes Burton reform. He escapes with the loot during a police raid, returns it to Doris and later weds Zara abroad. Aileen Pringle and Conway Tearle are the principals. The supporting cast includes Mitchell Lewis, Robert Ober, Stanton Heck and other distinguished lights of the screen.

CATCH LINES

The stirring romance of a medium impostor and her successful struggle for regeneration through love.

Fighting the Flames

(Columbia Pictures—5800 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

WHEREVER high-pressure melodrama is popular this picture should go over big. It's exactly what the average fan wants, stirring action, sustained love interest and comedy stuff interpolated just where it's needed. The title tells the story, for the hero is a formerly "bad boy," who joins the fire brigade, pulls off several thrilling rescues, wins a pretty girl and redeems himself generally in the eyes of his stern dad, who had chucked him out as a hard case. William Haines plays the lead, with Dorothy Devore as the heroine, and both acquit themselves satisfactorily, in fact the acting, not only of the principals, but the entire cast, is of a far higher average than one expects in films of this type.

The plot isn't strikingly original, but Director Reeves Eason has handled it with such skill that new angles are developed and everyone of the big punch situations gets home effectively.

THEME. Melodrama, with comedy relief, fireman hero, love interest and many thrills.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The realistic atmosphere and fast action. Fire and rescue scenes. Climax where hero fights crook as well as flames and saves boy and heroine.

EXPLOITATION. Play up as sensational melodrama of fire brigade. You can probably get local companies interested. Feature William Haines and Dorothy Devore.

DRAWING POWER. First-class attraction for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Picture follows title closely. Is fast-moving sensational melo, with fireman hero, good love interest, and bunch of bully thrills.

THE CAST

Horatio Manly	William Haines
Alice Doran	Dorothy Devore
Mickey	Frankie Darrow
Judge Manly	David Torrence
Big Jim	Sheldon Lewis
Charlie Ryan	William Welsh
Pawnbroker	Charles Murray

Scenario by Douglas Doty. Directed by Reeves Eason. Cameraman, Dewey Wrigley.

SYNOPSIS. Horato, (Racy) Manly, is cast off by his father on account of dissipated ways. He becomes pals with street Arab, Mickey, whose crook father is in jail. Racy joins the fire brigade, incidentally falling in love with Alice Doran, who lives in the same rooming-house. Fire breaks out in the jail and Mickey's dad, who has vowed vengeance on his kid, escapes. He finds Mickey in Alice's room and the girl fights him off. The house catches fire. Racy reaches Alice in time to rescue her and Mickey from the flames. He is reconciled to his father.

Fighting The Flames (Columbia Pictures)

PRESS NOTICE

A genuine thriller is scheduled for the ———— theatre on ———— when "Fighting The Flames," a ripping melodrama with a fireman hero, a perfect barrage of thrills and gripping love interest flashes across the screen. This is a great attraction which never slackens its virile high speed action from start to finish, and tells the story of a young man who finds his manhood in the rough school of the fire brigade, redeems his wasted past and wins a faithful wife.

Besides the romantic and thrill element, there are many funny moments in the picture, which is remarkable for its intense realism and hasn't a dull moment in the whole six reels. William Haines and Dorothy Devore play the leads, with Frankie Darrow, David Torrence, Sheldon Lewis, William Welsh and Charles Murray in support.

The Limited Mail

(Warner Brothers—7144 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A GOOD box office attraction! They've taken Elmer Vance's old stage success and turned it into a film that vibrates with fast action sensational melodramatic thrills, seasoned yarn timely comedy relief and sentimental sauce. It's a railroad yarn and a snappy one, has a general audience appeal and tremendously realistic atmosphere. No spectator is likely to forget in a hurry the big punch scene where the Limited Mail and a fast freight smash into a head-on collision, and there are many other situations of similar tension which will startle the most hard-boiled fan and set the youngsters wild with enthusiasm. Monte Blue is the hero engineer, looks and acts like a real knight of the rail, and gives an admirable performance, ably assisted by Vera Reynolds, as the girl in the case, Willard Louis, as a fat, lovable hobo, with Master Jack Huff an uncommonly cute kiddie in the role of Bobby Fowler.

THEME. Western railroad melodrama with spectacular train-wreck scene, strong romantic interest, numerous thrills, comedy relief and happy climax.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Mountain landslide blocking tracks, train flagged and saved by three hobos. Collision between Limited and freight. Tunnel disaster, when Bob stops express from thundering into obstacles. Rescue of child from drowning by escaped convict.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as sensational Western railroad melodrama, play up the big collision scene, flagging of train by tramps, Bob's mad rush to save Limited from tunnel wreck. Stress love interest, comedy touches. Feature Monte Blue, Vera Reynolds and Willard Louis.

DRAWING POWER. Should please the masses and do good business in any house.

SUMMARY. Offers a ripping tale of Western railroad life, with strong sentimental interest and well-balanced comedy. Well mounted and directed, a sure-fire melodramatic attraction.

THE CAST

Bob Wilson.....Monte Blue
Caroline Dale.....Vera Reynolds
"Dixie" Potts.....Willard Louis
Jim Fowler.....Tom Gallery
Bobby Fowler.....Master Jack Huff
Spike Nelson.....Edward Gribbon
Mrs. O'Leary.....Lydia Yeamans Titus

Adapted from Elmer Vance's stage play by Darryl Kanuck. Director, George Hill, Cameraman, Charles van Enger.

SYNOPSIS. Jilted by Jane Gordon, Bob Wilson turns tramp, saves mail train from landslide disaster. Befrinded by mail clerk Fowler, he finally becomes engineer of Limited Mail. Bob loves Caroline Dale, their romance is temporarily checked when Jane reappears. The Limited collides with a freight. Bob escapes uninjured, as does Bobby, Fowlers little boy. Latter is saved from drowning by escaping convict. Tunnel caves in, Bob flages train and averts accident. He and Caroline find happiness together.

The Limited Mail (Warner Bros.)

PRESS NOTICE

A PICTURE sizzling with excitement and melodramatic power is "The Limited Mail," booked at the ———— theatre on ————. It's a railroad story of intense realism, packed with thrills, including one of the most spectacular wrecks ever filmed, when the Limited and fast freight crash in a head-on collision. The hero is an ex-hobo, who makes good, wins promotion to engineer and the love of a charming girl.

There's bright comedy too, and strong sentimental interest, with Monte Blue, as the heroic engineer and Vera Reynolds as heroine. A brilliant supporting cast is in evidence, including such favorite players as Willard Louis, Tom Gallery, Master Jack Huff, Edward Gribbon and Lydia Yeamans Titus.

CATCH LINES

A thrilling melodrama of the Colorado mountains, with realistic railroad settings, wherein a hobo regains his manhood and wins happiness.

Vic Dyson Pays

(Arrow—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AN average Westerner, but with a plot which offers considerably more sentimental values than are usually found in these yarns of rough-and-ready ranch life, and sufficient speed to please those who like the red-blood, stressed-action stuff. Character drawing is generally at a discount in Westerners, therefore it is all the more surprising to find Ben Wilson, in the hero role of Vic Dyson, making the gent in question a very appealing sort of chap. True Vic scraps with the proper ferocity and effectiveness of a ranch film hero, but he also scores quite a hit in the sequences showing the effect pity for the injured heroine has upon him, while at the same time concealing his love for her, and there's a real bit of pathos in the climax, when he starts to ride away for good. But the girl follows him, so the picture finishes on a happy chord after all.

Director Jacques has done very well with a story of somewhat slight construction.

THEME. Western melodrama, with cattle man hero fighting against attempt to take his ranch for a railroad right-of-way.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where hero has tussle with members of opposing faction, during which Neva falls over cliff. Episode where it develops that spinal injury causes loss of her eyesight. Her recovery and the happy climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as Westerner with riding and fighting thrills, but stressing love story of more than common interst. Feature Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Westerner a bit different from the usual kind in regard to plot, which has a good deal of sentimental lure, in all other respects an average melo.

THE CAST

"Mad" Vic Dyson.....Ben Wilson
Neva.....Neva Gerber
Skip.....Archie Ricks
Albert Stacey.....Mel McCormick

Author Not Credited. Directed by Jacques Jacard.

SYNOPSIS. Vic Dyson, cattleman, known as "Mad" Vic, because of his impetuous temper, vows vengeance when he learns that there is a plot on the part of certain business men to obtain possession of his ranch for use as a railroad right-of-way. He engages in a fight with certain members of the opposing faction, during which, Neva, a stenographer employed by the real estate contingent, is pushed over a cliff. She sustains spinal injuries which result in the loss of her eyesight. Vic, remorseful, takes care of the injured girl and falls in love with her. He is not aware that she returns his affection. On her recovery, Vic deeds his ranch over to her, is about to ride away, but she follows, and he realizes that she loves him.

Ben Wilson.

Vic Dyson Pays (Arrow)

PRESS NOTICE

THERE is a tender love romance running through the exciting melodramatic trend of "Vic Dyson Pays," the Western picture which will be the principal attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. The story has for its theme a cattle man who combats the attempt of real estate men to secure his ranch for a railroad right-of-way. During a fight with his enemies, a girl stenographer is pushed over a cliff and seriously injured.

The hero blames himself for the mishap, takes care of the girl and deeds his ranch to her, when she recovers. He loves her, but starts to go away, is stopped by her and realizes that his affection is returned. Ben Wilson plays the leading role, with Neva Gerber as the heroine. Archie Ricks and Mel McCormick are members of the supporting cast.

CATCH LINES

A hero who was a terror to his foes, but tender hearted as a woman to the weak.

Border Vengeance

(Aywon Film—4800 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE best that can be said in this film's favor is that it will get by O. K. as an attraction for houses where a daily change is the policy, or as half of a double feature bill. It is a Westerner, introducing Jack Perrin as one of the fast-riding, hard scrapping star brigade, but not until near the finish does he get much of a chance to show what he can do in the strenuously active line. The trouble with the picture is that it lacks snappy action in most of the reels, a fatal handicap for a Westerner to carry. The fans may excuse incoherence of plot or similarity of events, but you must give them speed and plenty of thrills in the open-air adventure stuff, or they will turn thumbs down on the production.

However, there is this in Perrin's favor, he has a rather engaging smile, a free-and-easy way of getting around, is a muscular, agile chap and does his stuff with lots of pep and ginger in the few situations where he has an opportunity to pull stunt work. The last reel buzzes along at a merry clip and breezes into a slashing climax, making up in a measure for the tame sequences of the early stages of the film.

THEME. Western melodrama, with action taking place along and over Mexican border.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Western atmosphere and characteristic type. The big mine explosion. Jack Perrin's riding stunts. The smashing fight between Perrin and the villain at the close.

EXPLOITATION. Bill this as a straight Western melo, but don't promise too much as regards either story or action. Feature Jack Perrin, Josephine Hill.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for daily change houses or as half of double feature bill.

SUMMARY. An ordinary Western. Misses fire in early stages because of lack of punch and decisive action. Speeds up in final reel and attains a good climax.

THE CAST

Wes Channing ..... Jack Perrin
Mary Sims ..... Josephine Hill
Mark Newman ..... Jack Richardson
Buck Littleton ..... Bud Osborne
Widow Jackson ..... Mina Redman
Bumps Jackson ..... Vandall Darr
Rufe Sims ..... Hugh Saxon
Flash Denby ..... Leonard Clapman

Author, Forret Sheldon. Director, Harry Webb. Photographed by William Thornley.

SYNOPSIS. Wes Channing's well-meaning but dissipated partner, Buck Littleton, loses his interest in their ranch to gambler Denby. Near the ranch is Rufe Sim's mining claim, an old chap whose life Wes saves when dynamite explodes prematurely in his mine. Wes opposes the sheriff's men who come to seize the ranch for Denby, but has finally to ride across the border. Denby tries to trick Rufe's grandaughter, Mary into surrendering the mine to him. Just as she signs the deed, Wes arrives. He and Denby engage in a savage encounter, which ends with Wes victor.

Border Vengeance (Aywon Films)

PRESS NOTICE

In "Border Vengeance," a Western melodrama, a new star makes his appearance, Jack Perrin, who will be seen in this picture at the ——— theatre on ———. The feature is what the title suggests, a story of adventure in the open, the action taking place on the Mexican border and offering a story rich in romantic interest as well as exciting situations.

A gambler who tries to cheat a young girl and her granddad out of a valuable mine is one of the central figures in the story, and meets his deserts at the hero's hands in a slashing fight at the finish. Josephine Hill is the heroine and Jack Richardson, Bud Osborne and other favorite players are in the cast.

CATCH LINES

Jack Perrin's riding and fighting stunts in this film, make them all "sit up and take notice."

The Wanderer

(Paramount—8173 Feet)

(Reviewed by Oscar Cooper)

COLORFUL, daring, spectacular, "The Wanderer" is produced on a big scale. It is acted by a first-rate cast, and presents an elaboration of the Biblical story of The Prodigal Son. It has big sets and scenes. There can be no question that it is a powerful dramatic document, but it does not have the breadth and sweep of "The Ten Commandments" with which it will inevitably be compared.

The dramatic action pivots on sex appeal of a very strong variety. Greta Nissen, in the role of the Temptress, displays her physical charms, as do many of the other feminine players. Her role is that of a wanton, who lures Jether, the shepherd boy from his home to the city.

THEME. A film version of the story of The Prodigal Son, who is ensnared by a temptress, spends his substance in riotous living and returns home, broken.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The acting by Miss Nissen, as a super-vamp; William Collier, Jr., as the black sheep—a remarkably fine, restrained performance; and Ernest Torrence, as a villain. The rich staging and scenes of pagan revelry. The destruction of the city. The feast of the Fatted Calf on the Prodigal's return. The big sets.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Should be built chiefly around the Prodigal Son story. Play up the cast and the big scenes as outlined above.

DRAWING POWER. O.K. for the best houses.

SUMMARY. Not one of the great pictures, but "strong medicine" dramatically and possessing many elements of popular appeal. Would have been still more impressive if less had been made of the physical and more of the spiritual.

THE CAST

Tola ..... Ernest Torrence
Jether ..... William Collier, Jr.
Tisha ..... Greta Nissen
Jesse ..... Tyrone Power
Huldah ..... Kathlyn Williams
Paris ..... Wallace Beery
Naomi ..... Kathryn Hill
Gaal ..... George Rigas

From the stage play, "The Lost Son," by Maurice V. Samuels. Scenario by J. T. O'Donohue. Directed by Raoul A. Walsh.

SYNOPSIS. Jether, the shepherd boy, is lured from his home by Tisha, a priestess. Her major domo, Tola, a villain, induces him to ask for his share of gold, and he goes with them to the city, where Tisha becomes his mistress. He lavishes jewels and fine clothes upon her, spends his substance in riotous living. The prophet warns him that destruction is coming. When all his money is gone, Tisha casts him out. While a big banquet is going on, the city is destroyed, but Jether escapes, and finds employment tending swine. Finally, he makes his way home and is welcomed at the Feast of the Fatted Calf.

PRESS NOTICE

THE famous Biblical story of The Prodigal Son, with a wonderful cast and elaborate scenes, is told in "The Wanderer," which comes to the ——— theatre on ———. Raoul Walsh, who directed "The Thief of Bagdad," had charge of the making of the picture and was provided with a splendid cast, including Ernest Torrence, Greta Nissen, William Collier, Jr., Tyrone Power, Wallace Beery, Kathlyn Williams and others.

Miss Nissen appears as Tisha, the Temptress, in the most important role of her career thus far. Young Collier is great in the role of the Prodigal Son. Torrence gives a fine performance in a villainous role. Destruction of the wicked city while a big banquet and revel is in progress is the big scene.

CATCH LINES

The Wanderer (Paramount)

He wasted his substance in riotous living, but his father killed the fatted calf for him.

The Love Hour

(Vitagraph—7036 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

CONSIDERED even as an ordinary program attraction this picture fails to make the grade. It may get by in the "daily change" houses, but hasn't a Chinaman's chance of success elsewhere. The plot, with its virtuous shopgirl, suffering hubby and designing, black-hearted villain, brings memories of the worst examples of movies a generation ago. It would have been bad enough if confined to five reels, but dragged out to its present length it is inexcusably tiresome. The only bright spots in the film are the merry slapstick interludes for which Louise Fazenda and Willard Louis are responsible, a great comedy team whose work saves the feature from being altogether a blank failure. A slow start is registered, nearly a reel being consumed showing antics at a seashore resort before the story proper gets under way.

THEME. Melodrama with comedy relief, dealing with love of shopgirl for millionaire and pursuit of her by soulless villain.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The slapstick comedy. Scenes where Louise Fazenda and Willard Louis settle down in married life. Episode where heroine defends herself from villain's advances with gun and thunderstorm effects. The climax.

DRAWING POWER. May do for daily change houses, if bolstered up by lively short subjects.

SUMMARY. Romantic melo with hackneyed plot depicting adventures of shopgirl who weds millionaire, latter falling ill and going broke, while villain torments wife. A poor attraction, held up to some degree by interpolations of slapstick comedy.

THE CAST

Rex Westmore.....Huntly Gordon
Jenny Tibbs.....Louise Fazenda
Gus Yerger.....Willard Louis
Betty Brown.....Ruth Clifford
Ward Ralston.....John Roche
Kid Lewis.....Charles Farrell
Attorney.....Gayne Whitman

Author, Bess Meredyth. Directed by Herman Raymaker. Photographed by E. B. Du Par.

SYNOPSIS. A chance meeting at an amusement park results in Betty Brown, shopgirl, wedding young Rex Westmore, millionaire, while her chum Jenny marries plumber Yerger. Rex loses all his money in stocks and falls ill. Ralston, a broker, sends him abroad to recuperate and makes advances to Betty. At a crucial moment she pulls a gun on him, just as a thunderstorm breaks. He falls and Betty runs away. Later, she learns that a lightning bolt killed Ralston. The Merry Widow

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—10,027 Feet)

(Reviewed by Oscar Cooper)

EVERY so often a picture comes along about which there can be no box-office doubt. "The Merry Widow" belongs in that class. It has great direction by Erich von Stroheim; Mae Murray really acting instead of pouting her way attractively across the footage; John Gilbert scoring heavily as the hero; remarkable new villain, Roy D'Arcy, of whom more will be heard later; fine production values; and a story out of which first-class audience stuff has been made.

The picture can be shown at great length, as in the case of the opening of the Embassy Theatre, New York; or it can be, and we think should be trimmed, to fit the requirements of the majority of houses. In either case, it is a box-office certainty.

THEME. Mythical kingdom story, with the hero, a prince, eventually marrying the heroine, an American chorus girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Superb understanding of production values by the director. Heart interest and the splendor of court and Parisian life in admirable contrast. The uniformly high average of acting by the principals.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Capitalize the famous waltz and operetta. Tell them about Mae Murray, John Gilbert and D'Arcy, the villain, and the direction.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for the best houses and all other classes of houses.

SUMMARY. A finely directed picture with sure-fire appeal because of the way in which it has been handled. Unusual combination of atmosphere, acting and direction.

THE CAST

King Nitika.....George Fawcett
Baron Sadoja.....Tully Marshall

There is also a large number of other players. By Franz Lehar, Victor Leon and Leo Stein. Directed by Erich von Stroheim. Adapted by von Stroheim and Benjamin Glazer. Cameraman, Ollie Marsh.

SYNOPSIS. Prince Danilo and the Crown Prince meet Sally O'Hara, a Follies dancer, and both seek to win her favor. Danilo wins, but the Crown Prince finds them in what seems to be a compromising position, whereupon Danilo announces he and Sally will wed. Danilo's parents force him to break off the engagement and Sally, broken-hearted, marries the Baron who dies on the wedding-night. Sally thus becomes a rich widow and goes to Paris. The Crown Prince, seeking her money goes there, and Sally, thinking Danilo no longer loves her, tells him she is engaged to the Crown Prince. The two men quarrel, and a duel is arranged. Danilo is seriously wounded and is taken back to Monteblanco, followed by Sally. The Crown Prince is killed by an anarchist, the King and Queen having died, and thus Danillo and Sally become the rulers of the country.

The Live Wire

(C. C. Burr-First National—6850 Feet)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

SCORE another hit for Johnny Hines. This comedian seems to have an uncanny faculty for making productions which have wide popularity as much their termination as the inevitable clinch at the finish of the last reel. And the titles! If your patrons don't get a laugh out of every one of them it will be due only to a lack of humor in their make-up.

As in Hines' previous pictures the story is incidental to the "gags" but then, who looks for plot in a production that combines all the thrills of a circus performance, an exhibition of the "Charleston," which incidentally, should go big at the present time, and the many other mirth-provoking stunts performed by this versatile funster.

As regards the romantic element—credit must be given the discerning eye of C. C. Burr for having picked so fair a vision of female loveliness as Mildred Ryan.

THEME. Comedy melodrama of adventures of circus performer, out of work, whose athletic ability and sense of humor win him wealth and a girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The circus scenes. The cafe sequence. The fight scene in the gymnasium. The many bits of business put over by Hines and Edmund Breese. John Krafft's titles.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The star's name ought to prove a good drawing card. Put on prologue featuring circus atmosphere. There are any number of tie-ups possible with electrical companies.

DRAWING POWER. An attraction that should go over with a bang in first runs and all other types of houses.

SUMMARY. A fast action comedy melodrama with a laugh in every scene. The "Gags" which occupy most of the footage, are novel and entertaining.

PRESS NOTICE

A HIGHLY entertaining comedy-melodrama starring Johnny Hines, one of our foremost comedians, will be shown at the ———— theatre on ————. This production, titled "The Live Wire," reveals Hines in the role of a circus performer in which characterization he performs many thrilling stunts. Forced to quit the circus life he takes to the "road" and from then until the concluding scene the picture is just one laugh after another, and the subtitles cause no abatement of mirth in this hilariously amusing comedy.

No lover of life and laughter can afford to miss seeing this very funny vehicle.

CATCH LINES

A laugh a minute—Aerial acrobatics—thrills galore in the fight scenes—a wonderful electrical display and Johnny Hines in his most amusing role. Look for the big thrills—Hines' headslide on a slack wire—the failure of the lights at the park.

The Coast of Folly

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS society drama has been produced with all the lavish disregard of expense for which Miss. Swanson's pictures are usually noted, the star wearing gracefully a variety of magnificent gowns calculated to awaken the envy of all feminine patrons, and the interiors a veritable blaze of gorgeous settings. Its entertainment values are not quite up to the standard of "glorious Gloria's" best vehicles, chiefly because the actual story is subordinated to the leading lady's characterizations. She appears in a dual, or one might say a triple role, for we are first given a momentary flash of her attired in the early Victorian bustle and sweeping train, then as a modern flapper and later as an old French Countess. The Swanson fans won't care so much for their favorite in her elderly makeup, but they will wax enthusiastic over her girlish por-

THEME. Society drama, with Palm Beach and New York atmosphere, in which mother comes to rescue of daughter involved in scandal.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The elaborate settings. Miss Swanson's clever characterizations. The fashion display. The masked ball. Scene where heroine's mother saves daughter's reputation.

EXPLOITATION. Feature Gloria Swanson's work, tell women patrons about her new gowns. Play up movie ball, luxurious atmosphere and settings. Boost love interest.

DRAWING POWER. Miss Swanson's popularity should bring good business at any house.

Gloria Swanson

The Coast Of Folly (Paramount)

PRESS NOTICE

The coming of a new Gloria Swanson film is a big event in the amusement world and admirers of the famous star will be glad to hear that she will appear in "The Coast Of Folly" at the ———— theatre on————. It is a society drama, with gorgeous Palm Beach atmosphere and settings, which tells the story of how a girl involved in a scandal is saved by her mother's self-sacrifice.

The critics agree that this is Miss Swanson's finest role in which she outdoes all of her previous performances. She is supported by a splendid cast among whom are such prominent players as Anthony Jowitt, Alec Francis, Dorothy Cumming,

CATCH LINES

The story of a girl who ran aground on the scandal rocks, amid the merry-makers, moneymakers and mischief-makers of Palm Beach.

Seven Days

(Producers Distributing Corp.—6974 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

IF they hadn't strung this picture out to an entirely unnecessary length it would probably have classed as first-rate entertainment. It takes mighty good comedy material to register successfully over the six reel limit, and when a film consists mostly of farce and slapstick stuff as this does, stretching its slender plot to the limit is a mistake. The story hinges on the efforts of the members of a house party to escape from a quarantine cordon established because of a supposed outbreak of smallpox, which proves at the last to be of the harmless chicken variety, and there is plenty of humming action with all sorts of funny complications which get the laughs for a while, but grow a trifle monotonous toward the close.

Lillian Rich and Creighton Hale do very nicely in the leading roles and are capably supported. The sub titles are uncommonly well written, terse, witty, and help out the action a whole lot.

THEME. House party quarantined on account of supposed smallpox outbreak which proves phony. Farce comedy.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Acting of Creighton Hale and Lillian Rich. The fast action. Scene where burglar is concealed in chimney. Chase up and down dumbwaiter, and other slapstick events.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as adaptation of stage farce which had long Broadway run. Play up policeman and burglar episode and efforts of members of house party to beat the quarantine rule. Feature Creighton Hale and Lillian Rich.

DRAWING POWER. A fair program attraction for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Farce comedy with some distinctly funny spots, fast action and plenty of slapstick. Spoiled by excess footage but holds up pretty well under that handicap and should pass muster as average attraction.

THE CAST

Kit Eclair ..... Lillian Rich
Jim Wilson ..... Creighton Hale
Bella Wilson ..... Lilyan Tashman
Anne Brown ..... Mabel Julienne Scott
Dal Brown ..... William Austin
Tom Harbinson ..... Hal Cooley
Aunt Selina ..... Rosa Gore

Adopted from stage farce by Mary Roberts Rinehart. Directed by Scott Sidney.

SYNOPSIS. Jim Wilson gives house party. Valet falls sick, police establish quarantine on suspicion of smallpox. Guests include Jim's discarded wife and Kit Eclair, who poses as his present spouse to help him get inheritance. A policeman and burglar are also involved. Wild and weird complications ensue until all are worn out. Valet's malady turns out to be only chickenpox. Jim wins his former wife back. Kit accepts a faithful suitor.

Seven Days (Prod. Dis. Corp.)

PRESS NOTICE

ADAPTED from a former big Broadway stage success, "Seven Days," billed as the leading attraction at the ————theatre on ————, is a hilarious farce comedy that has won unstinted praise from the newspaper critics. It deals with a supposed outbreak of smallpox among the members of a house party and the wild complications which ensue when the panic-stricken guests, as well as a burglar and policeman who are caught within the established quarantine, try to escape.

There's a double love affair in progress, and romance vies with humor in holding the spectator's attention. In the finale, when all are about worn out, it transpires that the valet who caused the trouble only has chickenpox. The cast is headed by Creighton Hale and Lillian Rich.

CATCH LINES

Both as a stage play and musical comedy "Seven Days" scored tremendous hits. In film form it beats the originals hollow as a mirth-producer. See it, be convinced.

California Straight Ahead

(Universal-Jewel—7238 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

ANOTHER Reginald Denny feature which is bound to have a tremendously wide audience appeal, offering as it does sure-fire thrills, uproariously funny comedy, and traveling at express speed. It's one of those pictures which winds up with an auto race crammed with furious action and hair-breadth escapes from death, but besides that big punch scene, there are countless other warranted to create gales of laughter and chase the blues away from all spectators. Nothing more amusing in the farcical line has been screened than the episode where a storm hits a circus, the animals escape and proceed to turn a number of tourists camping in the neighborhood, out of their sleeping places, and the adventures of the hero and his negro valet on the motor trip to the coast are a constant source of merriment.

It is a vehicle especially well suited to the talents of the versatile Denny, who works with his customary dash and gaiety, Gertrude Olmsted figuring as an extremely captivating heroine

THEME. Lively comedy-drama, with farcical situations, and love affairs, ending in thrilling auto race.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Denny's adventures in big motor van along the National Highway. Scene where storms breaks, circus animals get loose and chase tourists. The fast action, the farcical comedy punches. Big thrill in auto race at finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tell patrons this is one of Reginald Denny's best laugh-producers and nerve-thrillers. Praise the comedy the limit. Feature star and play up the dangers of big auto race.

DRAWING POWER. Good for any type of theatre.

SUMMARY. A comedy drama guaranteed to please everybody. Is replete with exciting situations and sure-fire farce comedy. Has love interest and great auto race at finish.

THE CAST

Tom Hayden ..... Reginald Denny
Betty Browne ..... Gertrude Olmsted
Sambo ..... Tom Wilson
Creighton Deane ..... Charles Gerrard
Mrs. Browne ..... Lucille Ward
Jeffrey Browne ..... John Steppling
Mr. Hayden ..... Fred Esmelton

Authors, Harry Pollard and Byron Morgan. Directed by Harry Pollard. Photographed by Gilbert Warrenton.

SYNOPSIS. A stag party stops Tom Hayden from attending his wedding, and his family disown him. He and Sambo, negro valet, start for coast on huge, double-decked auto, making expenses by selling chicken dinners and radio music to tourists. In the desert Tom encounters the girl he should have married, Betty Browne, and her indignant parents. During storm, animals break loose from nearby circus. Tom rescues the Brownes, but elopes with Betty, is pinched at Los Angeles, released, drives car for Browne in big auto race, wins, and gets Betty.

California Straight Ahead (Universal)

PRESS NOTICE

REGINALD DENNY in his latest laughing success—"California Straight Ahead," will be seen on the screen of the ———— theatre on ————. This comedy-drama is hailed by the critics as one of the most entertaining of its kind, a picture in which thrills and farcical situations mingle freely, concluding with an auto race, a whizz for strenuous action and hair-breadth escapes from sudden death.

Denny figures as a wild young chap who misses a wedding date, nearly loses the girl, but pushes on to the coast with his negro valet in a double-deck auto; has all kinds of funny adventures en-route, but wins a big race and the lady at the finish.

CATCH LINES

He missed his wedding date, was in universal disgrace, but made good in the end, winning a big auto race, and his girl back, into the bargain.

Souls for Sables

(Tiffany Productions—7600 Feet)

(Reviewed by J. S. Dickerson)

HERE we have one of the most dependable themes of the screen—logically developed, the final result being a first class production, in which good settings, nice clothes and excellent acting by an all-star cast headed by Claire Windsor and Eugene O'Brien, contribute about equally in making a production that will past muster in any class of theatre.

Minor faults can be found with the picture but we doubt if these will in any way effect its box office or audience values, unless in the fact that there is much excess footage in the early reels, some of which will probably register as silly with the average fan.

As a whole the picture telling the story of a luxury loving wife who almost wrecks her life by her indiscretions before being taught a lesson, builds to climax of logical melodrama without oversteping the bounds of reason and should prove a money maker for both exhibitor and its producers.

THEME—Dramatic story of a young wife who longs for luxuries and almost wrecks her life in an attempt to achieve them by questionable methods.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The good settings. Acting of the whole cast. The melodramatic climax where the disillusioned husband shoots his wife and then commits suicide. The dependable story and its logical development.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES—The all star cast. Presents an excellent opportunity for a fashion show tie-up. The theme with its possibilities for attention provoking catch lines.

DRAWING POWER—Has a wide variety of appeal. Good enough for the first runs and still not an impossibility for the neighborhood and small town houses.

SUMMARY—Just a good picture built along safe and sane lines that carries a variety of appeal but which could be improved by some intelligent trimming in the early reels, thereby speeding up the action and bringing the meat of the story to earlier attention. Contains some minor fauts but these will probably not harm the picture's box office value.

THE CAST

Souls for Sables (Tiffany)
PRESS NOTICE

DAVID Graham Phillips famous novel, Harlan and Co. has been adapted to the screen under the title of "Souls for Sables" and will be the feature attraction at the ——— theatre for a ——— days run beginning ———.

"Souls for Sables" is a strongly dramatic story of a young wife who almost wrecked her life before realizing that a woman's natural love for luxury can be carried to an extreme.

As the butterfly wife Claire Windsor is an ideal choice and the male lead is in the hands of Eugene O'Brien, always a great favorite with motion picture fans. In addition to Miss Windsor and Mr. O'Brien, there are other well known and popular players in the cast.

Miss Windsor wears 26 different varieties of new and modish gowns that will be the envy of every feminine patron of the movies.

CATCH LINES

She almost lost her soul because of her love for sables. Love of luxury is a woman's natural inheritance but should she risk her soul for sables?

Siegfried

(Ufa Films—9000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS German film, an adaptation from the Wagnerian "Nibelungen Ring," offering a combination narrative of "Siegfried," "Gotterdaemmerung" and "Lohengrin," ranks as decidedly high achievement from the strictly artistic standpoint. The Teutonic facility for embroidering a fantastic tale with wild, weird, trimmings has never been better demonstrated, and the photography is exquisite. Presented at the Century Theatre, New York, with a large symphony orchestra which did full justice to the score supplied by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, it was greeted with generous enthusiasm by an audience of opera-goers and music-lovers for whom it possessed undeniable appeal. Considered as a commercial asset, excepting in the big theatres of large cities where it can be given adequate presentation, the film's outlook is not particularly rosy, as the average theatre simply couldn't handle it, and the average fan wouldn't find it entertaining.

THEME. A version of the Nordic sagas, adapted from combination of Wagner's "Siegfried," "Gotterdaemmerung" and "Lohengrin" operas.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The beautiful photography, impressive settings, fantastic atmosphere, Siegfried slaying dragon, adventures in the Land of the Dwarfs, magical encounters, death of Siegfried, suicide of Brunhilde.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Can only be boosted as great attraction where big orchestra of large theatres is qualified to render Wagnerian score effectively

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for large theatres only.

SUMMARY. A beautifully mounted and photographed film adapted from Wagner operas of "Siegfried" Gotterdaemmerung" and "Lohengrin." Appeal limited to music-lovers and opera patrons.

THE CAST

Brunhilde.....Hanna Ralph
Siegried.....Paul Ritcher
Queen Ute.....Gertrude Arnold
Kriemhild.....Margarete Schoen
Runes Leader.....Frida Richard
King Gunther.....Theodor Loos
Mime, the Smith.....Iris Robert

Adapted from the Nibelungen Lied. Scenario by Thea von Harbon. Directed by Fritz Lang. Photographed by Gunther Ritten and Carl Hoffman.

SYNOPSIS. Siegfried, son of King Siegmund, forges a great sword and journeys to win the princess of Bergundy, Kriemhild. En-route he slays a monstrous dragon, bathes in its magical blood and becomes invulnerable to mortal blade, excepting a spot on his shoulder where a leaf falls. During his adventurous career, he captures the treasure of the King of the Dwarfs and overpowers twelve other kings. Finally he conquers Brunhilde, strongest woman on earth and wins Kriemhild, but is slain by a spear-thrust in the unprotected place on his shoulder. Brunhilde commits suicide.

Siegfried (Ufa Films)
PRESS NOTICE

PATRONS of opera and music-lovers are promised an unusual treat when "Siegfried," the great German production, will be shown on the screen of the ——— theatre on ———. The story is based on a combination of the three Wagnerian operas, "Siegfried," "Gotterdaemmerung," and "Lohengrin." It is an impressive fantastic tale of magic, in which the hero slays a monstrous dragon, and has numerous weird adventures.

A large symphony orchestra will play Wagner's immortal music, for which a special score has been compiled. The beautiful photography and massive, splendid settings are an artistic triumph.

CATCH LINES

A marvelous adaptation of three great Wagnerian operas, moulded into a tale of weird fantasy and magical adventure.

If you are a music-lover, see "Siegfried" and hear the strains of the symphony orchestra accompanying it.

Chicago

LEE MITCHELL is now manager of the New Julian Theatre at 918 Belmont Avenue. During the summer the house has been redccorated and handsome new furnishings installed, so that it presents a brand new appearance. To mark the improvement Jimmy Coston has added "new" to the name of the house which was formerly called the Julian.

Cecil Maberry of Producers Distributing Corporation spent the week in New York City, where he attended the national conference of divisional managers. He is expected to be back in Chicago on September 7th.

Del Goodman, who is traveling around the world in the interest of Fox Film Corporation, postcards en route from Port Said to Arden, Arabia, that although the weather is very hot, he is having a good time. Mr. Goodman is well known in Chicago film circles, through his former connections with local exchanges.

Manager C. C. Wallace of United Artists has appointed Fred R. Martin, former branch manager of Vitagraph in Milwaukee, as supervisor of sales for the Indiana territory. Mr. Martin will work out of Chicago.

Cooney Brothers of Chicago and Bert Williams of Detroit, have entered into an agreement whereby the Capitol stage creations, produced by Francis A. Mangan, will go into the New Grand Riviera Theatre, Mr. William's Detroit house. It is said this is the first time that presentations will travel intact from city to city.

George Miller of the Park Theatre, one of the Simansky & Miller chain, has returned from an enjoyable vacation. Mr. Miller, accompanied by his wife, motored to his old home town, Buffalo, and also visited other points of interest in the east.

A recent visit to the big Diversey Parkway plant of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, revealed the fact that an epidemic has been prevalent there recently, but W. R. Rothacker is not taking any steps to suppress it; in fact he is for it. Pearl McClarey and Wade Parmalee had just returned from their vacation during which they were married; Charles Dixon shipping clerk was wed during the week, and George J. Kilgore of the industrial department surprised his fellow workers with the announcement that he had been married for several months.

Billie Troug, district manager for Universal, with headquarters in Kansas City, and Charles Sears, well known theatre man of that city, were Chicago visitors last week and made their headquarters at Universal's Chicago exchange.

Louis Laemmle has returned from a ten weeks' vacation abroad, having been one of the party that accompanied Carl Laemmle on his trip to Germany. Mr. Laemmle reports having had an enjoyable visit to the Black Forest and leading German cities, and that the trip has greatly benefitted his health.

George Hopkinson, who has taken up golf in earnest since retiring from the management of the Hamlin Theatre, 3826 W. Madison Street, which he recently sold to H. Lutz, at present is enjoying a leisurely motor trip through the east, having left about two weeks ago.

More than one hundred exhibitors and exchange men gathered at the testimonial dinner tendered Dave Dubin, in honor of his appointment to the managership of Educational Pictures Chicago exchange. Al Sobler was in the chair as toastmaster and the occasion was most enjoyable. During the course of the evening Mr. Dubin was presented with a handsome desk set.

Eddie Grossman has returned from a trip to New York. Mr. Grossman recently became associated with Architect Levine, in building and financing motion picture theatres and reports that prospects in New York territory are excellent for considerable new building.

Milwaukee

E. C. ACCOLA, manager of the Bonham Theatre at Prairie du Sac, Wis., strolled into the various film exchanges here during the past week, and spread optimistic sentiments among the boys.

J. G. Frackman, Milwaukee manager for Progress Pictures Co., has taken a jaunt down to Chicago, where he is conferring with Frank Zambreno, president of the distributing organization, regarding the exploitation of Progress products in the Wisconsin territory during the coming months.

Goetz Brothers, operators of a chain of picture houses in Kenosha, Janesville, Beloit, Menasha and other Wisconsin cities, have added the Lincoln Theatre at Kenosha as their third house in that thriving city. The house has a capacity of approximately 600, and compares favorably with the Vogue and Butterfly Theatres, the other two Goetz houses in Kenosha.

Louis Holz, the active little manager of the Lorraine Theatre, Milwaukee, whose novel ideas and promotion stunts have made the house a paying proposition for its owner, Mrs. W. Smith, has negotiated the sale of the theatre to Rex and Randolph of New York, who will henceforth operate it. In recognition of his excellent work in the past, Louis will be retained as manager for the new owners, who will remodel the house into a 1,000 seat theatre. They will probably take over another local house in the near future.

Charlie Koehler, booker at the Milwaukee offices of Progress Pictures Co., has returned to his duties after a ten day seige at Deaconess Hospital, where he underwent treatment for gall stones. While he was a mighty sick boy for several weeks, he is now flashing his usual cheery smile on all visitors to the office and is rapidly catching up on the work which accumulated during his period of incapacity.

Sam Thirion, operator of the Bijou Theatre at Green Bay, Wis., spent a few days of the past week in Milwaukee arranging for tab shows to be booked into his house during the coming season. Business at the Bijou has been bounteous all summer and prospects for the winter are excellent, but Sam is a wise showman and believes his patrons would relish a little variety in their entertainment. Second run pictures will be run in connection with the one act tabs.

"Dad" Wolcott browsed about the Milwaukee film exchanges during the past week, lining things up for his Majestic Theater at Racine, Wis., where he says, business is going to be brisk this fall.

Establishing a precedent in local first run theatres, "The Lost World" was held over for a second week at Saxe's Merrill Theater. It is probable, according to Harry Jones, manager of the Merrill, that several of the other sig pictures booked for the near future will be given two week runs, now that the experiment would seem to have bee nsuccessful. The Merrill, which has been something of a step-child in the Saxe organization since its purchase last Spring, is now being frankly favored by the booking department, and is being given the choice of excellent pictures made available by Saxe's buying power.

All downtown Milwaukee picture houses are sporting dressed up fronts and lobby displays in honor of State Fair Week, which opened at the grounds just outside the city on Monday. Thousands of up-state visitors to the fair are dropping into the downtown picture houses for a real treat.

The Davidson Theatre, legitimate, which has been dark for several weeks, has re-opened for its annual season, thus entering into indirect competition with the picture houses once again.

E. Hoefer, manager of the Rex Theater at Sheboygan, has returned to his fair city to boost business again after a visit to the Milwaukee exchanges last week. Hoefer believes in availing himself of exploitation aids of distrbutors and has been very successful in that rtspect.

Interest in Milwaukee film circles during the past week was centered on the successful opening of the Alhambra Theatre under Universal management. During the two weeks the house was dark, the entire place was renovated and redecorated with most pleasing results, the key to the attractive interior being the elaborate front, featuring a large sign. The opening was staged in conjunction with The Wisconsin News, and took the form of a benefit party for that newspaper's Christmas Basket fund. The admission for the evening was boosted from 50 cents to one dollar, at which price a packed house was drawn. Howard Waugh, formerly manager of Paramount houses at Atlanta and Memphis, is in charge as resident manager for Universal theaters division. Heinz Roemheld, formerly concert master at Saxe's Wisconsin Theater, has returned to the city to become director of presentations at the Alhambra as well as conductor of the 25 piece concert orchestra. Other house executives are Ann McMurdy, publicity director; Robert Talbot, assistant manager, and Billy T. Hendricks, floor manager.

A new motion picture house, to be known as the Cobb Theatre, is being erected at the junction of Cobb and Castle streets, Boston. A number of old wooden buildings on the site are now being torn down and construction work will start as soon as the site is cleared. A. J. Carpenter Jr. of Jamaica Plain district, Boston, has the plans and contracts in hand for the playhouse, which will be 81 by 195 feet and will have one balcony.

Winfield H. Bradley has bought the Standard Film Service at 23 Piedmont street, Boston.

W. Willson of the Wollaston Palace Theatre of Quincy, Mass., expects to start foundation work next week for a new theatre at Hancock and Beale streets, Quincy which will be added to his present holdings. The theatre will be 60 feet wide and 200 feet deep. Tuck & Co. of Roxbury, Mass. have drawn the plans.

D. A. Pietroroia of Bristol, Conn. has organized four theatre companies and is getting information about film bookings. The theatres are the Bristol Theatre with capital of $50,000, Colonial Theatre with capital of $20,000, Circle Theatre with capital of $50,000, Princess Theatre with capital of $50,000 and Palace Theatre with capital of $50,000. The Circle Theatre will be located in Manchester, Conn., while the other four will be in Bristol.

The town of Winchester, Mass., has received an offer for the former Chapin school house for use as a motion picture theatre after extensive remodelling, provided the town will grant a license for a motion picture which it has heretofore refused to grant. The names of the persons making the offer are withheld. Winchester is the only large town in the state without a moving picture theatre.

Talk of remodelling the Auditorium theatre at Malden, Mass., into a moving picture house has been set at rest with the sale of the theatre and lease to James Hayden of the Brockton (Mass.) City theatre, who will continue the established policy of stock in the Auditorium, opening Sept. 14.

Following the incorporation of the Rhode Island Auditorium, Inc., with capital of $375,000 at Providence, R. I., by Edward P. Jastram, Walter A. Edwards and Ogden R. Lindsley, well known in theatrical enterprises, comes the announcement that the proposed Auditorium will be a big indoor amusement park and artificial ice skating rink. It is to seat 8600 people and will occupy an entire city block between North Main, Second and Third streets and Highland avenue and will be so constructed that it can be used for motion pictures during part of the year. It is expected to rush the building completion so it may be occupied abont the middle of February.

JOHN G. VON HERBERG, general manager of the Jensen-Von Herberg circuit, left his office in this city last week for New York, Chicago and other Eastern centers, on a business trip that was expected to take a total of seven weeks duration. Mr. Von Herberg planned to visit the First National and Famous Players offices in New York City, and also was scheduled to visit a number of the large motion picture houses throughout the country on an informal tour of inspection.

Announcement was received here this week to the effect that Glenn Goff, former concert organist at the Pantages Theatre in this city, had just been selected as head organist at the California Theatre in San Francisco.

Lou Rosenberg, representative of Al Rosenberg's De Luxe Feature Film Exchange in the Oregon territory, arrived in Seattle last week with Mrs. Rosenberg on a brief business trip.

B. A. Kelsey, owner and manager of the Ruby Theatre in Chelan was included among the out-of-town exhibitors who visited Film Row during the last seven days. Mr. Kelsey bought and booked a number of fall products for his house during his stay in this city.

Fred G. Sliter, manager of the First National exchange, left the local office last week for New York City, where he was to attend the meeting of branch managers being held there the latter part of August. The destinies of the local exchange were being controlled by J. W. Parry, booker, and A. C. Raleigh, advertising and exploitation manager during Mr. Sliter's absence. He was expected back in the city early in September.

A distinctly novel type of preview was staged in this city last week by Manager Al Finkelstein of the Strand Theatre. Instead of the ordinary press showing at night, Mr. Finkelstein extended invitations to representatives of the newspapers to attend Seattle's first "luncheon preview." This was held in the private projection room of the Greater Theatres Company.

Word was received by the film exchanges this week to the effect that the Fairfax Picture Club at Fairfax, Wash., was to reopen the latter part of August under the management of R. D. Moore. The Club is a cooperative institution owned and operated for and by the employees and owners of the industries of that territory.

Vic Gauntlett, rapid fire advertising and publicity manager of John Hamrick's circuit of Blue Mouse Theatres, this week packed his little suitcase and departed for Tacoma Blue Mouse, where he was to occupy the manager's official chair for the coming week. Mr. Gauntlett's removal to Tacoma was only temporary, being effective only while Ned Edris, manager of the Tacoma house, was on his annual vacation.

Announcement was made last week by W. H. Drummond, manager of the Producers' Distributing Corporation exchange, of the appointment of Matt Apperton to a sales representative capacity with the P. D. C. organization. Mr. Apperton was formerly associated with Manager L. O. Lukan's Universal Exchange in this territory, and is expected to cover the same districts for the Producers' office.

Tom Olsen, well-known in this city for his various and sundry motion picture connections within the last two years, left last week for New York City to enter the Famous Players-Lasky School for the making of motion picture theatre managers.

Reports received in this city last week indicated that the Brewster Theatre at Brewster, Wash., had been taken over by C. D. Gillespie, who will continue the operation of the house under its present policy. The former owner and manager of the theatre was Harry Dunning, whose departure from that venture was rather in the nature of a surprise.

Morris Siegel, sales representative in the Eastern Washington territory for Manager George P. Endert's local Famous Players-Lasky exchange, returned to Seattle last week, and present plans are that he will remain in this territory for the next number of weeks, at least. W. E. Nelson, who has been handling the books for Manager Endert, was expected to leave for the Spokane headquarters this week, to succeed Mr. Siegel for the first part of the coming season. Mr. Siegel is declared to be one of the foremost salesmen connected with the Famous Players organization in any city on the Pacific Coast.

A. H. Huot, manager of the Film Booking Offices exchange in this city has been absent from his office for the last week on a sales trip around the territory. He was expected back the latter part of August, according to E. A. Lamb, who has been in charge since his departure.

McCarthy, owner of the Fair Haven theatre in Vermont, is back from a vacation spent in Ithaca. Harry Lazarus, of Kingston, has been enjoying a few days at Schroon Lake.

Lew Fischer, of Fort Edward, busy these days in getting the Bradley theatre in shape for opening in September, had a couple of guests at dinner the other night in Ted O'Shea, manager of the local Metro-Goldwyn exchange, and Alec Weissman, salesman.

J. H. McIntyre, who looks after the Famous Players exchange in Albany, and does it exceptionally well, is now on a ten day trip through northern New York.

Oscar Perrin made his first appearance during the past week as manager of the Capitol theatre in Albany. This theatre will run burlesque for the last three days of the week during the fall and winter season. This means that Harmanus Bleecker Hall will continue with pictures during the months to come, instead of splitting its week with burlesque.

The Rialto, in Little Falls, as it is now known, and which was formerly the Gateway theatre, is now being handled by a woman in the person of Mrs. Francis McGraw, who secured her experience in the running the Gem theatre. When the house was reopend a short tim ago, Mrs. McGraw gave a short address of welcome and dedicated the theatre to the entertainment of not only Little Falls but the entire Mohawk Valley. Maurice Chase, of Buffalo, and others were on hand for the opening.

The Standard Silk mill at Chadwicks, will run motion pictures this fall and winter for its employees. The theatre in Averill Park, which is also a community house run by the Faith Knitting company, will also operate as a means of entertaining employees of the concern.

Bob Yates, who has been summering at Lake George and looking after his mother-in-law's theatre at the same time, was in town the other day on his way back from New York city.

Young, Whitney and Pierce are making fine progress these days in constructing the quarter million dollar motion picture theatre in Ilion and which will be known as the Capitol, and which will be run along lines similar to that of the New York city house bearing the same name. The theatre will have a seating capacity of about 1,600 persons and present plans call for its completion about October 15.

Earl Flack, of Potsdam is now planning to secure another theatre somewheres in northern New York and to that end is spending much of his time these days in driving over the territory.

Feldman and son, who recently bought the Lincoln theatre in Schenectady, are now planning to install a new organ. The son will probably play as he formerly served as organist at several theatres in both Albany and Troy.

Mrs. Robert Fonda, who runs the Grand theatre in Scotia, and who books the pictures for the house, is now being accompanied on her trips to Albany, by her baby that is just starting to walk.

Charles Dortic, of Pittsburg, who is connected with the Universal Film company as an advertising efficiency man, arrived in Albany during the past week, and will remain here for several days.

It was so cold in northern New York during the latter part of the week that in some places the mercury dropped to 28 degrees, making several exhibitors plan to start their furnaces.

Harry Hellman, who runs the Royal theatre in Albany, and who recently bought a summer home at Crooked Lake, near Troy, is planning to have the film boys out from Albany for some week-end in the near future.

Exhibitors in Saratoga Springs, are warning their cashiers to be on the lookout for counterfeit money as it is said there is considerable in circulation in that resort.

Bert Griffin, who runs the Lyceum in Red Hook, not only looks after his theatre, but also runs a dance hall and soft drink place, a confectionery store, and also superintends a chocolate factory. His theatre is now operating three nights a week.

It is planned to close the Albany theatre in Albany for two or three weeks in order that it may be redecorated and otherwise improved by the new owners.

The American theatre in Troy, which reopened last week, will run a serial on each Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, according to a placard in the lobby. Girl ushers in gray and white are being used in the theatre. Walter Hays, of Buffalo, and Moe Mark of New York, accompanied by Frank Dolan, of Albany, visited the American the other day and were much pleased in the transformation that had been made in the house. The operator is Louis Rinn.

Atlanta

NAT L. ROYSTER of Charlotte, N. C., general manager in charge of Warner Bros. theatres in this territory returned last Friday from a week's visit to the home office in New York.

Mr. Royster also announced important changes and an addition to the management of his Broadway theatre in Charlotte. S. H. B. Stough, former manager of the Rialto theatre, Birmingham, Ala., has been appointed by him assistant manager of the Broadway in Charlotte.

Thomas A. Little, who was last week appointed manager of the local Producers Distributing corporation office to succeed Mrs. Anna H. Sessions, entered into his new duties Monday morning of this week. He has been in Atlanta and in the office since last Friday week, however, familiarizing himself with local conditions and becoming settled in his new home.

Mr. Little comes to Atlanta from Charlotte, where he was manager of the Metro-Goldwyn exchange for nearly five years.

Harold E. Moore, an Atlanta man and son of Jno. L. Moore, optician of this city, announces his plans this week to construct a theatre in Haines City, Fla., where he has been living for the past few years.

Mr. Moore anticipates it will be ready to open on the 1st of January.

A. H. McCarthy, who owned the Mildred theatre, Barnesville, Ga., has this week sold the house to G. H. Goddard, and will take up his future residence in Florida, together with his family. Mr. Goddard will take over the theatre September 1st, it is stated.

J. F. Harris, manager of the Arcade and Airdome theatres in Fort Myers, Fla., spent this week in Atlanta visiting his mother. He was accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Harris, and they drove up to Atlanta in their car.

Dixie Graham, formerly booker at Producer's local exchange, is now traveling Georgia out of Atlanta for the company. Mr. Drum has taken his place as booker in the office here.

L. C. Lowe, who formerly traveled North and South Carolina for Producers Distributing corporation, has been transferred to the Alabama and Tennessee territory.

C. Alexander, who has been with the Pathe office in Charlotte for the past ten years, has resigned this week to go with the Metro-Goldwyn exchange of that city.

R. H. Masterman, formerly advertising sales manager for Famous Players, is now traveling North Carolina for Metro-Goldwyn out of the Charlotte office. Mr. Masterman is an Atlanta man, and graduated at Georgia Tech.

Oscar Oldknow, president of Liberty Film Distributing corporation, accompanied by Rufus Davis, salesman for the company, left last Sunday night for Memphis and Asheville. From there Mr. Davis will proceed to Eatonton, Ga., and Mr. Oldknow will return directly to Atlanta.

Miss Thelma McGinnis has joined the forces of the Educational Film Exchange this week in the capacity of contract clerk.

Ernest Neiman, district representative for Producers Distributing corporation and who has been in Atlanta this week doing special work, left Friday night going on to the Washington exchange.

Charles E. Kessnich, district manager for Metro-Goldwyn corporation, returned to the city Monday, having spent several weeks in the New Orleans territory.

Miss Hannah Blumenfeld of the Educational Film Exchange office, has been in Savannah and Baxley, Ga., this week on her vacation.

Frank L. Alig, auditor of Liberty Film Distributing corporation here, left town last week accompanied by Mrs. Alig for a two weeks' vacation. They go to visit Mrs. Alig's relatives in Illinois.

R. B. Wilby, well-known exhibitor, has permanently moved to Atlanta this week with his family, and has taken offices in the Glenn building.

C. R. Beacham, local branch manager of the First National exchange, and W. E. Calloway, district manager coming up from New Orleans, left for New York last Sunday to attend First National's big convention there.

Denver

SIDNEY D. WEISBAUM, local branch manager of Film Booking Offices of America, Arbitration Board member, and one of the most active and energetic members of the Denver Film Board of Trade, has been promoted. He received notification a few days ago to assume duties as branch manager of the San Francisco office of Film Booking Offices of America. Probably at no other time did the Film Board of Trade and Arbitration Board so keenly feel the loss of a member. Mr. Weisbaum has held various offices in the Film Board of Trade and Arbitration Board membership, and at the present time is one of the outstanding members because of his activities in the Board. Besides being a member of various committees of the Denver Film Board, Mr. Weisbaum was elected last January a member of the joint Board of Arbitration. As a member of this Board, he more than once proved his ability as an arbitrator by his quickness in seeing the issue involved, in noting the merit of the argument presented by either side and suggesting an award which was usually fair and equitable to all parties concerned. Denver's loss is San Francisco's gain.

Bob Lee Piner, new exploitation director for Kinkelstein and Rubin, Minneapolis.

Harry Long, manager of the American Theatre, General Manager of Greater Movie Season Campaign of Denver, has returned after several weeks' visit with relatives and friends in Detroit, Michigan.

Thomas Love, owner and manager of the Hanna Circuit of theatres in Hanna, Wyoming, was a visitor in the city yesterday. He drove to Denver in a new Franklin car which was turned over to a garage for repairs immediately after his arrival. Tom says a cow disputed his right of way.

L. L. Savage, well known inspector booker of Pathe Exchange, Inc., of the Western territory is at present working in the local branch of his organization relieving Jack Scott who is away spending a two week's vacation far up on the Poudre River. En route to Denver, Mr. Savage was aboard the train which was wrecked on the D. & R. G. Railroad near Granite, Colorado. He was one of the passengers who sustained no injuries. Immediately after the wreck, Mr. Savage took a number of pictures which were published by the Denver Post the day following the wreck. These pictures were the best if not the only pictures taken of this accident in which two were killed and many were seriously injured.

Hugh W. Braly, local branch manager of Famous Players-Lasky, has returned to his desk after a two weeks' sales trip into the Wyoming territory.

The following theatres have reopened for business after having been closed most of the summer: Radium Theatre, Nucla, Colorado; G. Chrisman, manager; J. P. McKenna, Salt Creek, Wyoming; W. W. Davis, Fairplay Theatre, Fairplay, Colorado; Angus Linton, Meeteetse Theatre, Meeteetse, Wyoming; R. H. Cunningham, Howard Theatre, Howard, Colorado; and the Tomboy Club, Telluride, Colorado. This last theatre is owned and operated by C. F. Carpenter and is located high in the mountains at an altitude of 12,000 feet. It is probably the highest theatre in the world.

New York and New Jersey

JACOB' FOX, executive of the Fox Amusement Company and successfully operating theatres in Riverside, Beverly and Burlington, New Jersey, has reopened the Bordentonian theatre and renamed it the Fox. The Bordentonian was at one time under the management of the Mercantini Brothers who are local merchants of Bordentown. Their other enterprises taking up too much of their time, the Mercantini's leased the theatre to the United Theatres of America, a Newark corporation that after a short period, gave up the project. Since then the house has been dark up until the time that Mr. Fox added it to his circuit. The whole theatre has been completely renovated and reconstructed, the lobby being entirely changed, new lighting fixtures installed, new scenic equipment, and many other changes made to make the house more comfortable. Feature pictures will be shown with changes on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays, and Saturdays.

Harold Blumenthal, formerly connected with the Capitol theatre at Passaic, N. J., is at present doing all the purchasing for the New Rivoli, Patterson, N. J.

Keith's Jersey City theatre, always a first run picture and vaudeville house, has for the first time in it's career, gone on a second run basis.

Dr. Harris, who at one time operated the Capitol theatre, Passaic, N. J., which was bought by the Fabians, is reported as negotiating for a theatre in Jersey City.

Friends of Bob Horn, Pathe Brooklyn salesman, will regret to hear of the severe illness of Mrs. Horn who is suffering from an attack of lockjaw.

Ned Malouf, formerly connected with the New York Fox exchange, is now covering the Bronx for Pathe.

Sobelson and Tanhauser have recently received a second deposit on the sale of their Strand theatre in Jersey City. The purchasers are contemplating tearing down the old structure and rebuilding a 2000 seat house on the same site.

Here is more evidence of the popularity of the Democratic Nominee for Mayor of the City of New York, "Jimmie" Walker, among the local film trade. The film salesmen have recently formed an association to further his cause. Milton Kronacher, city salesman for Pathe has lately become a member of the committee.

The City theatre, Union City, N. J., will open September the 7th under the new management of J. J. Goely. And by the way, Union Hill and West Hoboken are now known as Union City.

It is reported that Bound Brook, N. J. is being given the eagle eye in connection with a new theatre site and that Jos. Stern is the owner of the eye. Mr. Stern operates at least ten theatres at the present time and it is further reported that his company plan to build about fourteen new houses in the Northern part of New Jersey.

Several more local theatre openings are reported this week. Loew's Alhambra in New York City opened on Tuesday and will change its policy. In the past the Alhambra has been devoted to vaudeville and stock and it will now run feature pictures. The Woodrow, at Wilson Ave., and Decatur St., Brooklyn, and operated by Abraham Manglin, started a full time schedule on August 31st. The Woodrow has been running on a three a week. The Crown theatre, Ditmas Ave., Brooklyn, will also go on full time September 3d. The Kinema, Rosenweig and Katz' new house at Pitkin Ave. and Berryman St., Brooklyn, will have its opening September the 4th.

And here is a piece of news—Filmland at Church and Nostrand Ave., Brooklyn, has at last been completed and will have its opening this month. Fred Dollinger, formerly connected with the Claremont and Our Civic theatres in Richmond Hill, will be the manager of this house. Filmland has been under construction for about two years or more.

L. Gold, formerly with the Newkirk theatre, Newkirk Ave., Brooklyn, is the new owner of the Park at 451 East 169th St., Mr. Gold is doing considerable remodeling at nights, after shows.

Suchman Bros. opened their Hughes theatre, 189th St., Bronx, on Saturday, August 29th and the Tip Top, on Wilson Ave., Brooklyn, operated by the M. Heisler Amusement Co., will open this week Friday.

Miss Fannie Leighston, of the Select theatre, Pitkin Ave., Brooklyn, has gone to the mountains for a vacation.

Al Friedlander of the Garden theatre on New Utrecht Ave., Brooklyn, is back on the job again after spending a pleasant vacation up in Greene County.

Harry Bernstein, manager of Red Seal's New York Exchange, announced this week three additions to his sales force and a new territorial division, made necessary, according to his statement, by expansion of business.

As a consequence of this move, Chester Vanderbilt is covering Long Island; Harry Fogarty has charge of the New York division; S. Rubenstein is covering Brooklyn territory, and John Duffy is handling New Jersey.

Syd Falk, formerly manager of the Brandt Bros. Carleton theatre on Flatbush Ave., Brooklyn, is now the manager of the Cumberland, one of the Brandt circuit. The New Carleton is expected to be ready during the early part of December.

Cincinnati

MR. and Mrs. L. O. Davis, leading exhibitors of Hazard, Ky., are to be congratulated over the arrival of a new theatre manager in the family. Mr. Davis is already laying plans for a new theatre.

J. N. Gelman, returned from a trip to Lexington, Ky., where he claims to have made a rather profitable deal with J. B. Elliott, leading exhibitor of the blue grass city.

Katheryn Flavin formerly of the Famous Players organization in this city is now connected with the organ department of the Wurlitzer Chicago offices.

The Overlook Theatre will open early in November. This theatre is situated on one of Cincinnati's most beautiful hills and will be one of the most modern of houses of the suburban district.

Till Heichel, the ever smiling young lady who greets all visitors at the Cincinnati Theatre Equipment Co., returned from a two weeks' vacation in the Kentucky woods.

J. C. Fishman, general sales manager for Standard spent several days in the city going over the new product with local manager Nate Lefkowitz.

Abe Hyman, of the Hyman interests of W. Va., was a welcome visitor to Film Row last week.

Howard Frankel, Columbus exhibitor, was seen in Coshocton, O., for a few days recently and it looks very much as if the latter metropolis of central Ohio is to have a new theatre.

Forrest Hathaway, former salesman for Vitagraph is now traveling for Metro Goldwyn.

Al Kaufman, for the past two years and a half exploiteer for Metro Goldwyn has resigned from this firm. His immediate connections are not known at present but it has been intimated that he will be stationed in Detroit.

J. S. Davis of the Westland theatre, Portsmouth, O., was a visitor at film row last week.

John Kaiser, Jr., of the Royal theatre, Chilicothe, O., spent several days around film row.

J. F. McConnell of the Tripoli theatre, Mt. Washington, O., made his weekly pilgrimage to the Broadway Film building last week.

Gus Heichelman of the Glenway Price Hill was another suburban exhibitor to visit the boys at the film building.

The Opera House at Logan, O., was destroyed by fire last week. C. E. Oberly was the manager.

The Southern Ohio Golf Tournament held between the Exchange men and Exhibitors was pulled off Friday, August 28th at the Avon Fields, Cincinnati. A dinner at the Swiss Gardens followed the tournament. The winners of the affair were: 1st, Geo. Brown, manager of the Colonial theatre, Bluefield, W. Va., winning the silver trophy donated by Mike Silverglade, former local exhibitor, 2nd prize a traveling bag went to Lon Muchmore, manager of Associated Producers; 3rd prize, a traveling toilet set, went to C. E. Peppiatt, Famous Players manager; 4th prize, a dozen golf balls, went to Floyd Lewis, district manager for Asso. Nesbitt, salesman for F. B. O.

Alice Calhoun, loaned by Warner Bros. to Jesse J. Goldburg for one special Independent Pictures Corp. production.

CONSTRUCTION & EQUIPMENT DEPARTMENT

Selecting a Theatre Organ and Organist

Instrument Must Be of Special Design; Artist of Proper Training

By W. Meryle Hammond, Organist

THE exhibitor, who is planning on installing an organ in his theatre would do well to talk with some good theatre organist and be advised as to makes, tonal quality, ease of manipulation, etc. But for the benefit of the exhibitor who finds this impossible, I will say that there are a great number of firms who manufacture organs, but only a few who specialize in theatre organs. It would hardly be a wise act to install an organ designed expressly for church work in a theatre, for a great number of essential things would be lacking, such as drums, tambourine, wood block, wind siren, fire gong, bells, xylophones, etc., and also many sets of pipes which were designed especially for use in the theatre. All of these would in turn be just as far out of place in a church as they are essential to the theatre.

When installing the organ, great care should be taken to be positive that the organ boxes—the rooms where the organ proper is placed—are absolutely moisture proof. Nine-tenths of organ troubles can be traced to moisture either in the boxes or the console. Many use heavy building paper and wall board, but it is far better to be on the safe side and have the boxes plastered.

Immediately after the organ is installed, a wise manager would put an automatic heating unit in each box, thereby assuring himself that the organ would not drop out of tune on the first cold night that comes along.

The console should be placed in a position where the organist will have a good view of the screen at all times, and above all, where he can hear. Some consoles have been placed in such a position that the organist cannot really tell how loud he is playing and has to depend upon his knowledge of the stops to determine whether he is about to tear the house to pieces or whether he is playing too softly. If the boxes are three or four feet in front of him and eight, ten or more feet above him, you could not expect him to hear the true tones of the instrument, for the sound would first have to travel to the back of the house and return to him, thereby losing much of its volume. The console should be placed at least twenty feet away from the boxes, if they are on either side of the theatre parallel with it and facing the front. However, if they are in the ceiling, throwing the sound downward and outward, it would not be necessary to place them so far. Ten feet would be ample.

W. Meryle Hammond.

But no matter how fine an instrument you may buy, you might just as well have a tin pan, if you do not have an organist to play it.

The Organist

There are plenty of people who call themselves organists, but there are not so many who really are.

There is the person who calls himself an organist because he can play the piano nicely. He takes a few lessons on the "king of instruments," learns the fundamentals of pedaling and organ playing in general, and hangs out his shingle labeled "Organist." When he plays a picture, he uses all the popular music available, fakes a few chords for accompaniment, puts in a few pedal notes now and then, and blunders around melody with about three changes in registration in the process of an evening. He does not know that such a thing as synchronization exists. He may have the nucleus, but that's all.

There is the person who was quite a sensation as a church and concert organist and whom attractive salaries have lured into the interpretive field. He plays wonderfully, it is a pleasure to hear him. But he does not understand when atmosphere stops and action begins. If he is playing "A Dream" and the villain captures the beautiful young heroine and makes way with her, he will calmly finish his "dream," apparently quite unconscious of the fact that the scene is quite dramatic. He cannot understand what all those traps were ever put on an organ for, and he abhors popular and jazz music, either because he can't play it or on general principles. He does not realize that popular dance music has its place in the theatre, as well as classical.

Then there is one who eats confections while on the job.

You want none of these! You want an honest to goodness organist—one who can deliver the goods and does it!

He plays really beautifully. You want to choke the villain when he captures the heroine, and just as they are about to drive the car off a steep cliff, you grab your seat and almost scream. And when the car finally runs off the cliff, after a thrilling chase, and the hero has captured his Lady Fair, you hear a deep rumble as the car starts falling and a dull thud as it strikes.

You hear the fat man in the comedy laugh so gayly that you cannot suppress your emotions, and when he sees a bevy of pretty young girls walking down the avenue, you hear him say, "Oh Baby."

Your organist never eats in the pit, there is never anyone there gossiping with him. He doesn't watch the clock and he isn't afraid to practice. He's not the least bit afraid to start working ahead of time or quit after time and you can find him at the theatre almost all hours of the day. He does not play an organ in a theatre just to earn his bread, but because he loves it.

You sit down to see a new programme. You shed a few tears over some tragic scene and then you're laughing at grandfather's peaceful snoring, at the rooster crowing, and the mule braying. You get up and go to your office and say, "That's the best programme we've had in a long time, it ought to draw the crowd." But you were unconscious of the music. Why? Because the organist was good. He was tempered with feeling and knew how to portray it. He knew synchronization and knew many of the tricks of his profession.

That is the kind of an organist you want. He is always a live wire and it is ones like him, who are making our profession and who mean something to it. The others will not last, they will drop by the wayside, for their days are numbered.

West Coast Theatres, Inc. Open West Coast Theatre at San Bernardino, Cal.

WITH a decorative motif that is artistically beautiful in all its detail, a large stage with equipment unexcelled in any theatre of its size in the country and many other features including the little niceties for the comfort of its patrons the West Coast theatre at San Bernardino, California, opened recently by West Coast Theatres, Inc. stands as a model of twentieth century ingenuity.

This theatre is part of the Platt building in San Bernardino and the opening of the theatre and the building occurred simultaneously. A large gathering attended the opening the visitors including all the prominent officials of West Coast Theatres, Inc. and most of the representative citizens of San Bernardino. The speakers program was under the direction of the San Bernardino Chamber of Commerce. Mayor Holcomb was the principal speaker and A. M. Bowles, General Manager of the theatre company responded.

The appointments of the house are elaborate in every respect, with costly drapes, furnishings, lighting effects and decorative features. A large and elegantly furnished mezzanine floor provides ample lounging space for those who desire to rest prior to entering the auditorium.

Its policy calls for a three per week change, with high calibre pictures, elaborate stage presentations, produced by Fanchon and Marco, production experts of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., and two days of the week devoted to high class vaudeville bills.

San Bernardino is a city of 35,000, and the acquisition of this show-house at once places this city among the prominent theatrical communities of Southern California. The theatre is under the direction of Gore Bros., Ramish, and Sol Lesser, and the building and completion of the theatre, was under the personal supervision of M. Gore, president. Mr. H. L. Hartman is in personal resident charge under the supervision of General Manager Bowles.

Capitol Machine Co. Market Miniature Projector

THE Capitol Machine Company was host to the motion picture trade press at a luncheon given at the Princeton Club, Friday, August 21.

Arthur Dunn, president of the corporation and prominent in local business enterprises, presided at the table and gave an interesting talk on the history of the organization and called attention to the tremendous field that is open to a machine of this kind.

Improvements in the machine made by the company and a tie-up with the National Trailer service were announced at the luncheon. The negative is to be developed at the Claremont Laboratories with whom the Capitol Machine Company is affiliated.

Walter E. Greene, President of the Claremont Laboratories, and well known in the film trade is Vice-president of the company. Julius Frankenberg, also well known, is another Vice-president.

Other officers and directors are: G. F. Zimmer, Milton H. Hall of the Mt. Vernon Trust Co.; Albert Banzhaf, connected with the United Artists Corp.; J. Walter Barnett, of the Lake Torpedo Boat Co.; Geo. C. Beach, of the Southwestern Utilities Co.; R. Henry Depew, Carlos Gardiner, of the Guarantee Trust Co.; A. Monson, of the Universal Stamping Co.; James Montgomery Irving and Frank K. Nebeker.

Zimm Theatre to Have Monsoon Cooling System

The Zimm theatre, at Winfield, Kansas, is continually under improvement, to make it more comfortable for its patrons. The latest addition is to be a great fan system which will change the air in the theatre every minute.

The system consists of two five foot fans working together. They are propelled by a five horse motor.

Color Vision and Screen Borders

A SOURCE of much controversy among parties in the motion picture projection field has been the determination and selection of a suitable border for the illuminated picture on the screen. Common practice now consists of surrounding the lighted picture area with a jet black border unrelieved by any light or color so as to secure maximum contrast between the illuminated picture and the field outside of it.

This of course serves the purpose when comparing the picture area as a whole with the background but when the detail of the picture itself, as represented by the black and white tones are considered a serious loss of tonal effects are experienced not to mention other detrimental effects of which eyestrain is only one.

This entire subject of screen brightness and background contrast together with some interesting information on color vision in general is rather carefully explained in a paper by Dr. K. C. D. Hickman, presented before the Royal Photographic Society of England and which was published in the July issue of the Photographic Journal (English).

The entire paper is so interesting that it is being reprinted here in the hopes that some further light may be shed on the subject of screen surroundings on which the Martin Illuminated Border, incidentally, bears a direct relation.

Dr. Hickman gives as the first consideration "the structure of the eye and the elementary facts of vision."

Vision in General

Practically everyone is familiar with diagrams showing a cross section of the eye. The eye may be considered as a spherical camera having a lens of variable aperture at one pole (end) and the retina, or human equivalent of the photographic plate, at the other. Whereas the lens is small in relation to the sphere, the retina covers a large region and collects light from a wide spherical angle. On inspection it appears to be divided into three concentric zones. A large outside surrounding region, a smaller inside area called the yellow spot, and a very small central zone called the fovea. The units of structure of the retina surface are of two kinds, and have been called the rods and the cones.

Two Kinds of Vision

If these physical structures have any significance at all, we can conclude at once that visual perception occurs in three regions and is of two kinds. It is a matter of common experience that the outside peripheral region sees with poor definition and color sensitiveness, but is very alive to contrast and change of position. A change in brightness of movement to the side makes one turn the head immediately, even though the disturbing factor has not been recognized in shape or color. The next region, the yellow spot, is the zone of good color sensitiveness and general definition; it is the part used to recognize groups of letters in reading the perspective of small objects. In concentrating on any given letter, however, the rest of the word fades into insignificance, and the third region, the fovea, comes into play with its most critical resolving power of all.

That visual perception is of two kinds and can be demonstrated equally well by reference to other happenings of common experience. The classic examples cited in text books, are sunrise and sunset. (This was described once before in full by the Editor in discussing the general characteristic of vision.) In the blaze of daylight objects suggest their full brilliance of light, shade and color. As the illumination dies, though light and shade and form remain unaltered, objects become grayer and color vanishes. Let daylight be extinct and a full moon reign over the scene. The moon, perhaps, is silvery yellow, the sky purple black, with clouds of various pale hues drifting by. But the landscape, once so full of color, is now a study in monochrome (a single color).

The detail is sharp and full of contrast, except when looked at directly. Who has not passed from a dark hall into a brilliant moonlit night and exclaimed that it is light enough to read, and on trying, found that even large newspaper print fails to reveal its legend? Therefore, though there is an impression of detail on peering directly the structure vanishes in a blur.

Pursuing our moonlight adventure further, we enter a small hut having its only window facing North. Standing well within and viewing the window, we see an apparently bright picture framed in blackness. Glancing away, the floors and walls nearby appear the deepest visible grey, fading to impenetrable darkness in the corners; yet we know there is light of some sort even in the farthest crevices—in daytime their contents would be visible, and they are receiving the same proportion of light from the window by night. It is merely that we are unable to perceive light when it is below a certain intensity (usually called the threshhold of vision—Ed.) We see that there are two well marked threshold phenomena: firstly, the threshold of vision when faint light becomes just visible; secondly, the threshhold when color makes its appearance. These are both phenomena of the dark—adapted eye—that is, the eye in which the sensitivity of the retina and the diameter of the iris opening have been increased by resting in a dim light.

Action of the Eye

We have mentioned that in twilight vision, although detail appears abundant, it does not increase on close inspection. This is because the dark adaptation only occurs for the outer region of the retina; the central fovea, which is always used for detail inspection, is night blind.

To return again to considerations of relative brightness, suppose we trace the reaction of the eye to light from the least visible to the greatest physically attainable brightness. Disregarding color, this could be done by viewing a metal-filament lamp in a dark room and increasing the current from zero to its maximum. The experiment was performed quantitatively by Abney by controlling the luminosity of two adjacent photometric fields. It will be simpler for us to consider the metal-filament lamp. When it is made to glow with its least visible brightness it is found that its candle-power has to be increased by a comparatively large amount before the eye notices any change. At feeble intensities the eye reacts sluggishly to alteration in brightness. When the brightness of the filament is increased to the order of 1 to 10 foot-candles the eye can detect an alteration with extreme delicacy. Now let the filament be made to glow strongly; the eye has again become insensitive to change; quite large alterations in brightness produce little difference in appearance, except, perhaps in the amount of dazzle. A practical example is the ceiling lamp of a railway carriage reflected from the windows at nighttime. Except that the dazzle is less, the filament appears as bright in the image as in the lamp itself. Yet calculation shows that one may be 20 times as bright as the other.

The Light Curve of the Eye

These facts can be expressed scientifically by plotting apparent increase in brightness against actual increase for a small object. We obtain what is called the gamma curve of the eye which expresses the relation and reaction to stimulus. This is shown in Fig. 1 for white, green, red and blue light. It is interesting to note that green light affects the eye exactly the same as white light but that red and blue lights behave differently. At the foot of the curve it will be seen that

One Thing More

In your modern motion picture house every detail of projection, decoration, ventilation, temperature, seating, has been carefully worked out to make the theatre attractive and comfortable.

But there's one thing more you can do—and it's a real factor from the box office point of view: make sure the picture is printed on Eastman Positive Film, the film that safeguards for the screen the quality of the negative so your public may enjoy it.

Eastman film is identified in the margin by the black-lettered words "Eastman" and "Kodak"

Corner Cases as an Attention Compelling Force in Lobby Logic

By WM. F. LIBMAN, Pres., Libman-Spanjer Corp.

IN the last article, the writer went into the subject of wall cases and mirrors as adjuncts for the perfected lobby. There is still another type of case which is very popular and which is closely allied to the wall case, and that is the corner case. This type of case is used extensively in the very front of the lobby, and is usually attached to pilasters, columns, and pillars in such a manner as to attract the reading public travelling in two directions.

As an attention compelling force, there is hardly a finer medium to invoke the interest of the passer by than the corner case, properly located.

Built in 24, 36, and 48 inch widths, these cases are ideal enclosures in which to display photos, or posters. When placed in advantageous points bordering on the sidewalk or surrounding the pillars of the lobby front, they challenge interest indeed, in fact it has been proven that very few can resist the impulse to stop and peruse the contents of these attractive cases, so curious is the human race, and so alluring is the call of the small, neatly framed and appropriately titled photograph. Which reminds the writer of a little incident which took place some time ago, and which established in the writer's mind the value of the small dignified announcement as compared to the glaring, shrieking ballyho of the nickelodeon type of theatre which is rapidly disappearing.

A certain exhibitor who was operating in a community of the better kind, and who was a confirmed addict of the 6 sheet method of theatre front display, doubted the writer's assertion that in a certain type of house, and in a given neighborhood, an eleven by fourteen inch photograph is more effective in provoking genuine interest than is the case with a large poster. So heated did our debate become, that nothing less than an actual demonstration would swerve either of us from our respective grounds. So two opposite corners of the theatre front were chosen. On one of these corners a large poster depicting the usual pictorial matter was placed, while on the opposite corner, in a neat frame, was inserted a "still" taken from an actual scene in the feature with an appropriate explanatory title below it.

We both (the exhibitor and the writer) stood, watches in hand, anxious to test out our respective beliefs. To the exhibitor's surprise, fully ninety per cent of the people who showed any interest in the theatre front at all stopped in front of the small framed photograph, either to study the scene it depicted, or to read the title it contained, while none stopped at all to study the poster, contenting themselves with a glance as they passed it by.

Any advertising man will agree that the best mediums of advertising are judged by their circulation, and reader interest as they call it. In the case of the photo vs. the poster, the photo not only caused people to stop, but it caused them to read, which is the culmination of the advertiser's ambitions.

This case of course would not hold true everywhere, for certainly the exhibitor who hopes to attract the attention of the moving public that passes his front on street cars, taxis, autos, etc., must do so with a larger medium than a photo.

The writer once chided the manager of a theatre that was operating in a congested section of one of our larger cities. "Why do you spoil the front of your theatre with those awful crudely painted banners?" I asked him. "Why not some neat, dignified photo frames with titles explaining each photographed scene?"

He looked at me rather sadly I thought and said, "I'd do all that you say Bill, for I believe in it, but there's only one reason why I don't do it—my patrons can't read!"

So after all there are some cases where the poster banner must wave, but not many.

Then there is the new type of hand painted poster, that is beginning to enjoy its period of prosperity. In the larger theatres of the big key cities, these posters are really works of art, done by commercial artists of recognized ability. These high grade cards or posters are relatively expensive.

Many small exhibitors seeing the part that these attractive cards play in the big house lobby, resolve to follow suit. But where the big exhibitor can pay an artist $5 to $50 the little exhibitor pays his artist 50 cents, and surely the results are not comparable. Therefore it is far better to depend upon a good wall case or corner case, filled with several carefully chosen pictures, than to burlesque the feature by advertising it with a poorly or cheaply executed poster that will repell instead of attract.

The exhibitor should be careful of the arrangement of his lobby frames and of the pictures, photos or announcements that go into them. No matter how beautiful the lobby frames or cases may be that beauty is immediately negatived if the porter, or janitor, or some other simple soul is given carte blanche in the matter of filling the frames and case to overflowing with photos and pictures. Too many photos, like too much type in an advertisement, confuses and discourages the patron or reader.

Grand Riviera Theatre Opened by C. W. Munz Enterprises

DETROIT theatre goers this week had their first glimpse of the new Grand Riviera theatre at Grand River and Joy Road, the million dollar amusement house which was erected by the C. W. Munz theatrical enterprises.

The Grand Riviera is something that is different. The decorative scheme has been so perfectly carried out that the audience seems to be sitting in a beautiful outdoor park, with charming gardens on either side and the blue sky overhead.

Seating 3,000 persons, the auditorium has been modeled on the lines of an Italian garden nestling under the blue Mediterranean sky. Above the audience is the moonlight shining across the blue vaulted dome which has been so decorated that its extent seems limitless. On the right side is an Italian palace garden with a small temple building while above the whole are twinkling stars and moving clouds creating a complete illusion.

In front of the auditorium rises the proscenium which was conceived as a triumphal arch with supporting columns roofed with Roman tile mansard and a stone balustrade. The entire structure of this arch is richly ornamented in polychrome, lending a holiday atmosphere to the scene. Even above the proscenium is the sky and the impression of nature which coupled with the refrigerating and ventilating facilities of the theatre will create an atmosphere of the spacious outdoors.

The most effective examples of classical architecture to be seen in Europe have been faithfully copied in the design of the theatre. The unique lobby which represents a rotunda some 50 feet wide and 80 feet high has an interesting dome executed in rough texture plaster decorated in true Italian polychrome fashion and has a faience tile floor. Many of the motifs in this lobby are taken from the Villa Cambiasco and the doorheads are from those of St. Peter's in Rome.

The main foyer is richly carpeted and has a heavy Italian texture plaster wall, ornamented pilasters and a vaulted ceiling, giving the general effect of a stuccoed, cloistered arcade. Interesting detail of both these rooms are the handwrought iron gates, the wall lanterns and distance mirrors.

The policy is to be the same as in the other Munz houses, which show moving pictures and vaudeville. Hugo Kalsow, well known orchestra leader has charge of the music.

Plans Filed for New Buffalo Theatre

PLANS for the new motion picture theatre to be built at 1588-1598 Genesee street, including seven stores and offices, have been filed with the bureau of buildings in Buffalo. The new house will be built by Barney Vohwinkel, 2886 Main street, who has operated the Oriole theatre near the site for many years. When completed, the house will be leased by the Shea Amusement company. According to Mr. Vohwinkel the theatre and stores will cost $350,000. The seating capacity will be 1710. The frontage on Genesee street will be 168 feet. The house will have a depth of 32 feet.

Architect's prospective rendering of the new Ambassador theatre, St. Louis, which is being erected by Skouras Bros. Enterprises.

Walter C. Simon Discusses Music and Pictures

WALTER C. SIMON, organist and music writer, whose works have been published by many of the leading publishers of this country, and who claims to have written the first original score for a motion picture for the Kalem Company in 1911, in commenting on the relation of music to pictures says:

"A photoplay is enhanced 50 per cent by a good musical score. It is only a matter of time now when all pictures will have their individual score rather than having the theatre's musical director make up his program from published numbers which are suggested by a cue sheet supplied by the producer of the film."

the eye remains sensitive to blue light when red has long become invisible (at low intensities). At high intensities the reverse is true.

This unequal response to different colors has an important bearing on the apparent change of hue of a neutral object when the intensity of illumination is varied. Take any object which ordinarily appears white, therefore reflecting all colors at certain intensities. In diminishing illumination the red light reflected by the white object will become invisible rapidly, the green normally, and the blue less than normally; the white object will appear bluish as it dulls. Conversely it will appear yellow as the intensity continually raised. It has, therefore become natural to associate yellowness with brightness and blueness with night. In fact, the present Lord Rayleigh has shown that the objective color of the night sky is yellow, that the light coming from it is composed of radiations (wave lengths) which, if as bright as daylight would appear yellow and contain very little blue. As yellow is invisible to the dark-adapted eye, the actual subjective color of the night sky is blue.

Color, then, is largely an illusion, and the illusion produced under one lighting condition is not necessarily the same as under another. It is an experimental fact that the hue, but not the saturation, of any color can be imitated by the addition of three primary colors, red, green and blue. This has most naturally led people to suppose that there are three primary color-receiving mechanisms in the eye, spoken of as the three color sensations. It is another fact that any shade whatsoever can be imitated by the further addition of white, or the virtual addition of black.

Katherine C. Melcher Receives A. A. G. O. Degree

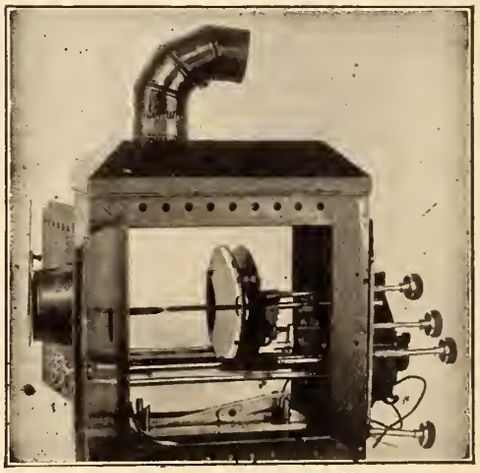
Miss Katherine C. Melcher who studied the organ under Wilhelm Middleschulte and Harrison Wild of Chicago has been elected an associate member of the American Guild of Organists. Miss Melcher, who was the first organist in Michigan also studied under Dr. Edward E. Manville, President of the Detroit Institute of Musical Art, for her A. A. G. O. degree.

Thos. C. Regan to Erect New Motion Picture Studio

Thomas C. Regan has purchased five acres of ground in Van Nuyes, a town close to Hollywood, and has started the erection of a motion picture studio. According to announcement, the plant will be fully equipped and will cost in the neighborhood of $150,000.

Besides all modern equipment for the studio proper, there will be constructed on the back lot several large streets of various kinds. These will include a New England street, a Spanish, a Northwest Cabin street and typical Western town. Other types of outdoor sets will be erected later, according to the needs of the producers using the studio.

Mr. Regan will use the studio for his own production work but space will be available for other producers.



New House to Succeed Pergola, Allentown

Work will be started in the late summer or early fall on a new theatre to succeed the present Pergola theatre, in Allentown. James K. Bowen, owner of the theatre, desires to make way for a new hotel which he is promoting and which is to go on the present theatre site, and he desires also to have a more modern theatre. The new picture house will be erected on a plot which he has just purchased at the rear of the present Pergola, and which will front at Nos. 28 to 34 North Ninth street. The frontage is 104 feet and the lot is 230 feet deep.

Why Exhibitors Rely on Simplex

The Simplex Projector was designed by engineers who based their plans on the result of years of study and experience in Motion Picture Projection work.

These men fitted the most modern principles of machine design to the specific requirements of perfect projection and built with a view to maximum efficiency and minimum operating costs.

In the actual construction of each Simplex Machine every precaution is taken to insure that each part conforms in quality of material and fractional measurement with the specifications laid down by the designers of the machine.

The correctness of design and the detail thoroughness of construction is evidenced by the unanimous approval given Simplex Projectors by exhibitors in all parts of the world.

Says Tom Magruder of Kansas,

"I think Simplex Machines are in a class by themselves. I have used other makes, but none of them comes up with the Simplex for a steady and true picture, and I think they are the most durable machines on the market today."

THERE is no single factor that contributes so much to the quality of a screen presentation as the projector itself. If the projector is correctly designed and conscientiously constructed it will show clear, steady and uninterrupted pictures.

The theatre that continually features good projection becomes known as a reliable source of good entertainment. Casual visitors become steady patrons. And steady patronage is the secret of success for the majority of Motion Picture houses.

Simplex Projectors have won their place of leadership because of their dependability and good performance. Not only in exclusive characteristics of design, but also through exceptional sturdiness of construction has the Simplex Projector proved its superiority.

Buy your projector from the standpoint of an investment. Consider performance, soundness of construction, cost of upkeep, repair facilities and the service back of the machine—your choice will inevitably be a Simplex.

Metro-Goldwyn Has The Pictures

Mr. Exhibitor

LAST Wednesday night the writer attended the premiere of Eric Von Stroheim's "The Merry Widow." It is with a sense of real satisfaction that I can truthfully say it is the best Metro-Goldwyn picture yet released, and the finest thing Von Stroheim has ever done.

Which brings me to the point of these few words. Metro-Goldwyn has an exceptionally fine product this season. If one is to judge from their pictures presented the last few weeks at the Capitol, exhibitors will do well to get in the swim, pick up the pencil and sign on the muchly-publicised dotted line. "Pretty Ladies," a real picture; "The Unholy Three," another; "Sun Up," still another; all box-office attractions which have been built with an eye to truly please the public. To my mind, Metro-Goldwyn is far and away in the lead with presentations to date. There will be a merry little war between Paramount and First National to see whose product plays the big time, for their pictures are, as a general run, good entertainment, yet it seems that the real race between Famous and First should be to see which company can put out as consistent a group of winners as Metro-Goldwyn has to date.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company

Dear Mr. Libbin:-

Juet a few lines to tell you that the Style 235 Wurlitzer Hope Jones Unit Pipe Organ is daily proving it's worth at our box office.

A good pipe organ such as this one, certainly goes a long way in putting over the "ever so often very ordinary picture" that every theatre must out of necessity present. It is an investment that produces handsome dividends, the better the organ the safer the investment.

To me a pipe organ occupies a place in the theatre that cannot be filled otherwise - no other combination of musical instruments can interpret the soul of the picture so effectively.

Very truly youre,

Joseph Conrad was the greatest writer of adventure stories of the sea that ever lived. "Lord Jim" is his recognized masterpiece — a book loved by hundreds of thousands and known to the whole world.

Paramount is making a marvelous adventure picture of "Lord Jim", seething with action and drenched with romance. A classic that lowbrows and highbrows alike will proclaim great. The peer of any sea picture ever filmed, bar none!

Those who haven't read Conrad are not well read. Those who don't intend to read him are of a foolish and slovenly mental habit. As for those who are engaged in reading him—for the first time—how I envy them!
—Gouverneur Morris.

or seeing a picture of his story "Lord Jim"

Here, surely, if ever, is genius—the possession by a divine spirit of man's earthly clay.
—Hugh Walpole.

it takes genius to make a super-special

The only writing of the last twelve years that will enrich the English language to any extent.
—John Galsworthy.

and the only Conrad picture on the screen

One of my chief claims to distinction in the world is that I wrote the first long appreciative review of Joseph Conrad's work.
—H. G. Wells.

Mr. Wells will review the picture

Years ago I came across a Conrad story. I read the story and re-read it and thought I had discovered Conrad. Subsequently I met others—writers themselves in the main—who thought they had discovered him, too.
—Irvin S. Cobb.

Mr. Cobb will discover the picture

After the interminable flood of novels which pours in upon us, how salutary, how refreshing, to come once more upon this wellspring of the real romance!
—John Cowper Powys.

"Lord Jim" is real romance

One comes to Conrad with unspeakable relief—with the feeling that here, at last, is a novelist who understands as the poets do.
—Christopher Morley.

he understands the human heart

In all his novels there is a harmony of tone absolutely orchestral in effect.
—Joseph Hergesheimer.

the harmony of action, love and life is in the picture

He is that unusual thing in modern literature: an unshrinking realist
—J. C. Squire.

"Lord Jim" is thrillingly realistic

There is no one like him; there is no one remotely like him. He sees and describes not merely this man's love or that woman's aspiration, but the blind sweep and devastation of universal forces.
—H. L. Mencken.

such as deluged the love and life of "Lord Jim"

To stand in a Summer-stifled, man-smelling city street and to feel suddenly a fresh salt wind from the far-off pastures of the sea—this is the sensation when one comes upon a book by Joseph Conrad.
—Mary Austin.

the greatest adventure writer of two decades

I know of no contemporary author who can build a scene before the eye as vividly as Conrad, or who can push a character through the door and leave him to speak for himself as Conrad does.
—Meredith Nicholson.

"The Pony Express" world premiere

The Picture of the Hour!

"PONY EXPRESS"

"World premiere of 'The Pony Express' at Imperial Theatre, San Francisco, at $2.50 was most brilliant event in theatrical history. Traffic stopped for blocks for first time in San Francisco amusement history. A complete artistic and financial success. Unanimous opinion of public and newspaper critics alike that 'The Pony Express' is greater picture than 'The Covered Wagon'."

Edward B. Baron, Charles M. Pincus, Jack Partington

"Have been to Imperial Theatre for four performances since premiere and crowds are even more enthusiastic than at opening, if such a thing is possible. Six shows a day and every one a sell-out." Charles Eyton

"'The Pony Express' is a truly great historical picture wonderfully conceived and magnificently done." Senator Samuel Shortridge of California

"The Pony Express' is a vivid picture of the old West and carries one's interest to the point of enthusiasm. The perils of the trail that led to California enhance love for the pioneers, their courage and fortitude." Senator James D. Phelan of California

"'The Pony Express' is a greater picture than 'The Covered Wagon'."

BEGIN HERE

The majority of our first run accounts are sold.

We are "set" in practically every important spot in the United States.

And we haven't played second fiddle to anybody.

Our representation, so far, is as good as the best.

Before long it will be the best.

You know the reason.

It's because, we're not only big, but because we're constantly growing bigger.

Is this exaggeration?

You know it isn't.

We're delivering.

And why are we delivering?

The answer is this:

We know what it's all about.

We're showmen.

We know that an exhibitor has to make money on the attraction he plays—

That in order to do so, he has to show something in his ads., in his electric lights, and on the screen, that draws.

There's such a thing as the public.

We're out to boost ourselves, to increase the stock of our name, and all that, but—

We know that in last analysis, trademark or no trademark, good salesmanship or not, that the thing that a theatre needs is a good show.

We're aggressive, progressive, and we're overlooking no bets.

We cash in on angles.

And our biggest angle is to make you cash in.

That's that.

But to explain.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studio in Culver City, California, is no place to have an afternoon tea.

It's a beehive of industry.

They're scheming things out all day long in that place. And our distributing organization is relaying the results, and adding a finishing touch of service.

For instance, we know the public likes stars.

We went and got 'em.

So that—

There isn't a week that you can't flash a big name in the lights.

Our first pictures of the season have Lon Chaney, Norma Shearer, Lillian Gish, Ramon Novarro, Marion Davies.

"The Unholy Three," (a bigger "Miracle Man").

"A Slave of Fashion" (Clothes).

"Romola" (The Gish Sisters).

"The Midshipman" (You read the front pages).

"Lights of Old Broadway" (Remember "Little Old New York").

"Pretty Ladies" (A Revue in Pictures).

"Never the Twain Shall Meet" (Breaking Records).

Look these over.

Each has a star, each is a good picture, each has an exploitation angle.

And that's our policy.

It's showmanship that brings over Erte, the great fashion creator, and gives his production the title "Paris."

It's a sense of the public that makes us do a picture called "The Mystic" which exposes fake spiritualists with their table-tapping.

It's a knowledge of what pleases the eye that makes us put technicolor sequences in our productions, and do the Sabatini story "Bardelys The Magnificent" entirely in color with John Gilbert as the star.

It's showmanship that inspires such stunts as America's first transcontinental trackless train.

And the opening of "The Merry Widow" on Broadway as a two dollar attraction with the society celebrity Gloria Gould as the managing directress of the theatre.

We have tricks up our sleeve constantly.

As the days wear on we're unfolding them one by one.

For you to cash in on.

So

It's good showmanship for you too, isn't it to hitch your wagon to

More stars than there are in Heaven—

The talk of the industry.

Don't Say "News Reel"

Say KINOGRAMS

One of our exhibitor friends writes to us as follows:-

> "The people of this town in calling up in reference to the shorter subjects refer to your single reel as 'The Kinograms,' which is proof that your subject is becoming more widely known as 'The Kinograms' than 'The News'."

This means that Kinograms has firmly established itself in the public mind as being synonymous with the word "News."

What Better Recommendation Can Kinograms Have Than This?

Another whirlwind action picture!

The young star has packed more punch, more action, more speed into this one than you get in two or three ordinary pictures! He has a story that has all the elements of a Robert Louis Stevenson and a Robinson Crusoe rolled into one and it keeps him fighting, laughing, skylarking, leaping, punching, swarming all over the place.

It's Talmadge at his athletic best and your fans are going to go wild over him!

Another factor that will sell a lot of seats, particularly to your reading public, is the fact that Rupert Hughes, the eminent author, wrote all the titles for this picture.

Dear Mr. Abrams:-

I wanted to take this occasion to congratulate you upon having broken all records at the Adams Theatre on the opening week with the Charlie Chaplin production, "The Gold Rush". This picture played to 8,266 more people on the opening week than "The Hunchback of Notre Dame", which has held the record for attendance at the Adams Theatre ever since its opening , some seven years ago, and I felt that you should know it.

With best wishes, I am,

Sincerely,

John H. Kunsky

Now Get All the Facts On Incandescent Lamp Projection

A handbook on incandescent lamp projection, the most complete ever published, has been prepared by our engineers to give exhibitors unbiased information on this important subject.

The incandescent lamp has many advantages over the arc but it is not recommended for use in every theatre. The types and sizes of theatres that can adopt this method of projection are described in the handbook; comparisons are made between the cost of operating the incandescent lamp and different types of arc lights; detailed descriptions of each part of the optical system is given; complete operating instructions are included and many other important subjects are covered.

Whether or not you are considering installing incandescent lamp projection you will find this book interesting and valuable.

Your copy is ready. Just mail the attached coupon and it will be sent to you promptly without charge or obligation.

VOL. XXXII ALBANY, N. Y., AND NEW YORK CITY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1925 NO. 12

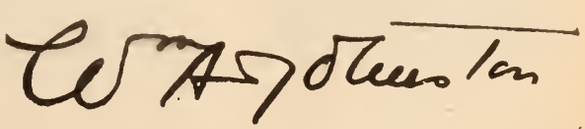
Let the Exhibitor Know It

I HAD a talk with an independent exhibitor the other day, which I will set down here just as it happened. First, let me say that he is a thoroughly experienced exhibitor, gets about a good deal, and is a close reader of the trade papers.

"I want to get your advice," said he, "your very best. And please be very frank. The matter involves all my money and considerable from investing friends; my credit, too.

"My houses (several in number and a new one is building) are now edged in between producer-owned chains. I can hold my own from a management standpoint. But what I want to know is this: can I get enough good pictures and at a live and let live price? A lot of other exhibitors similarly situated must be worrying about the same problem—available product. In fact, I know they are. I talk with them. Of course, the problem differs everywhere. Now, in my case, one of the theatre chains around me is owned by a so-called Independent Company. The pictures of another Independent Company are too high priced for me, much as I would like them. That narrows the field down to, say, two big national distributors and importantly, the State Rights group."

I assured him that to my best knowledge, he could be assured of satisfactory product, adequate in quantity and quality. That his problems were: (1) keen selection and (2) bang-up advertising. Especially the latter. As for product, we went over the pictures available, and he finally agreed with me, and heartily so, that there was plenty to be had and that he could hold his own with it against his competitors. It was evidently a relief to him to arrive at this decision.



"But why," he asked, "don't these independents play up their pictures more forcefully to the exhibitor? Here am I, an average exhibitor, we'll say, only vaguely informed as to their united strength. I don't know, and I'm doubtful. It would pay them, I should think, to go to it and leave no doubt anywhere but that they have got the goods."

The exhibitor is right. His contention has been our contention right along; not merely this season, but every season since the cry of independently owned theatres was raised at the Cleveland Convention. Plenty of pictures—good pictures, were available for every exhibitor that year, and have been every year since then. And there always will be an adequate supply. But the advertising of them has never been such as to convince the exhibitor that this true.

In making this assertion we will, of course, raise the suspicion that we are promoting trade paper advertising. Very well, and, to avoid any argument, we are. But the issue involved is much greater than that of trade papers—all of them combined. It concerns the welfare of several thousand exhibitors and of the entire body of independent producers and distributors.

Their problem is a straight out-and-out business one. Sentimental appeals, banner raising, orations and editorials, knocking the alleged trust, etc., will accomplish nothing. It's a plain case of having the goods and letting the customer know it.

In this issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS we are presenting the announcement of the independent field. It is a goodly line-up. And we have little doubt but that a good many exhibitors will go over it carefully, estimate the pictures offered as to individual worth, and weigh it all as a factor in the new season's market.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

E. C. King, general manager of the Paramount Long Island studios, which are now celebrating their fifth anniversary by working "full speed ahead" on several Paramount pictures.

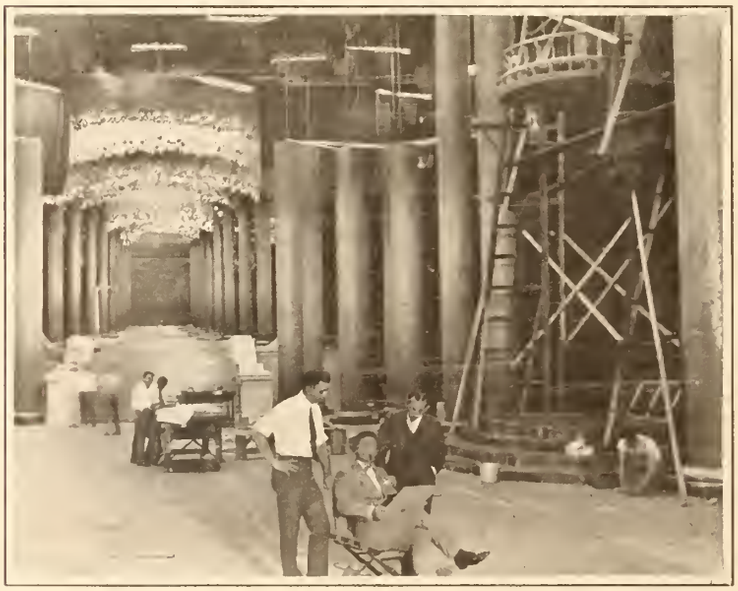
1ST NATIONAL LUNCHEON

AT noon last Tuesday First National gave a luncheon in the International Studio, 128th Street and Second Avenue, to representatives of the trade, daily press and fan magazines. Sam E. Rork was host, assisted by production manager Chester Beecroft. It was a merry and memorable gathering, with the underground wires working incessantly and providing real news, near news and shadowy run rumors of filmland doings for conversation purposes. And it may be said that the conversation ball never stopped rolling, excepting when the guests dutifully observed the silence rule while watching the filming of scenes for "Clothes Make the Pirate."

Leon Errol is the star of this picture, which will be completed in a couple of weeks, with Dorothy Gish and Nita Naldi as two of its leading lights. The consensus of opinion was that First National has a real box office winner here, and that the inimitable Errol's funny stunts will give the fans something to laugh over for a long time to come.

F ENTERTAINS STUDENT MANAGERS

FORTY-THREE members of Paramount's Theatre Managers' Training school had lunch at the Long Island Studio one day last week, and were introduced to a number of screen students who hope to be stars in their own right some time in the glittering future. Assistant manager Wingate escorted the guests around the studio, and showed them the various stages and sets where pictures were in the making.



Lectures were delivered by Jesse L. Lasky and Ralph Block, the entire day being utilized as part of the managerial training course. After six months of study the embryo managers will be stamped O.K. for all practical purposes and receive appointments to posts in all parts of the world.

This is neither a Follies girl nor a Vanities or Scandals beauty—may we introduce Margie Gay, the dainty Alice of the "Alice Comedies" (M. J. Winkler).

Evelyn Brent, F. B. O. star, arrives in New York for a holiday and is met at the station by Frank Leonard, exploiteer, and Harry Osborne, of the ad department.

The first stages of the dream ball setting for "A Kiss for Cinderella" (Paramount), with Herbert Brenon (seated) in conference with J. J. Gain, assistant studio manager, and Julian Fleming, who designed the set.

Several of the Albertina Rasch dancers rehearsing atop the new Steinway building for their prologue to "The Phantom of the Opera" (Universal) at the Astor, New York City.

The Gainsborough lady of the films—Alma Rubens, leading lady of "East Lynne" (Fox), whose cameo profile is the delight of artists.

Finis Fox chats over with Peggy O'Day the series of Secret Service pictures he is writing and supervising for her, to be released through Davis Distributing Division.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Meighan and Lois Wilson (seated) returning on the Leviathan from Ireland after shooting "Irish Luck" (Paramount). (P. & A. Photo).

A violet phosphorescent diamond necklace (whatever that is!) is being worn by Mae Murray in "The Masked Bride" (Metro-Goldwyn), and is the only one in existence.

Lloyd Hughes, who is in the East working in "The Scarlet Saint" (First Nat'l), puts a little punch into the daily workout in the studio gymnasium.

Marylin Mills snapped with Star and Beverly, the two clever horses who will support her in a series of starring vehicles for the Davis Distributing Division

NOT SO DUSTY

KINOGRAMS news reel, released by Educational, was represented by a bunch of cameramen and helpers at the Gold Cup motorboat races, held at Port Washington, L. I. recently. Frank Dalrymple was one of the helpers.

Ray Haroun, with his flyer—"Fulford-by-the-Sea," found at the eleventh hour that he was shy a mechanician. As the rules insist on two men being in each boat, he was calling wildly for aid, when Frank butted in with the simple statement, that, although he didn't claim to rank as a mechanician, he had kept his flivver running for two years. It being any port in a storm, Haroun took him along. They got off to a bad start, but by degrees crept up to fourth place then third, then second—and crossed the finish line. Frank expressed regrets at having lost, but Haroun was satisfied.

It's O.K., "he said. You're the best mascot a driver ever had. With that rotten start I didn't expect to get better than sixh."

TOM MIX PAYS THE BILL

TOM MIX has made good with Boy Scout contingents all over the country, or will, when they hear what he did for Avalon Ship I, several days ago. The government sent along a fine big whaling boat, which was eagerly unpacked by the boys. But gloom came in the shape of a freight bill which took all the wind out of the Seascouts' sails.

Just then Tom's cruiser made port and he stepped ashore, marked the disgusted faces turned toward him and asked what the trouble was. They told him, and a check to cover the intruding bill was promptly forthcoming. Mix says he was a Scout once and hasn't forgotten the "do a good turn daily" slogan.

WEDDING BELLS CHIME

ON September 1st, Miss Lilyan Tashman, Metro-film star, and Edmund Lowe, star of Fox Film Company, were united in marriage at San Francisco, having motored there from Hollywood. The ceremony was performed by Justice of the Peace A. T. Barnett. Sentiment may be said to have urged Mr. Lowe to select San Francisco as the place for tying the nuptial knot, as it was in that city he began his movie career and scored early successes. The bride is a former Follies girl, who made good on the screen, progressing swiftly until she reached her present altitude as head of her own company.

ONLY TWO WINNERS

MEMBERS of the National Committee For Better Films were chary of bestowing decorations on pictures registered in their weekly photoplay guide for week ending September 5. Only two were marked with the coveted "star," these being "Siefried," Ufa Films; and Pathe Review number I, the latter consisting of shots along the Swanee River; glass manufacturing; country life in France; and a dog days novelty. Both were classed under heading—For general audience and special "Family," audience including children of Grammar School age and up.

You've got to be in good trim to keep up with Harold Lloyd, and Jobyna Ralston, leading lady in his first for Paramount release, takes a work-out with Frank Merrill.

Jetta Goudal in a picturesque (and dangerous) looking pose from "The Road to Yesterday" (Producers Dist. Corp.) in which she is being featured under the direction of "C. B."

Yola d'Avril, whose Gallic personality has brightened many features, and who is now appearing in current Christie comedies for Educational release.

John Barrymore, the star, Director Millard Webb, and members of the company engaged in filming "The Sea Beast" (Warner Bros.) from the classic whaling story, "Moby Dick."

STARS' HALL OF FAME

LIFE-SIZED portraits of screen stars by the world's greatest artists to hang in a Hollywood Hall of Fame and edify generations yet unborn! That's the idea sponsored by Sid Grauman, said Hall to be a bully show-place and one of the units in conjunction with his new $5,000,000 theatre, to be erected on Hollywood Square.

Norma Talmadge is the first star to have her portrait painted for this purpose, for whom Howard Christy Chandler was engaged. He will also turn out portraits of Constance Talmadge, Buster Keaton and Joseph M. Schenck, Grauman states that he will bring prominent artists from all parts of the earth, among those already selected being Frederic Beltran-Masses, Zulucaga, noted Spanish painter, Robert Henri, Weyman Adams, Charles Dana Gibson, Seymour Thomas and Joseph Kleitsch. "I fully believe" says Mr. Grauman, "that art lovers and motion picture enthusiasts will come to Hollywood just to see this wonderful art gallery of the brightest lights in filmdom, their personality transferred to canvass by master craftsmen of all time."

We were considering the framing-up of an Art Gallery of editorial personalities, not on canvass, but through the simpler medium of photos, $v per dozen, with crayon portraits thrown in for good measure. But the project is dead! Too much competition, besides we aren't at all sure the fans and art lovers would flock to see 'em. The field is clear for Mr. Grauman.

Colleen Moore, First National star, takes Richard A. Rowland, head of the organization, for a quiet little spin along Hollywood Boulevard. No casualties were reported among the traffic cops of that city.

THE MATERNAL ANGLE

MRS. Emilie Johnson, mother of Emory Johnson, producer and director of the "The Last Edition," is one of Hollywood's genuine screen parents. For Paula Gould, F. B. O.'s astute publicist, informs us that Mrs. Johnson is the author of every scenario used by her son and it is a treat to watch them co-operate on a production.

When they get an idea for a picture they consider it from all points, scribble a legion of notes, and then Mrs. Johnson starts her work. When the script is ready there comes the discussion between mother and son as to the possibilities of stars and supporting cast, the qualities of each "prospect" are freely gone over and finally a settlement made.

An unique pair, none other like them in the industry's production end. That their judgment is excellent is proved by the popularity attained by "The Third Alarm," "In the Name of the Law," and other picturse for which this remarkable mother-and-son combination is responsible.

BEAUTY IN DEMAND

SHE mustn't be over five feet three, nor under five feet. She must not weigh over one hundred and five pounds, nor scale under ninety-five. She must not have passed the twenty-year old mark. She must have studied dancing or have been an artist's model. She must be well formed and have tiny hands and feet.

Send any girl, or girls, you know who can qualitfy under the above specifications to Edmund Goulding, director of "Sally, Irene and Mary" for Metro-Goldwyn, now engaged in selecting a suitable ensemble of beauties for that production. The publicity expert says he needs 'em badly, not that there's any lack of lovely ladies among the "extra" brigade, but applicants must be constructed along certain lines in order to fill the bill. And there aren't as many of these as the innocent bystander might imagine.

Two old-time troupers of the original Biograph stock company meet —Henry B. Walthall and Lionel Barrymore, who talk over old times during the filming of "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work" (Preferred).

TOM MEIGHAN RETURNS

AFTER a month spent in Ireland working on "Irish Luck," his latest Paramount picture, Tom Meighan returned on the Leviathan Monday with Lois Wilson, Director Victor Heerman and twenty technical members of the company. The Lambs chartered a tug and sailed up the bay to welcome the star, who looked hale and hearty after his sojourn in the Emerald Isle.

They certainly made a big fuss over Thomas on the old sod. Ten thousand persons assembled to greet him when he reached Dublin and the thoroughfares of that ancient city were packed with interested spectators watching him work in the street scenes. Also, he hob-nobbed with the next thing to royalty or as the Celts would put it, "something a great dale betther," in the person of President Cosgrave of the Irish Free State Altogether a memorable trip for the star and his associates, the events of which they aren't likely to forget in a hurry.

THE NEW FILMS

OF the five features on Broadway this week First National's "Graustark," at the Capitol; and Universal's "The Phantom of the Opera" at the Astor; stand well in the lead. In "Graustark" Norma Talmadge, as the lovely Princess Yetive, wooved and won in the face of death and dangers by a dashing young American hero, gives a really enchanting performance, while Eugene O'Brien as the aforesaid gallant, boosts the Stars and Stripes with George Cohanesuqe vigor, brushes aside enemies like flies as a film champion should do, and emerges from the imbroglio triumphant possessor of the blood-royal lady.

It is twenty years since George Barr McCutcheon wrote "Graustark" and started a host of imitators turning out fiction yarns of mythical countries with similar settings. A lengthy period for the most popular best-seller of its day to lie in seclusion so far as the screen is concerned! But the wait was worth while, considering the general excellence and commercial value of the film version. Director Dimitri Buchowetzki had fine melodramatic material to work on and made the best of his opportunities by surrounding the story with a wealth of colorful atmosphere, scenery and sets that for sheer appeal of beauty has few equals today.

Chaps, bandana and the other cowboy trappings—and the familiar pancake hat—make up Buster Keaton's outfit in "Go West" (Metro-Goldwyn), the latest picture to include in its cast a large herd of cattle—this time for comedy effect.

"The Phantom of the Opera" is best described as the first super-mystery picture, even as "The Covered Wagon" ranked as the initial super-Western. Universal's widely advertised feature puts over the horror stuff in fine gruesome style, with Lon Chaney's grisly, inhuman make-up of grotesque ugliness sending chills down the spectator's spines, aided and abetted by the singularly fantastic trend of the narrative. The sets are gorgeous in the extreme, that of the celebrated Paris Opera House is a wonderfully faithful reproduction of the original edifice and the colored sequences of Faust, the ballet and masked ball are miracles of prismatic splendor. The acting is as good as might well be expected with such prominent players as Mary Philbin, Norman Kerry, Arthur Edmund Carewe, Snitz Edwards, Gibson Gowland, John Sainpolis, Virginia Pearson, and others helping that arch-creator of weird effects—Mr. Chaney, to promote goose-flesh among the onlookers. Certainly Universal has a genuine ghostly thriller here that should make even the hard-boiled fans sit up and shiver.

"The Golden Princess," at the Rivoli, is a good average Western melodrama and nothing more. Billed as an adaptation of a Bret Harte story, it doesn't contain a single line, scene or situation fathered by that author. But viewed merely as a straight screen Western it gets O.K. Betty Bronson, far-famed heroine of "Peter Pan," is starred, but her role is such an inconsequential thing that it doesn't throw much light on the question of her ability to handle a real grown-up part requiring dramatic intensity and emotional power. All that is asked of Betty in this production is to smile, look pleasing and piquant, and with her youth, beauty and engaging personality that is an easily accomplished task.

"Wake up!" says Kit Guard to Al Cooke. "It's time we were at the F. B. O. studio cutting up for 'The Adventures of Mazie.'" "G'wan," says Cooke, "we ain't shootin' scenes by moonlight."

The Colony presents "The Coming of Amos" a love romance with many melo punches which ought to do well enough at the box office. Rod La Rocque, as the hero, impersonates a young Australian shepe-rancher who lands on the Riviera equipped with uncouth garb and glorious disregard of social etiquette. But Rod brings a bomerang along, not exactly the sort of thing one would expect to figure as an aid to lovemaking, yet his expertness in hurling this singular weapon helps him mightily in winning the affections of a beautiful, mysterious Russian Princess. No—he doesn't bash her with the native war-tool, in cave-man fashion, even a sheep-rancher from the Antipodes would scarcely revert to such primitive methods. But the boomerang comes in very handy, just the same, as anyone who has seen the film will admit.

At the erstwhile Piccadilly, now Warner's Theatre, Irene Rich holds forth as the star of "The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted," a Warner Brothers Production. Miss Rich is cast in the, to her, exceedingly familiar role of a wife with an unappreciative hubby, and, as usual scores a dramatic triumph. It's a society drama and an interesting one, wherein the wife opposes her marital partner when he refuses to help a son held on a manslaughter charge, because the father is district attorney and handicapped by a sense of duty. The star's flawless acting is decidedly the highlight of the picture, but she receives adequate support, all of which, combined with James Flood's skilled direction, results in a good box office card.

Clyde Cook, fun-maker in Hal Roach comedies for Pathe, has a simple method of keeping comfortable in hot weather. A bottle of soda, a life-jacket and a derby hat is all that is required. Don't forget the derby.

AN EDITOR

The Week in Review

WATCH Pathe this year for some very interesting announcements. Elmer Pearson has been quietly at work on production matters for some time, nearly a year, in fact. And now, at last, there's the scratching of pens on important contracts. Takes a long time to arrange these matters between New York and Hollywood; but the good ones are worth waiting for.

We venture to say that Pathe's shop window will be dressed more attractively this year than ever before in the history of this steady going, excellent organization. New kinds of comedies, new kinds of serials, and some electric light names to illuminate the whole window. Exhibitors will stop and look.

SPEAKING of comedies—they're difficult to make; that we all know. Always have been. I once handled the fiction desk of a popular magazine, and when a comedy story—a good one—appeared in the deluge of fiction which the U. S. mail gave us every week, the entire office stopped work to read it. The proportion of light to serious stories seemed as rare as one in ten thousand. As a matter of fact, we couldn't wait for comedy stories to come along; we had to go forth and capture them. So, at one time, a group of editors used to sit daily on O. Henry's doorstep—and shortened his life.

Yes, they're hard to make—that is, good comedies. But there would be more good ones, if the exhibitor would take a hand in the matter.

In other words, exhibitors will permit more and better comedies to be made if they will pay better prices for them.

The ruling price for comedies has lagged 'way behind in the swift advance in cost and price of dramatic features. You can make a fair feature today for say around $25,000 a reel; not often, at that. The ruling demand for big names all around—stars, casts, stories and plays, directors—shoves the cost away above $25,000 a reel, to double that amount, in fact. The cry everywhere is against, not for, the moderate cost program feature. Yet comedy producers would be happy if they could even have very much less per reel to spend than the ordinary feature costs.

Educational and Pathe, the distributing divisions of Fox, Universal, F. B. O., will increase their advances to the producer just as soon as the exhibitor will permit the increase. That's the long and short of the matter. The exhibitor can write the ticket—as he chooses; he knows the importance of comedies on his program.

THE very same situation applies to serials. They are damned only by the insistence that they must be cheaply made. Which unfolds a unique situation. In the popular magazine field today—so closely akin in every way to the picture field—serials are a prime factor. A magazine of large general circulation, going to the very people who go to movies, would give up anything in its editorial program rather than the serial. But—the best authors write them. They pay heavily for them. Harold Bell Wright received $50,000 for his latest magazine serial.

There's a very large and distinct field for the serial picture—much larger than the small communities where the need for the serial is not argued about. There's a very large field—if we make serials with the stories, cast and stars—in other words, with the moneys which go into dramatic features. Which, again, is up to the exhibitor, and the prices he will pay.

LEON ERROL is finishing "Clothes Make the Pirate," the Sam Rork special which bids fair to rank as one of the big attractions of the season. A notable cast includes Dorothy Gish, Nita Naldi, George Marion, Tully Marshall, James Rennie and others. Then Errol starts his two-year contract term as a First National star.

The wise ones are saying that Errol will take rank as one of the great comedians of the screen. Given the requisite production material, there seems little doubt but that he will score brilliantly. Here is what George Marion says: "Errol is the greatest Pierrot on the stage today. He is the superb clown—trained to his finger tips, laugh-provoking but whimsically appealing, capable of pathos, that great trick of the true comedian.

"It seems to me," Marion went on to say, "that the screen has caught up with Errol's art, that henceforth your audiences will continue to expect a breadth and finesse in your comedy offerings."

GEORGE MARION has other interesting things to say. He always has. When I want to know about things dramatic I go straight to this eminent actor, producer and scholar. "You write often," said he, "about the need for showmen in the entertainment world. True, of course, but how do you gage showmen? The term cannot be loosely applied. So many claim to be, even think they are, who are not. I believe a showman is simply a part of the audience, their representative back of the stage, or behind the screen. He is trained to think and feel as do the people in front. He knows what to give them, so much of this and so much of that, so they'll leave satisfactorily filled with their emotional meal."

Which we offer as the best definition of a showman. How many can claim this measure of training and innate ability?

BEGINNING with "The Unholy Three" and "Sally of the Sawdust," the Fall season has opened with the best pictures any season ever put forth. It's getting so that the exceptional attraction doesn't command exceptional attention. Consider

ON BROADWAY

By William A. Johnston

these: "The Gold Rush," "The Freshman," "Phantom of the Opera," "The Lost World," "The Wanderer," "The Merry Widow," "Havoc," "Don Q," and now comes "Graustark," making new records at the Capitol Theatre—over $30,000 in two days. James Cruze's "Pony Express" is due at the Rivoli next week, following the two-weeks run of "The Coast of Folly," which, while the critics may disagree, will prove one of Gloria Swanson's best box-office bets. And Edwin Schallert writes from the coast of two forthcoming big ones: "The Big Parade" and "The Dark Angel."

Here's some more of the box-office kind. The list is impressive: "Kiss Me Again," "Her Sister from Paris," "The Lucky Horseshoe," "The Limited Mail," "Souls for Sables," "Fighting the Flames," "Seven Chances," "I'll Show You the Town," "Drusilla with a Million," "Friendly Enemies," "The Overland Limited," "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work," "The Crackerjack," "The Home Builder," "The Goose Woman," "The Danger Signal," "The Live Wire."

Quite a formidable list, here, and it doesn't cover all the good bets and the many more to come, including some big ones. In fact it's just rolling up the curtain. As I say, the average today is so good that the exceptional ones go by with scarcely a flurry. We used to get out special editions on them.

THERE are many good lessons on production to deduce from the above list. One that seems to stand out is that these pictures come from a good many sources. I count, hurriedly, seventeen different producing organizations and units. You certainly couldn't expect such a group of shows from one source; the actual truth is that you couldn't get them from five or ten. Seventeen is the count and seventeen sets of brains were required. And so it will always be. The better the pictures, the more producers we will need, for the simple reason that more producers supply more ideas, and ideas count mostly in the show world.

Scan these pictures over, and you will agree with me that it was—mostly—the idea back of each that made it succeed. Production ability, yes, of course; that counts heavily. We are agreed that it takes an organization today to make a picture. Stars, stories, cast, sets, photography—all important. But the idea looms biggest.

I can imagine, in the mind's eye, the very epitome of a smooth running, finely manned, fully equipped producing organization, splendidly efficient and with all the atmosphere of high endeavor. And I can imagine a finely finished product coming steadily from such an organization. But its very smoothness of operation would damn it for the show market because there would be sameness. And while sameness would be highly desired for most any factory product, it is just what the show business doesn't want. Shows want ideas, a lot of them, often crazy ones. And when there are not lots of ideas, fresh ones, inspiring ones, the show business gets into a rut.

Just so long as we have plenty of sources of production we will have plenty of box-office pictures and industrial property. May the contrary situation never exist.

ONE of the best campaign books ever to reach our desk is the one prepared on "The Freshman," by S. Barret McCormick. Looks like the summing of a rich and rare experience in picture exploitation. Barret McCormick's copy for the Circle Theatre of Indianapolis marks the first chapter of history in theatre exploitattion. We recall that exhibitors used to subscribe to Indianapolis newspapers—special delivery, too—to get his advertisements.

THE Eastman theatre, Rochester, is celebrating its third anniversary. During the three years of its existence the house has attracted world-wide attention through its plan of operation and the idealistic aims of its founder. Dedicated to the "enrichment of community life," it has established itself as a real community center of entertainment. Attendance at its various performances in the three years is said to have exceeded 6,000,000.

Illustrative of the magnitude of the details involved in the theatre's service are the facts that in the last year the orchestra played more than 1500 different musical numbers, and that about 3500 miles of motion picture film were run through the theatre's projection machines.

A survey of the best drawing pictures of the year at the Eastman demonstrates that in Rochester at least it is not the sex play nor the lurid drama that finds the readiest response from the public. Big dramatic and historical productions, comedies and clean romance have found the greatest measure of popular appreciation. The ten most popular pictures of the year, in order of their drawing power, were: "The Covered Wagon," "Hot Water," "The Rag Man," "The Sea Hawk," "Peter Pan," "Classmates," "Abraham Lincoln," "Sally," "He Who Gets Slapped," "A Thief in Paradise." Following closely were "The Navigator," "The Only Woman," "Secrets" and "Black Cyclone."

THE anniversary week attraction was Harold Lloyd in "The Freshman." The first public demonstration of dynamic color was also given in "Flowing Color Harmonies." The presentation was arranged through the co-operation of Lloyd A. Jones and Clifton Tuttle of the Eastman Research Laboratories. The demonstration presented with the accompaniment of Debussy's First Arabesque by the orchestra, illustrated some possibilities in the use of changing color and form.

What the Motion Picture Means

THE first prize in the National Greater Movie Season Contest was won by Mrs. Ruth Griffith Burnett, of Indianapolis. Here is her essay:

"'Sing us a song!' was the demand of yore and the wandering minstrel complied. As he sang the song of valor there unrolled before the eyes of his listeners a picture to teach, to inspire and to entertain them.

"'Tell us a story!' was the demand of our fathers from the oasis of the firelight. And as the story-teller, beloved and admired, told the story there unfolded before the eyes of his hearers a picture to teach, to inspire and to entertain them.

"'Show us a picture!' is our demand, and lo, we are given the magic of a real picture with the enchantment of the minstrel and the charm of the story-teller.

"In the broadness of its scope and its capacity for the portrayal of things great and small, the motion picture shows me history, science, art and literature. From India, with its swarming highways, to barren Alaska, the world is mine, the generous gift of the camera.

"Because it depicts humanity the motion picture inspires. Its subtle sermons are abiding. It takes from my tongue the timid 'I can't,' and in its place puts a brave 'I'll try!' It lightens the corners of pride and indifference and makes me a little more sympathetic, more tolerant and more fit to take my place beside my fellow men.

"It entertains me. It draws me without my accustomed self and lets me laugh until the tears come, or sit upon the edge of my seat in suspense. It makes me glad to be alive.

"Education, inspiration and entertainment. These three the motion picture mean to me."

A Happy State of Affairs

THIS year, for the first time in nine years, no bills antagonistic to the industry were introduced in Georgia. The industry in that State has carried on a systematic campaign, familiarizing the lawmakers with actual conditions, giving them a comprehensive idea of the type of pictures now being presented, and acquainting them thoroughly with facts bearing on the financial end of the industry.

This has brought about a very happy state of affairs. Just before the Legislature adjourned, the other day, the following resolution was unanimously passed:

"Whereas, Throughout the 1925 session of the General Assembly of the State of Georgia in the City of Atlanta, members of both houses have been repeatedly the guests of the motion picture theatres, including the Grand and Forsyth theatres of said city, and

"Whereas, Members of the Legislature have found this form of entertainment not only clean and wholesome, instructive and educational, but it has generously contributed to the pleasure of our stay in the Capitol City.

"Therefore, Be It Resolved by the Senate, the House concurring, That the thanks of the General Assembly be hereby tendered to the managers of the various theatres for this courtesy so graciously extended."

The Box-Office Tells the Tale

THE other night, at a Broadway premiere, a slender little gray-haired man made his way from an orchestra seat to the stage to respond to the cheers of the crowd. It was Charlie Chaplin, and the crowd wanted to hear him speak. What he said was a graceful acknowledgment of the applause. He preferred to do his "talking" on the screen. And he had done it in such fashion that the box-office at the Strand Theatre has been resounding with the echo ever since.

This reminds us that, every once in a while, somebody bobs up with the prediction that "Charlie can't repeat". Well, "The Gold Rush" is his first appearance on the screen since 1922, and he has more than confounded the prophets of evil.

New Idea in Coming Pictures is to Create Striking Moments

"Big Parade" Cited As Example of Healthy Innovation

By Edwin Schallert, Los Angeles Times

(Editor's Note.—This is the seventh of a regular series of articles by the Editor of the Los Angeles Times Pre-View. Mr. Schallert writes exclusively for Motion Picture News in the trade field)

BIG moments make big pictures. Big moments of drama; big moments of acting. Big thrills; big climaxes; big scenes and ensembles, and sometimes even huge mobs and spectacles.

Recall a few instances:

The return of Henry Walthall to the Southern homestead, and the ride of the Clansmen in "The Birth of a Nation." Always unforgettable.

The poignant pain of sacrifice written on the faces of Rudolph Valentino and Alice Terry in "The Four Horsemen."

The beaten and oppressed Tol'able David's revolt and embittered battle for freedom.

The flaring brilliance of the mass effects in "Robin Hood," with its glory of setting.

More recently—a tragic seriousness flinging its shadow across a mood of laughter as in the New Year's Eve sequence in Charles Chaplin's "The Gold Rush."

Zorro to the rescue in "Don Q"—an idea of surpassing ingenuity and cleverness. The last two are perhaps not so generally known because so recently released, but they have the same vital spark.

If a picture has one such moment as I have mentioned, it will, as a rule, with other things even moderately in harmony, be talked about. The audience will remember it after they leave the theatre. They will tell their friends and acquaintances. Arguments may spring up over the effectiveness of the dramatic episode, the scene or the acting. There may be disagreements even—but all the better. It's the same as that rooting and shouting that goes on at a prize-fight or a football game.

This season I believe we will have a number of such pictures. Plots and situations (at least the reality of certain situations) are showing a sudden increase in health and vigor. Old formulae are being discarded. New and novel ideas for treatment, if not for the stories themselves, are being sought out. More daring, more initiative, more individuality is in evidence all along the line, at least in the bigger productions. It is a healthy state, disclosing an increased energy being thrown into productions as productions, rather than productions as vehicles merely for stars.

One picture I have seen lately that I know will start something. It will have both supporters and enemies, but it is not going to be allowed to languish. It is going to be both praised and damned vehemently, and it may even put some in a fighting mood, but above all it will attract attention. It is (significantly!) a war picture—"The Big Parade."

The story for this production, as is now doubtless pretty widely known, was written by Laurence Stallings, co-outhor of "What Price Glory." The feature was directed by King Vidor, and when they decided that they had something really big, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer expanded their plans and spent a lot of extra money, procuring war scenes to give it a big epical character. When it is released it will be in the super-production class as to length—some twelve reels in all, with a break arranged for an intermission. And not too long at that!

I have hardly ever been conscious of such tensity in an audience, taken as a whole, at any time recently, than there was at the preliminary preview in Pasadena. The film was not at that time in its final shape, and some of the later episodes were a little weak, but it went over with a thundering bang. More than once there was general applause.

The outstanding characteristic of this picture is that it does not take itself too seriously. Despite its length, it rarely touches the note of heaviness. For two-thirds of the film comedy and laughter are gloriously emphasized. It is life as it was lived behind the front during the World War that is depicted—an accurate, intimate and telling impression—a true inside story of the conflict abroad, that every ex-soldier will recognize as touching his own experiences at some point, and that every mother, father, wife, sweetheart, and even distant relative of an ex-soldier will appreciate because of still unforgettable associations.

Tragedy there is of course in "The Big Parade"—deep and pathetically—appealing sort of tragedy too, but not "Greed"-like and forbidding. All the bitterness of war comes to the surface in the scenes showing the death of one of a group of three soldiers—Three Musketeers you might call them—about whom the action of the picture centers. War hate is expressed in all its gaunt reality—a reality bordering on madness. Yet, the soldier who hated and would slaughter the Germans because they had killed his companion, gives a wounded one his last cigarette, when they find themselves together in a shell hole. There is a still odder twist to this scene, when he takes the same cigarette out of the man's mouth after his death, and puts it absentmindedly into his own.

That particular scene is one that is going to be talked about. It represents in one brief glimpse all the horrors of war, and its humanness. It is a dreadful and terrible thing in a way, but one that the audience will watch with bated breath if perhaps with a shudder almost of distaste. Only the deftness of Jack Gilbert's acting as the American soldier, and Vidor's direction make it acceptable, as it doubtless will be to a large majority of people, for its terrific dramatic effect.

To many who see "The Big Parade" this will not be the only big moment. There is another equally as fine in a large way, which shows the first entrance of soldiers into battle. They have heard about war, thought about war, talked about war, laughed about war, and here they actually face its reality, seemingly when they had least anticipated it, when they are worn of body and soul

Famous Players Net Profits $2,051,532.72 for Six Months Ending June 27

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in its consolidated statement (which includes the earnings of subsidiary companies) reports net profits of $695,-724.61 for the three months and $2,051,532.71 for the six months to June 27, 1925 after deducting all charges and reserves for Federal income and other taxes.

After allowing for payment of dividends on the preferred stock, the above earnings amount to $2.16½ per share for the three months and $7.04 per share for the six months, on the 243,431 shares of common stock outstanding on June 27, 1925.

Hunt Stromberg Joins Executive Staff of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Hunt Stromberg, Harry Rapf, Louis B. Mayer, Irving G. Thalberg

HUNT STROMBERG, one of the industry's foremost producers, has entered into an agreement with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer whereby he will act in a supervisory capacity and will augment the work of Irving G. Thalberg and Harry Rapf, associate executives at the Culver City studios.

An enlarged production schedule is soon to be put into effect at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios and Stromberg will participate actively in its execution.

In addition to acting in a supervisory capacity he will assume the direction of several pictures.

In making the announcement Louis B. Mayer said: "Under the enlarged producing program about to be launched we will need the additional services of a producer who can achieve M-G-M quality in pictures. In Stromberg Messrs. Thalberg, Rapf and myself feel we have acquired such a man. He enjoys an eviable record and under his arrangement with us he will, I feel sure, achieve the greatest work of his career."

Hunt Stromberg was recently producing for P. D. C., and made several successes for them. A short time ago he disposed of all of his interests in such pictures and turned over four or more stories to them. Considerable speculation as to just why he had sold out his interests has been going the rounds, but the true cause, namely, the offer made to him by Louis B. Mayer on behalf of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has just come to light with Mr. Mayer's announcement. Stromberg, felt that the opportunity to work wit M-G-M was one not to be lost, one that would provide him with the finest of facilities for the production of pictures along the lines that have brought him into the limelight.

Marion Fairfax Resigns Post

Quits as First National Editorial Director to Enter Production Field

MARION FAIRFAX has resigned as editorial director for First National to enter the production field as a personal venture. She has purchased screen rights to three novels which have had wide circulation during the past two years, and they will serve as her first vehicles for production.

The resignation of Miss Fairfax was to have become effective July 9th, but, at the urgent request of R. A. Rowland and Sam E. Rork, she cancelled a schedulled South American trip to remain in New York and supervise the Rork production, "Clothes Make the Pirate," which First National will release as a special, with Leon Errol and Dorothy Gish starring.

Miss Fairfax is one of the leading playrights of the New York stage and an author scenarist, editorial and production supervisor of film plays. She has already achieved success as a picture producer, as the head, several years ago, of Marion Fairfax Productions.

Among the well known pictures with which Miss Fairfax has been identified in an editorial capacity are "Flaming Youth," "The Lost World," "So Big" and "The Talker," which is an adaptation of her own Broadway stage play. She has been editorial director of First National units since the entry of that organization into the producing field. Previously she served in a like capacity with Marshall Nilan and Famous Players-Lasky.

Miss Fairfax wrote the scenario of "Clothes Make the Pirate," adapting it from Holman Day's novel and preparing the continuity. She is now supervising the filming and the editing.

The scenario from which First National produced "The Lost World" was written by Miss Fairfax, who performed what was believed to be an almost impossible task in working out the adaptation of Conan Doyle's novel so that the effects of the prehistoric monsters could be put on the screen as part of drama of human characters.

New $350,000 Theatre for Wilshire, California

Plans have been completed for the erection of new theatre building and stores to be erected on Wilshire Boulevard between La Brea and Sycamore Avenues, Wilshire, California, to cost approximately $350,000. The theatre will be of old Spanish architecture and will be a fireproof construction with a seating capacity of 2,000. The owner of the new theatre will be the West Coast Company.

Five Companies Granted New York Charters

Motion picture companies entering the business in New York state during the past week, and receiving charters from the secretary of state, were: George Choos, Inc., capitalization not specified, George Choos, Edward J. Clarke, J. R. Elliott, New York city; Kitby-Marlowe, Inc., capitalization not stated, Mildred Singer, Morris Vogel, Saul Streit, New York city; Allegany Theatres Corporation, Batavia, capitalization not stated, J. R. Osborne, E. B. Westcott, Clara St. John, Batavia; Daly Avenue Theatre Corporation, capitalization not stated, Max Sheinart, Brooklyn; F. V. Goldstein, Benjamin Sherman, New York city.

First National Has Appointed Canadian Manager

E. A. Eschmann has appointed William A. Bach Canadian District Manager for First National to succeed Louis Bache, who has resigned. Bach has long been a salesman of picture product in the Canadian market. Before joining First National he was manager of Famous Players in Toronto and prior to that was special representative of the Fox Film Corporation in Canada. He will make his headquarters in Toronto.

Shimon Resigns from Milwaukee Theatre

Louis C. Shimon, assistant manager of the Milwaukee theatre, 1080 Teutonia Ave., Milwaukee, Wis., has left that organization and will take a short vacation at Cedar Lake before announcing a new affiliation.

Mr. Shimon was popularly known at the Milwaukee as George Fischer's right-hand man. Besides being assistant manager, he was also advertising manager and head of the exploitation and copy department.

Canadian Conference on Copyrights

AN IMPORTANT conference on Musical Copyright and Performing Rights was held in the office of the Motion Picture Distributors & Exhibitors Association in Toronto on Thursday, September 3rd.

The Motion Picture interests were represented by Colonel John A. Cooper, President of the Association and Mr. Jack Arthur, Musical Director for Famous Players Canadian Corporation. The Canadian Society of Authors and Composers was represented by Professor Watson Kirkconnell of Winnipeg, Honorary Secretary. Musical Writers and Publishers were represented by G. V. Thompson.

The main topic under discussion was what attitude should be taken towards the Canadian Performing Right Society which has recently been formed in this country, at the instance of the Performing Right Society of London, England. While the conference was informal it is expected that the result will have a very considerable affect upon the Musical Copyright situation in Canada. Professor Kirkconnell will make a report on the subject to the National Executive of his Association.

Connecticut Film Tax Proves Burden on Industry

Exhibitors Decide Not to Increase Admission Prices

OUTSTANDING developments in the Connecticut tax situation this week:

Decision by the M. P. T. O. of Connecticut not to pass along the tax to patrons at least for the present.

Abandonment of Paramount Week in Connecticut in consequence of the tax situation.

Announcement that the State would receive $55,210 as the first tax payment, including all prints up to September 12, according to an agreement reached by Tax Commissioner Blodget and Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the Hays organization.

A survey by the Connecticut exhibitor organization to determine the situation of its members with regard to product, in view of the announcement by distributors that no new contracts will be made after the present ones expire. This survey is being conducted under the supervision of President Joseph W. Walsh, of the Connecticut association.

Closing of a theatre because of the tax burden.

The New Haven meeting was attended by National President R. F. Woodhull, of the M. P. T. O. A., who assured the theatre owners that the entire resources of the National organization were behind them in the fight against the taxation and censorship measure.

Reports to The Film Daily, from its special correspondent in Connecticut, indicate that legislators who voted for the Durant bill now regret their action, in view of the difficulties imposed on the exhibitors. Statements to this effect were reported made to Mrs. W. A. Gill, proprietor of the Colonial and Walnut Beach theatres near Milford, Conn., by Representatives David A. Clarke and Hubert L. Pratt.

Senator Johnson and Representative E. Marshall Smith of East Haddam are quoted as having said that they were not aware the bill would place the burden on the theatre men and bring about the closing of the exchange. At the time the bill was brought up for passage the impression prevailed, it was stated, that the distributors would pay the tax.

Theatres in the Connecticut M. P. T. O. have been assessed according to their seating capacity and the money will be turned into the revolving fund created by the Hays organization. It will be paid to Tax Commissioner Blodgett through the Hartford-Connecticut Trust Company.

In order to take care of these payments the exhibitor organization has created a central bureau, with quarters in the Kilfeather Building, which formerly housed most of the exchanges prior to their withdrawal from the State.

Numerous conferences have been held within the past ten days by Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the Hays organization, and the Tax Commissioner, and these conferences have been entirely harmonious, as indicated by a statement issued by Mr. Blodgett. He praised Mr. Pettijohn for his efforts toward readjusting the difficulties brought about by the law, and declared Mr. Pettijohn was one of the few men who really understood the situation.

Eugene Treiber, President of the Motion Picture Operators' Union, has sent out questionnaires, through the members of the association, asking legislators if they voted for the measure and why and also if they are for repeal.

At the M. P. T. O. meeting in New Haven on Sunday steps were taken for a survey of product to find out how exhibitors stand on bookings. Announcement has been made by distributors that they will not make further contracts when the present agreements expire, so the association is gathering the information in view of the threatened film famine.

The meeting also discussed problems brought about by the removal of the exchanges. Nearly all the large theatres are using one delivery service, and the new arrangements are reported to cost the theatres about 15 per cent more than ordinary express service. Numerous difficulties have arisen in the delivery of film, but these, it is reported, are being ironed out to some extent.

Theatre Circuits Add More Houses

Famous and Warners Acquire New Holdings; Schwalbe to Build in Philadelphia—Fox Plans San Francisco Theatre

AMONG the important developments of the week in the theatre field is the formal announcement by Wilmer & Vincent, operators of a chain of theatres in Pennsylvania, that the Victoria at Harrisburg has been signed over to Famous Players-Lasky. The announcement follows rumors current for some time that Famous was angling for the entire holdings of the Wilmer & Vincent company.

New theatre projects which came to light during the past week include the announcement that Fox would build a new house of more than 4,000 seating capacity in the Bronx and reports that Fox is negotiating for a theatre site in the downtown section of San Francisco, will build a 5,000 seat house on Figueroa St., Los Angeles and is preparing to erect a first-run theatre of about 3,500 seating capacity, in Chicago, the building to occupy a plot in the downtown section which Fox got some time ago.

It was reported in Philadelphia that Harry Schwalbe, formerly secretary of First National, and H. A. Winters, are having plans drawn for the construction of a large theatre, store and garage to be located at Fifty-second Street below Wyalusing Ave., that city. According to the report the building will occupy a plot 229 x 353 feet. The theatre will seat 2,000, will include thirteen stores on fifty-second Street and sixteen stores in an arcade running through to Fifty-third Street. In the rear of the building there will be sixty-seven individual garages. The total cost of the structure according to estimates will be in excess of $600,000.

Warner Brothers this week announced the purchase of the Cameo Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. The Warners have acquired full title to the property, including the real estate. The purchase was made from the Brandt interests. The Cameo has a seating capacity of 1,600 and was built two years ago. It will be known hereafter as Warner's Cameo. Howard W. Foerste has been appointed manager.

In addition to the Victoria in Harrisburg, Famous Players this week acquired the Imperial Theatre at Pawtucket, R. I. Famous also holds a controlling interest in the Strand there. The Imperial was leased for an indefinite period. Walter G. Hartford and Thomas E. Marsden, who sold out their interests in the Imperial to Famous, opened the theatre in February, 1916 and have operated it since that time.

In taking over the Wilmer & Vincent house in Harrisburg, Famous obtained exclusive rights to the theatre. The transaction does not include the transfer of the real estate, C. Floyd Hopkins, Harrisburg representative of Wilmer & Vincent said.

PATHE SIGNS HARRY CAREY
Will Make Series of Westerns

BY THE terms of an agreement just entered into between Elmer Pearson of Pathe Exchange, Inc., and Charles R. Rogers, producer of Harry Carey films, Harry Carey will make a series of Western features for release through Pathe.

The same organization that has been making Carey pictures for Hunt Stromberg for the past two years will continue to produce the Carey pictures. Charles R. Rogers will devote his personal attention to the production activities, which will center at Universal City in California.

An adaptation of the story, "Buck Up," written by Basil Dickey and Harry Haven, will be Carey's first feature Western for Pathe. Harvey Gates prepared the continuity and Scott Dunlap will direct. Production will start at once. The initial release will probably be ready late in the Fall.

Carey has long been popular as a Western star. His three most recent successes were, "The Texas Trail," "Silent Anderson," and "Beyond the Border."

M. P. T. O. A. Committees Meet

Matters of Importance to Industry Are Submitted at Conferences

WEDNESDAY, September 2nd, was a day of great activity at the National headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America at 25 West 43rd Street, New York City. It was the occasion of several important committee meetings—Administrative—Legislative—Contract and Play Date.

The Administrative Committee, represented by A. Julian Brylawski, Washington, D. C., Chairman, Nathan Yamins, Fall River, Mass., and Harry Davis, Pittsburg, Pa., met and considered the report by President R. F. Woodhull on the various activities of the organization since the last meeting of the Board of Directors. Conferences were held with several prospective business managers, and these conferences are still continuing with the prospect of an early announcement being made of their final selection for this important post. Definite arrangements were also made for carrying on all the various work of the organization.

The Legislative Committee, particularly the Music Tax branch, submitted a report, and were authorized to continue their activities and to engage counsel to the end of securing an amendment to the Copyright law at the next session of Congress.

The Contract Committee represented by Joseph M. Seider, Newark, N. J., Chairman, together with Messrs. Yamins and Brylawski met with Fred Elliott and Oscar Neufeld, representing Independent Motion Picture Association of America and a long and important conference was held. Seider presented a form of equitable contract and a form of Arbitration, which will be taken up by the other organization at an early date. Another meeting will be held as soon as is feasible.

The Play Date Committee, Messrs. Harry Davis, Chairman, Sydney S. Cohen, L. M. Sagal, Nathan Yamins and J. J. Harwood, met with A. Carlos, W. E. Shallenberger, Joseph Klein, A. Weiss and Fred Elliott of Independent Motion Picture Association of America.

President Woodhull was in attendance at all of the committee meetings. A resolution was adopted by all of the National Board of Directors present, pledging their support to the Theatre Owners of Connecticut in their present crisis, induced by the oppressive and confiscatory tax and censor law recently enacted, the repeal of which, or relief from the restrictions of which, they are at present seeking.

New Auditor Appointed by Arrow

WE. SHALLENBERGER, president of Arrow Pictures Corporation, has appointed Louis L. Beaudry auditor of the company to succeed Hugh Davis, resigned. Beaudry has had wide experience as an accountant and auditor. He installed the audit system now in force at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, and also instituted an audit system used by the Congress Hotel in Chicago.

$250,000 Theatre is to Be Erected in Oakland, Cal.

Plans for the erection of a $250,000 motion picture theatre on the east side of Broadway south of Fortieth Street, Oakland, California, are being completed. The theatre is to have a seating capacity of 2,500. The owner of the new structure is the Transbay Theatre Corporation.

New Theatre of Egyptian Design at Lynwood, Cal.

Lynwood, California is to have a new theatre building of Egyptian design to be erected on Long Beach Boulevard near the center of Lynwood. The seating capacity of the new house is to be 1,400. J. D. Marian has been appointed manager.

Henry King Signs Agreement With Sam Goldwyn

Samuel Goldwyn this week announced a contract with Henry King under which the latter will be associated with him in the production of a series of pictures covering a period of several years.

King will direct the film version of "Partners Again," the next Potash & Perlmutter story to reach the screen. Work on the Montague Glass play will start as soon as Mr. King completes "Stella Dallas," which he is now producing for Goldwyn.

Plans Announced for New $200,000 Monterey House

Plans are being prepared by Read Brothers, prominent San Francisco architects, for the erection of motion picture theatre building on Alvarado Street, Monterey, Cal. The approximate cost of the theatre will be $200,000 and it will have a seating capacity of from 1,000 to 1,500 persons. The owners of the new theatre will be the T. and D. Theatres Company.

Meyer Schine Joins Ranks of Benedicts

Miss Hildegard Feldman, of Gloversville, became the bride of J. Meyer Schine, one of the heads of the Schine circuit at a wedding performed Sunday in the Italian room of the hotel Utica. Mrs. Louis Schine was matron of honor, while the groom was attended by his brother, Louis.

De Mille Signs Hale to Long Contract

Cecil B. DeMille has signed Alan Hale to a long term directorial contract as the result of his work in the direction of Leatrice Joy in "The Wedding Song." The next story to be assigned Hale is "Braveheart," a Rod La Roque starring vehicle.

Cohen Declines Proffer of Testimonial Dinner

SYDNEY S. COHEN, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the M. P. T. O. A., has "finally and irrevocably" declined the proffer of a banquet or testimonial dinner which the Independent Motion Picture Association members proposed to tender him on October 18th. In a letter to I. E. Chadwick, president of the I. M. P. A., Mr. Cohen expresses his appreciation of the honor and compliment implied by the proffer of the association, but declines again to accept that honor, and suggests that the dinner which will open "Independence Week" be dedicated to the whole cause of "Independence."

Mr. Cohen concludes his letter with the following: "Trusting that you will see this in the same light and that your Committee will go forward to make this dinner to 'Independence' the biggest thing that has ever occurred in the industry, because it is a testimonial to the biggest cause which can exist—'Independence,' I must insist that this decision of mine be considered final and irrevocable."

Greater Movie Essay Winners Named

Indianapolis Woman Takes First Prize on Subject, "What the Motion Picture Means to Me"

A MOTHER of a three months old baby, living in a little house on the shady side of the road on Rural Route C, not far from Indianapolis, found time a few weeks ago to write an essay on "What the Motion Picture Means to Me." She sent it to the Indianapolis News, where it won first prize in the local Greater Movie Season Contest, sponsored by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., of which Will H. Hays is President.

The judges of the National Contest announced that it was the best of the thousands that were written in this nation-wide competition. And so, on November 25th, Mrs. Ruth Griffith Burnett, of Route C, Indianapolis, Ind., with her husband, Jesse Burnett—who always told her that she ought to try her hand at writing—will sail from New York City on the Red Star liner Belgenland on a tour of the world that will bring her back to New York City on April 6th, 1926. The cost of meals, stateroom and all sightseeing trips is paid.

Second prize in the contest—the choice of two trips to Los Angeles or two trips to Miami—goes to Mrs. Lawrence G. Wood of 1218 North Boston Place, Tulsa, Oklahoma, who submitted her entry through the Tulsa Tribune. Mrs. Wood has chosen to take the trip to Los Angeles.

The third prize was whichever trip was not selected by the second prize winner and the trip for two to Miami goes to a Civil War Veteran of Breckenridge, Colo. who—in spite of his almost eighty years—is still an active man. His essay was entered by the Rocky Mountain News and Denver Times.

This winner of the third prize enlisted in the 108th Illinois Regiment when he was 17 years old. He served through the Civil War and was in the first and last attack on Vicksburg.

Many years ago Mr. Westerman moved to Colorado where he was engaged in mining and mine promotion for years. He has been elected State Representative from the counties of Summit and Grand and served in the Ninth, Tenth and a special session of the Colorado State General Assembly. Mr. Westerman has been deaf since the Battle of Vicksburg and his essay is a remarkable expression as to the part motion pictures have played in his life.

The winners of the trips to Los Angeles and to Miami will be the guests of the Chamber of Commerce in those two cities. Each prize winner and the person he or she selects as a companion, will have all traveling and hotel expenses paid for a two week visit.

The National judges were George Barr McCutcheon, president of the Author's League of America; Alice Duer Miller, noted author; Richard Washburn Child, famous writer and former Ambassador to Italy; and Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, president of the Federal Council of Churches. Dr. Cadman was called abroad and could not return in time to take part in judging the contest and he appointed as his representative Dr. George Reid Andrews, Chairman of the Committee on Educational and Religious Drama, of the Federal Council of Churches.

Two hundred thousand essays were submitted to the forty-two prominent newspapers throughout the United States, that conducted the contest. The greatest number was received by the committee for the State of Michigan—which contest was conducted through the Detroit Times and other Michigan newspapers associated in the State Contest. The Michigan essays numbered 50,000.

Each newspaper, after selecting the local prize winners, sent its three best essays to New York for the National Judges. As fast as these essays were received in the office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., they were copied and numbered and sent to the National judges who segregated the best ones as the essays were received. After nearly a week of deliberation each National judge had selected those that seemed to him to be the best.

They finally worked their way down to ten that all the judges agreed represented the best of those submitted. And finally, after a great deal of reading and re-reading of the essays, they named the winners, basing their final judgment on the originality of thought expressed and the sincerity of the author.

Demonstration for Senator Walker

Parade Through Film District is Followed by Enthusiastic Meeting at Hotel Astor

A SPECTACULAR demonstration in behalf of the candidacy of Senator James J. Walker for Mayor of New York City was staged by the Motion Picture Division of the campaign on Wednesday, September 9.

A luncheon, at which the Senator was the guest of honor and the chief speaker, was held at the Hotel Astor. This was preceded by a parade of a large number of automobiles, with Senator Walker leading, through the film district from Seventh avenue and Fifty-eighth to the hotel.

As the procession passed Forty-ninth street a big banner stretching across the street was unfurled. Film folk in 729 Seventh avenue and the other film buildings in the district turned out en masse and gave the candidate a great greeting. From the windows of the tall structures confetti and streamers rained down until the scene resembled the demonstration on Armistice Day.

Many representative men of the industry gathered at the luncheon. At the speakers' table, besides the guest of honor, were: Adolph Zukor, President of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Felix F. Feist, distribution manager for Metro-Goldwyn; Ben F. Schreiber, manager of the Walker campaign; Nathan Burkan, prominent attorney and member of the Board of Directors of United Artists; Louis Mann, the actor; M. E. Comerford, head of the Comerford Circuit; Samuel I. Berman, secretary of the Motion Picture Division of the Walker campaign; Charles L. O'Reilly, President of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce; A. H. Schwartz, prominent Brooklyn theatre owner; Former State Senator Walter Herrick, General Chairman of the Picture Division of the campaign, and Rudolph Sanders, well-known Brooklyn exhibitor.

Other prominent men present were William A. Johnston, Motion Picture News; Hiram Abrams, President of United Artists; John McGuirk and Abe Sablosky, of the Stanley Circuit, Philadelphia; and scores of exhibitors and exchangemen.

Senator Herrick introduced Mr. Burkan as the toastmaster. He at once sounded the keynote of the luncheon as a protest meeting against the blatherskite campaign that was being conducted in some quarters against the Senator.

Mr. Burkan evoked a demonstration when he paid warm tribute to Senator Walker as a friend and a citizen who stood for the best in public life. "Every man in the industry owes a debt to Senator Walker," said Mr. Burkan. When the Senator was introduced he was received with cheering that lasted several minutes, after which he made a characteristic speech, punctuated with his accustomed wit and brilliant sallies.

Speaking in serious vein, Senator Walker ridiculed the charges of his enemies that he was linked with "the underworld," and referred to a resolution passed the night before in his behalf by the Grand Street Boys Club of which he is a vice-president.

He declared that he was proud of New York and grateful for what New York had done for him and scored those who were knocking the town in order to gain political advantage. "I know New York," he continued. "Just because I know it so well, when I become Mayor I may be more severe, if there is anything wrong with it, than some man who does not know it."

One of the sallies that caught the crowd was this: "A lot of dust has been swept under the sofa in City Hall, and I am the designated vacuum-cleaner." This was typical of his speech, which made a great impression on the crowd.

Just before the Senator spoke, Harry Cooper sang the Walker campaign song composed by Irving Berlin, entitled "Walk in With Walker" and ending with the line "Everybody's out of step but Jim." The crowd voted it a hit and joined in the chorus with great enthusiasm.

Italy Refuses to Permit Control of Theatres by Americans

THE Italian interests behind the theatres of Italy are eager to welcome American film productions for display in their theatres, but they are loath to permit control of their theatres to pass into American hands.

This in substance is the observation of Peter Magaro, pioneer Harrisburg exhibitor, who returned about September 1 from a Europen trip during which, he said, he sought to negotiate the purchase or lease for big American financial interests of 138 of the leading Italian picture houses, the object being to provide a better output in that country for American film products.

Mr. Magaro, who last May sold his Regent Theatre in Harrisburg to the Marcus Loew interests, is a native of Italy and has kept in close touch with the theatre situation in that country.

"While in Italy this summer" he said, "I inquired, in behalf of American interests which desire to get control of the Italian theatres, on what terms they could be bought, and whether there was a popular demand among Italian theatre patrons for American film products. I negotiated with some of the leading men in control of 138 allied Italian theatres, and they said without hesitation that American films are the most popular in Italy,—in fact that the Italian people demand them in preference to any other makes.

It was made very evident to me, however, by these same Italian interests, that they are unwilling to dispose of control of their theatres to American capital, no matter how liberal the offer, so that I am convinced that further negotiations to that end would be unavailing."

Mr. Maggaro declined to say what American interests he represented abroad.

Chandler to Succeed Kellogg

First National Announces Appointment as Director of Advertising and Publicity

C. F. CHANDLER, one of the best known and most popular men associated with the publicizing of motion pictures, has been appointed Director of Advertising and Publicity of First National Pictures, Inc., to take effect September 15th. Mr. Chandler succeeds Mark Kellogg, who has resigned after occupying the post since January 1st, 1924. Mr. Kellogg has not yet announced his future plans.

Mr. Chandler is a newspaper and advertising man of long experience having been associated with First National Pictures since 1919, when he became a member of the Advertising Department under the direction of C. L. Yearsley. For the past two years he has been in charge of the Exhibitors Service Department. He has been notably successful in this capacity and is directly responsible for the high quality of First National's poster work during the past year.

Before his connection with First National, he was for five years advertising manager and director of publicity for the Essanay Film Manufactnring Company in Chicago.

Mr. Chandler was born in Foo Chow, China, the son of Rev. Dr. David W. Chandler and Mary E. Stanley Chandler. He received preparatory school training at Mt. Union College at Alliance, Ohio, preceeding four years at the University of Michigan, where he was awarded a B.A. degree. Immediately after leaving college, he went into newspaper work becoming a reporter on the Cleveland Plain Dealer, later associate editor of the Cleveland Press, associate night editor Philadelphia North American, on the re-write and copy desk of the New York Evening World, foreign editor New York World, head of the copy desk of the Chicago Examiner and managing editor of the Cleveland News, a post that he resigned in order to join the Essanay Company.

One Policy for Warner Houses

Plan is Mapped for Uniformity of Service in All Theatres of Chain

ONE policy will control all Warner Brothers theatres, according to announcement from the home office of that organization. A plan is now being mapped for uniformity of service, which will embrace the same attention to detail in the entire string of Warner theatres as was bestowed upon patrons of the New York house during its opening week recently.

These new plans are in the capable hands of George H. Dumond, who was appointed general manager of all Warner theatres a few weeks ago. Under his managing directorship each house will have its managing director and a full complement of house attaches. Dumond had charge of arrangements for the opening night of Warners in New York and then proceeded to Cleveland to direct the opening of the Circle last week.

Under the plan as devised all attaches in each of the theatres will wear special uniforms, which will be identical for persons performing the same class of service in all Warner houses. Girl ushers are to be employed throughout and in every instance they are to be garbed as are those in the New York theatre. Their costume, a particularly chic creation suggestive of the French "Blue Devils," was designed by George W. Bonte, Warner Brothers' art director.

Dumond, new general manager of theatres, was home office representative of Warner Bros. for two years up to a year ago, when he went to Cleveland and became managing director of the State Theatre, in charge of production for all the Loew houses.

In and Out of Town

HARRY M. WARNER left late last week on one of his regular visits to the Warner studio in Hollywood. He will return within two or three weeks.

LESLIE WHELAN, exploitation manager of the Harold Lloyd Corp., left this week on an extended tour through the Middle West.

COL. W. F. CLARKE, of Cranfield & Clarke, has returned from a business trip to Canada.

COMPTROLLER David A. O'Malley, of Columbia Pictures, has gone to the Coast for a conference with Harry Cohn.

DWIGHT C. LEEPER, vice-president of Richmount Pictures and associated with Harry J. Brown in productions for Rayart, has returned from a European tour.

HARRY CARR, special photoplay writer for the Los Angeles Times, is in New York on a visit.

ALBERT WARNER was scheduled to sail for New York on the Berengaria this week. He has been in Europe for several weeks.

Ten Per Cent of Montreal Posters Rejected

MORE than ten per cent of all posters, window cards and placards of theatres were rejected in Montreal by the Montreal Poster Censor Bureau, according to the first annual report of the bureau, the director of which is Martin Singher, a former Montreal newspaper man. The statistics, which were issued September 6 by Jules Crepeanx, director of city departments, show that 109,249 display cards, posters and still photographs were submitted for approval from September 1, 1924, to the same date this year, or an average of about 350 pieces of printed matter per day. Of this number, 98,450 were accepted and 10,799 were rejected as nnfit for pnblic view.

Because of the revenue derived from the inspection of all posters, the Montreal bureau was recently transferred from the Police Department, under whose jurisdiction the branch was first established, to the City Treasurer's department.

Manning New Production Manager for F. B. O.

ROGER MANNING, who for the past two years has been in charge of locations for all F. B. O. uits, has been appointed production manager of the F. B. O. studios to succeed Clarence White, according to announcement by B. P. Fineman, general manager of the studios. Manning has been affiliated with several of the foremost motion picture companies during the past few years.

White, whom Manning succeeds, has joined S. S. Hutchinson, pioneer motion picture producer, who has returned to activity on a large scale. White will serve as production manager for all of the Hutchinson units which will operate at the F. B. O. studio.

Labor Difficulties Being Adjusted

Controversies Between Exhibitors and Labor Unions Are Nearing a Settlement in Many Cities

LABOR troubles throughout the United States continue to occupy much of the attention of exhibitors, though in many cities they are being straightened out through arbitration or other methods, with both sides yielding on some points.

Efforts to adjust the wage differences between the musicians, stage hands and moving picture operators employed in the Strand, Cataract and Bellevue theatres, Niagara Falls, N. Y., and theatre managements have been unsuccessful. The theatre employes who at first asked for wage increases of $5 and $10 a week for musicians and 10 per cent increases for the stage hands and operators, announced they would agree to take a boost of $2.50 a week per man, but this offer also was rejected by the theatre managements, who refuse to grant any pay increases and it is now reported that the houses involved never again will sign up with the unions but will go "open shop" in the future.

The controversy between the musicians and trades craft union employees of Denver theatres will be settled by arbitration. After several weeks of unsuccessful negotiations between the two parties, the industrial commission of the state of Colorado was agreed upon as the arbitrator of the dispute over the new contract. Both sides have agreed to accept the decision of the industrial commission as final. The arguments before the commission will be presented on October 5th.

Differences that arose between the motion picture operators' union of Baltimore, Local No. 181, and the moving picture theatre owners of that city, have been amicably adjusted with the operators conceding a few points but in the main getting all the demands they made for increases in wages and better working conditions.

Negotiations were on all day Thursday of last week between the representatives of the Atlanta Federation of Musicians and the theatre managers of Atlanta, looking toward the settlement of the differences between the musicians and the theatres on Labor Day.

For a time it looked as though a compromise was going to be brought about, in which all the musicians would be able to return to the theatres, but at midnight no agreement had been reached, and the executive committee of the Federation of Musicians, through their representative, C. Karston, declared that all negotiations were off.

The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association and the Motion Picture Operators' Union have come to an agreement on the wage scale issue. Class A and Class B houses will pay a 10 per cent increase over the present scale. Class C will pay a 15 per cent increase. This scale covers a period of two years beginning September 1, 1925. This increase means an expenditure of between $60,000 and $70,000 to the Cleveland exhibitors.

Recall of the demand of the Musicians' Union, served on moving picture operators August 11th, for six months contracts covering musicians in orchestras, was approved at the meeting of the union at its headquarters on Sept. 1st in San Francisco.

Officials of the union refused to comment, other than to state, that a general feeling prevails that the controversy will be settled amicably.

The "silent drama" is not silent any more. The musicians' walkout in Omaha was settled September 4 after four silent nights in the Rialto and Sun theaters.

The wage dispute was settled September 4 after a long conference participated in by musicians headed by Rangval Olson, president, and Harry Goldberg representing the Sun and Harry Watts the Rialto and Strand.

The musicians had demanded $60 the year around, a considerable increase from their former $45 in summer and $50 in winter. The theatre managers countered with an offer of $52 a week, which was turned down.

The settlement now made provides for a three-year wage agreement which specifies $55 for the ensuing winter and $60 for the next two winters.

Labor troubles cropped up during the past week in both Schenectady and Albany, but with every indication that they will be smoothed out within the next few days, although they may result in Schenectady in a change of plans calling for the installation of orchestras in the State and Strand theatres in that city. Members of the orchestra are demanding $2 a week more, while organists in theatres without orchestras, are asking $90 a week instead of the $55 they are now receiving.

The strike of union musicians and stage hands at all DesMoines theatres following the refusal of the theatres to raise the wage scale did not take place. Monday, September 1, was the date set by the union for the theatre men to come to their terms but the union musicians did not leave any of the theatres; continuing to work with the expectation that arbitration would bring about settlement to the satisfaction of both sides. The union stage men are now working after having walked out for one day, despite the fact that agreement has not been reached.

Fox to Build First Run Theatre in Bronx

WILLIAM FOX, head of Fox Film Corporation and the Fox Circuit of theatres, has completed plans for the erection of a new theatre at East Tremont Ave., between Park and Washington Aves., the Bronx. The theatre will be directly across the street from the Crotona, which is also owned by Fox. The new house will have a seating capacity of more than four thousand five hundred, the announcement.

The theatre will be run along the same lines as the New Academy of Music, now being built, with presentations of operettas and operas in tabloid form in addition to big picture productions. The theatre will be equipped with a modern refrigerating system.

The entrance to the theatre lobby and business office will be on East Tremont Ave. There will also be an entrance to the theatre auditorium on the Park Ave. side. The frontage of the combined lots on East Tremont Ave. which are owned by the Treepark company is approximately ninety-seven feet.

through long hours of traveling and marching up to the front.

We have been made acquainted with the armament of battle, and its terrifying destructive power. We know what the soldiers are going to face when they finally get into the arena of the conflict. We see them spread out into a loose formation preparatory to entering the wood, infested by Germans.

A French soldier has previously thrown up his hands in horror at the thought of their doing aught but turn back from that horrible death-dealing region. The commanding officer of the troops listens to his prophecies of terrors and dangers. He smiles while he listens, and after the Frenchman is through with his talking and gesticulating, he says—"Well, my boys have come a long ways to fight, and I'm afraid that they would be a trifle disappointed if they turned back now." The Frenchman rushes off throwing his arms in the air, wagging his head, at the idea of such insanity.

The troops advance. Slowly, watchfully, steadily, a step at the time through the wood. Ears and eyes are strained. You can see every muscle taut and tense.

Suddenly you catch a glimpse of a German sniper in a tree in the distance. He raises his rifle and fires. The first shot, and the first victim. One of the American soldiers answers immediately with a rifle ball, and the German falls. The troops continue to move on as if nothing had happened—Pershing's organized mob, which knew too little about war to be frightened, and too much about pioneer courage to be daunted—even as they remain undaunted when their ranks are riddled by the fire of machine guns and shells as step by step, in a veritable death march, they go on into No Man's Land.

I feel that "The Big Parade" is a picture that deserves the consideration that I have given it in this article, because it is one of the season's big pictures—perhaps in certain of its qualities the biggest. The bulk of the audiences will, I believe, be keenly susceptible to it. It is a far-reaching achievement, the most important in the war line without a doubt since "The Four Horsemen." The only weakness in the film when I saw it, was the love interest, and that is because its culmination is rather conventionally treated. I have no doubt that it will be improved somewhat before the first public showing. I am conscious of the fact that the picture is going to be a very radical one for the small-town audience, but even in this case I believe that it has sufficient patriotic interest to prove popular. While there may be some troubles with the censors over details, "The Big Parade" as a whole is going to encounter very little difficulty. One important item—

Governor Would Support School System by Amusement and Luxury Tax

COMPLETE support for the public school system of the state by revenue derived solely from a special state tax on amusements and luxuries is being considered by Governer Samuel A. Baker of Missouri.

The Governor plans to submit his measure as an amendment to the state constitution at the general elections in November, 1926, and is now gathering data.

He contemplates supporting all of the public grade and high schools of the state through the tax as well as the higher state educational institutions like Missouri University, the five State Teachers Colleges, Lincoln University, the Missouri School for the Deaf at Fulton and the Missouri School for Blind in St. Louis.

Originally the Governor considered a special 2 mill levy on real and personal property as a means of obtaining additional revenue for the state school system.

It is probable that he will recommend a 5 or 10 per cent state tax on all amusement admissions such as motion picture, vaudeville, dramatic and burlesque theatres, baseball, football and soccer games, etc., and also on cigarettes, cigars and other luxuries.

One-third of all state revenues collected is now used for the public schools. Under Baker's plan the present taxes would be abolished and all funds needed for the schools obtained by cutting into the receipts of amusement places and the sale of luxuries.

Paramount Studio Celebrates

Long Island Plant Five Years Old on Sept. 11; 80 Features Filmed There

THE Paramount Long Island Studio will be five years old on September 11 and will celebrate the anniversary in the midst of the greatest activity it has housed since its founding. For on the date of its fifth birthday the Paramount plant in Long Island will have six companies at work on productions.

Since it was established five years ago the studio has turned out eighty feature length photoplays, among them some of the most notable the Paramount company has offered. It is regarded as one of the best equipped, if not the best, in the world. At the time of its opening the plant was considered a costly experiment, but the work which has been accomplished there has conclusively proved that pictures can be just as successfully made in New York as California.

The big plant has been busy continuously with the exception of one span of ten months, two years ago, when a surplus of Paramount production caused a cessation of activity. In pointing to the success of the eastern producing project, Paramount officials accord a generous share of the credit for its success to Edwin C. King, its general manager.

The first picture made there was filmed by John Robertson, who started work on "Sentimental Tommy" in September, 1920.

M-G-M to Make Fire Prevention Film

BY AN arrangement just concluded between Louis B. Mayer and Chief Jay W. Stevens, fire marshall of the state of California and head of the Pacific Coast Fire Prevention Bureau, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will produce a feature film in the interest of fire prevention.

There will be a feature production of unusual entertainment value and not merely a preachment, though it will strongly advocate closer attention to fire prevention. Leading players of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer forces will appear in the picture and a large percentage of the net proceeds from the picture are to be given to the International Association of Fire Chiefs for their prevention work and a portion of the sum realized will be used by fire departments in various communities for sick, benefit and pension funds.

Complete Photography on "Clodhopper"

Associated Exhibitors have completed photography on "The Clodhopper," the Oscar Price production starring Glenn Hunter. The production was made at the Universal Studios in Fort Lee, N. J., under the direction of Joseph Henaberry. The picture is now being cut and edited and will be ready for release in the near future.

Mildred Ryan has the leading feminine role opposite Hunter, while others in the cast include, Antrim Short, Margaret Irving, Citana Kamp, Beryl Halley, W. T. Hays, William Black, Marion Stephenson, Edward Poland, Isobel Vernon, George Graham and the dancing team of Bishop and Lynn.

De Sano Denies He Will Leave Schulberg

Marcel De Sano denies a persistent rumor that he will leave the directorial forces of B. P. Schulberg in the following statement:

"The report that I am leaving Mr. Schulberg is totally untrue. It is probably explained by the fact that following the completion of 'The Girl Who Wouldn't Work' I received four flattering offers from other organizations. The fact of the case is that I will continue to make Preferred Pictures for some time to come."

Prominent English Actors in Meighan Cast

Cecil Humphrey and Robert English, prominent English film actors, play important roles in support of Thomas Meighan in "Irish Luck," portions of which were filmed in Ireland recently. The actors are returning with the star to the United States to finish their parts at the Long Island studio, where this new Paramount starring vehicle for Meighan will be completed.

it is going to offer opportunities for a great musical score—one based to a large extent on those stirring songs which were associated with the period of the war. It arrives, too, at a propitious time, because the public, I feel, is just about ready for a production dealing both lightly and pathetically with soldier life during the conflict.

Beside Jack Gilbert, the leading player in the cast is Renee Adoree, but a chap by the name of Karl Dane, who does the part of the soldier who is killed, is going to make his everlasting reputation on the strength of his characterization. He is the real star.

Another war picture that merits high commendation in advance is "The Dark Angel." Ronald Colman has given his finest performance to date in this. His portrayal of the blind English soldier, who doesn't want to burden the girl whom he loves with his infirmity, is a splendid study in sacrifice as he interprets it, and Vilma Banky, as the heroine, is a newcomer of promising loveliness. She expresses a refinement in her character drawing which rather associates itself with that of Norma Shearer. Her acting is not quite so striking as her personality, but the general impression she evokes is very attractive. Colman's acting attains that height which may well be termed "big." He is going to be talked about, and more comparisons even than usual between his work and that of Jack Gilbert are bound to be made. Than which, there is just now probably no better stimulus for popular argument.

Douglas Fairbank's plans for his new buccaneering feature have been shaping up more rapidly lately, and ere this is printed he should be at work. Good news, perhaps, is the fact that he contemplates filming his production, "The Black Pirate," in seven reels instead of the customary ten or twelve. Doug feels that the story as it has been outlined can be told much more effectively in a shorter length, although it may stretch out during the filming.

The experiments with the color process, which were very exhaustive, have been brought to completion, and unless there is some last minute change, the entire picture is to be made that way. "Pirates suggest color to the imagination," declared Doug to me recently, "and I now feel that it would be impossible to film a story of them satisfactorily in black and white. We have never really had a pirate story as yet on the screen—with real pirates in all their picturesqueness. 'The Sea Hawk' was a great adventure story, great romance, but it was not a pirate story. I feel, therefore, that we have an absolutely clear field for what we are attempting."

There is no doubt that Doug has a great opportunity. Color is all but established for certain types of pictures, and if he proves the effectiveness of its use in this instance, a new vista will be opened up in the field of production. Whether, "The Black Pirate" will have the needful great moment or not is, of course, a question that can only be answered definitely when it is finally finished. Knowing Doug's invariably bright ingenuity, I imagine that it will have. It is an easy gamble, in any event, that his production is one that will be talked about.

Warners Start Production on "Fighting Edge"

Warner Brothers have started a new combination which co-features Kenneth Harlan and Patsy Ruth Miller. Their first picture, which has just gone into production is titled "The Fighting Edge." E. T. Lowe, Jr., and Jack Wagner adapted this William MeLeod Raine novel to the screen. It is the first Warner production to be directed by Henry Lehrman. Supporting Harlan and Miss Miller are Gayne Whitman, Charles Conklin, Pat Hartigan, Eugene Palette and Lew Harvey.

Company Coming to Make "Fifth Avenue"

Director Robert Vignola will shortly head a company east from Hollywood to make scenes in New York for "Fifth Avenue," an A. H. Sebastian production for Produeers Distributing Corporation release. It is said that the biggest actual street scenes ever made in the metropolis will feature the production.

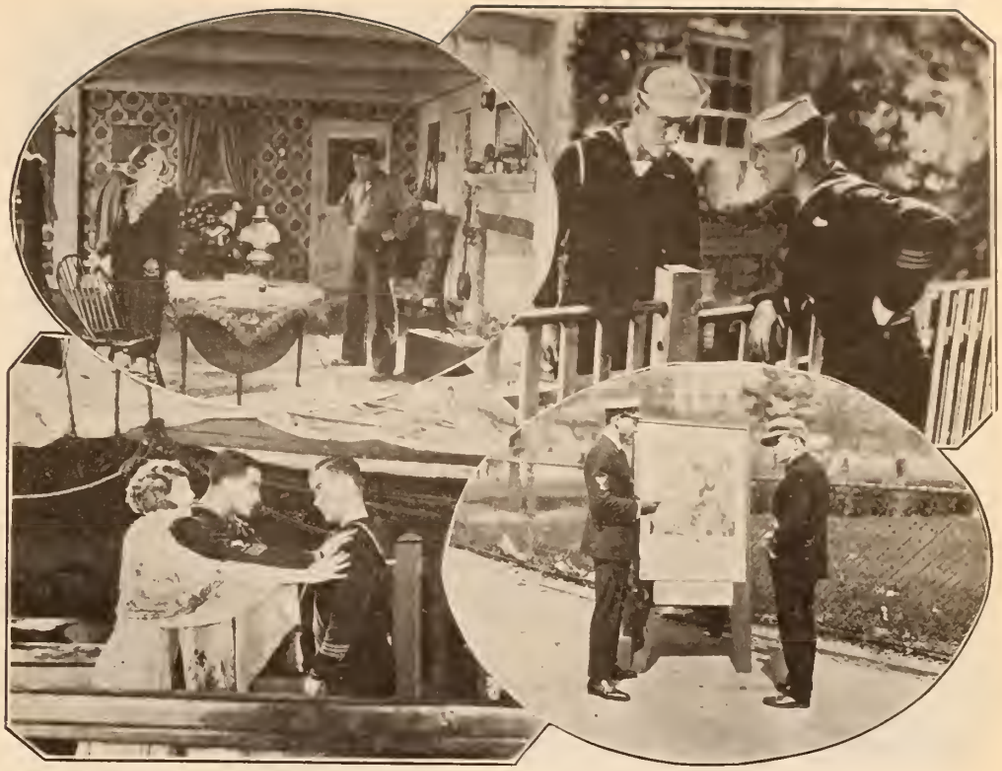
Color Sequence to Feature Gloria Swanson's Next

A color sequence will be among the features of Gloria Swanson's coming picture, "Stage Struck," which Alan Dwan is directing. Miss Swanson has the role of a poor little waitress who dreams she is a great actress. The color sequence is the dream.

Coleman Joins Lubitsch Cast for Warners

Warner Brothers have secured Ronald Coleman through arrangement with Samuel Goldwyn to play a prominent part in "Lady Windermere's Fan," the Ernst Lubitsch pieturization of Oscar Wilde's celebrated drama.

M-G-M Purchase Rights to Hatton Story



Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have purchased from Frederick and Fanny Hatton their first original story for the screen, "Single Beds." No director has as yet been selected, but the picture will go into production in the near future.

"Mare Nostrum" Now Practically Finished

ALICE TERRY has completed her role in "Mare Nostrum" which her husband, Rex Ingram, is producing for Metro-Goldwyn, and sailed on the Majestic arriving in New York September 8. Miss Terry is returning to the United States to visit her mother in California and to enjoy a short vacation after which she will go back to Europe to appear in Mr. Ingram's next picture.

Ingram suspended work at his studio in Nice to go to Paris to bid bon voyage to his wife but returned as soon as the Majestic sailed as he is in the midst of cutting his latest directorial effort.

"Mare Nostrum" has practically been completed. Tony Moreno, who played the leading male role, is planning to sail for America shortly after the middle of the month. Ingram himself will probably remain in France until after his next picture has been completed.

Ten from F. B. O. in October

Four Features and Six Short Subjects Due for the Exhibitors Next Month

F. B. O. has arranged a releasing schedule of ten pictures for the month of October. Four of these will be features and the other six short subjects.

"The Keeper of the Bees," a Gold Bond picture from a story by Gene Stratton-Porter heads the list of features. The cast is headed by Robert Frazer in the title role, with Gene Stratton, Clara Bow, Alyce Mills, Martha Mattox and Josef Swickard in support. It will be released October 18th.

The sixth Thomson production, tentatively titled "All Around the Frying Pan," based on the magazine story by Frank Richardson Pierce, will also be distributed on October 18th. Another for the same date will be the next of the Texas Ranger series starring Bob Custer, but as yet untitled. It is an Independent Pictures Corporation production.

"Heads Up," starring Maurice B. (Lefty) Flynn is scheduled for release October 25th. The story is by A. E. Barranger. It is being produced under the direction of Harry Garson.

The short subjects are headed by "Three Wise Goofs," the second Standard Fat Men Comedy, in which "Fatty" Karr, "Tiny" Alexander and "Kewpie" Ross, the three fattest men on the screen, are featured. "Three Wise Goofs" comes from the Joe Rock Studios, and will be distributed on October 4th.

The same day will see the distribution of a one reel novelty from the Bray Studios, as yet untitled, featuring Dinky Doodle.

"Or What Have You?" the third episode of "The Adventures of Mazie," starring Alberta Vaughn, will be released on October 11th. "The Adventures of Mazie" comes from the pen of Nell Martin and originally appeared in Top Noteh Magazine. Larry Kent, Kit Guard and Al Cooke support Miss Vaughn, while Ralph Ceder is directing.

A Blue Ribbon comedy as yet untitled, starring Alice Ardell, Joe Rock's latest Paris importation, will be shown to exhibitors on October 18th, while the third Bray cartoon, also untitled, will be released on the same day.

"Mazie Won't Tell," the fourth episode of the Mazie series, will be distributed on October 25th.

Colleen Moore to Start "Irene" in October

With "We Moderns" nearing completion, Colleen Moore is already preparing to start work on "Irene," her next production for First National. Shooting will probably get under way under the supervision of John E. MeCormick early in October.

John Francis Dillon will be retained as director of "Irene," the continuity for which is being prepared by Rex Taylor. Lloyd Hughes will again be Miss Moore's leading man. Others engaged for the new production include Charlie Murray, Kate Price and Dorothy Seastrom.

Radio Corp. of America Aids With Picture

First National had the assistance of the Radio Corporation of America in the filming of some of the scenes for "The Unguarded Hour." In this picture Milton Sills is an Italian Duke engaged in wireless experimentation. The Radio Corporation volunteered to fit out the laboratory and sent Joseph Wanbecker, technical expert, who planned the set.

Monte Blue in "The Limited Mail," in Warner Brothers production.

Pathe Fixes Weekly Releases

Final Chapter of Serial, "Play Ball," Heads Program for Week of Sept. 20

THE final chapter of the Patheserial, "Play Ball," heads the short-subject release program of Pathe for the week of September 20th. In addition there will be two Mack Sennett comedies, "Hurry Doctor" and "A Rainy Knight," a Hal Roach two-reeler, "Somewhere in Somewhere," and the usual weekly features.

"Hurry Doctor" is a two-reeler with Ralph Graves featured as an ambitious paper-hanger. Thelma Parr is the girl, Frank Whitson is Dr. Welland Strong, and Vernon Dent is a traffic cop of heroic proportions. Lloyd Bacon directed.

"A Rainy Knight" is another Mack Sennett two-reel comedy with an all-star cast, including Raymond McKee, Marvin Lobaeh, Eugenia Gilbert and Ruth Taylor. Lloyd Bacon also directed this subject.

"Somewhere in Somewhere" is a Hal Roach two-reel comedy, featuring Charlie Murray and Lucien Littlefield. James W. Horne directed under the supervision of F. Richard Jones, Supervising Director.

"A Home Plate Wedding," the tenth and final chapter of "Play Ball," brings this exciting Patheserial, written by Manager McGraw of the New York Giants, to a happy ending. Allene Ray as Doris Sutton agrees to become the bride of Walter Miller as Jack Rolling; while Mary Milnor as Mabelle Pratt joins hands with Wally Oettel as Rutger Farnsworth in "A Home Plate Wedding." Frank Leon Smith adapted this story for the screen and Spencer Bennett directed the ten-episode chapter play.

"Starting an Argument," a Grantland Rice "Sportlight,' pictures various phases of the ever-present arguments wherever sportsmen meet.

Pathe Review No. 138 presents an interesting diversity of subjects: "The Hand-Made Jungle," papier-mache animals and what makes them go; "The Canyon of Champagnole," a village in the Franco-Swiss Mountains in Pathecolor scenes; and "Brides of the Orient," one of the "Here Comes the Bride" series picturing quaint marriage customs.

"Nuts and Squirrels" is the title of the Paul Terry cartoon of the "Aesop's Film Fables" series. The release schedule for September 20th is completed by "Topics of the Day" and two issues of Pathe News.

Schulberg to Start Two Productions

B. P. Schulberg plans to start production next week on "Lew Tyler's Wives" and "Eden's Fruit." Marcel De Sano will handle direction of the former and Gasnier the latter.

"Lew Tyler's Wives" is an adaptation of the Wallace Irwin novel. It is being adapted by Lois Hutchinson. "Eden's Fruit," by John Goodrich, is now ready for Gasnier, the script having been completed by the author some weeks ago.

Many Screen Favorites in "Wages for Wives" Cast

The cast which has been assembled by Frank Borzage for "Wages for Wives," the Fox screen version of John Golden's stage success, "Chicken Feed," includes Jacqueline Logan, Creighton Hale, Earle Fox, Zasu Pitts, Margaret Livingston, David Butler, Dan Mason, Claude Gillingwater, Margaret Seddon and Tom Ricketts. Production on the play, which was written by Guy Bolton, has started at the studios in Los Angeles.

Archie Mayo is Signed for Special Directing

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has signed Archie L. Mayo for some special directorial work. For the past two years he has been directing two-reel subjects at the Christie studios and prior to that directed Lloyd Hamilton and Mermaid comedies. His work under the new contract will be in the nature of special directing of scenes calling for his particular line of ability.

Larry Semon Buys "Stop, Look and Listen"

Larry Semon has purchased screen rights to "Stop, Look and Listen," and will produce it as his first big comedy feature under Pathe release. The adaptation of this Charles Dillingham play has already been completed and preparations are now being made to shoot the initial scenes. Dorothy Dwan will play opposite the comedian, who will direct himself.

"Road to Yesterday" Now Being Edited

Photography has been completed by Cecil B. De Mille on "The Road to Yesterday" and he is now supervising the cutting of the picture, which will be released through Producers Distributing Corporation. Joseph Schildkraut, Jetta Goudal, Vera Reynolds, William Boyd, Casson Ferguson and Trixie Friganza have the featured roles.

P. D. C. Will Distribute "Rocky Moon"

Metropolitan Pictures has purchased screen rights to "Rocky Moon" and the picture will be made for release through Producers Distributing Corporation. The novel is by Barrett Willoughby. It will be filmed in part in the Hollywood studio and in Alaska, the natural locale called for in the story.

Columbia Retains "Thrill Hunter" Title

The title of "The Thrill Hunter," recently announced by Universal will be changed because of the fact that a picture of the same title is being released by Columbia Pictures Corporation with Dorothy Revier as the star. As soon as Universal learned that this condition existed they volunteered to change the title on their production.

"Freshman" Release Due September 20th

COINCIDENT with the opening of the college football season, Harold Lloyd's "The Freshman" will be released nationally through Pathe exchanges on September 20th. The production has been declared the most ambitious effort in the career of Lloyd. The story is of college life devised by Sam Taylor, John Grey, Ted Wilde and Tim Whelan, and was directed by Taylor and Fred Newmeyer.

Jobyna Ralston is again leading lady for Lloyd, while in the supporting cast are, Brooks Benedict, Pat Harmon, Hazel Keener, James Anderson and Joseph Harrington.

Neilan Starts Work on "The Great Love"

Marshall Neilan has started work on his next production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It is titled "The Great Love" and features Viola Dana opposite Bobby Agnew. In the supporting cast are Junior Coughlan, Malcolm Waite, Chester Conklin, and Frank Currier. The story is by Randall McKeever and was adapted to the screen by Neilan and Benjamin Glazer.

Abbett Renown Manager in Indianapolis

Renown Pictures, Inc., has appointed Ralph W. Abbett manager at Indianapolis. He will make his headquarters at 432 North Illinois Street. Abbett is well known in the central division. He entered the film business with Universal as salesman in Indianapolis in 1912 and was made manager of the office after two years of road work.

Five Episodes Completed on "Flame Fighter"

Photography has been completed on the first five episodes of Beacon Film Corporation's "The Flame Fighter," which Robert Dillon is producing. Herbert Rawlinson is starred in this serial play. A print of the first episode was received in the Rayart New York office this week.

Douglas Gilmore Signed to Long Contract

Douglas Gilmore has been signed to a long term contract by Metro-Golwyn-Mayer and becomes a member of that stock company to play important roles in forthcoming releases this Fall. Gilmore only recently concluded playing the leading role in the stage success, "White Cargo."

Lloyd Hamilton Laid Up With Infected Foot

Lloyd Hamilton, Educational comedy star, is taking a rest from studio work in a Hollywood hospital where he is being treated for an infected foot. Physicians advised the comedian to give the infected member a rest after he had completed "The Movies," his first pieture for the new season.

Marion Davies Signs Long Contract

MARION DAVIES has signed a new contract under which she will appear in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures for a number of years. The original contract called for the making of but one picture for this company, but following the completion of "Lights of Old Broadway," directed by Monta Bell, a new arrangement was entered into whereby Miss Davies will soon start work at the Culver City Studios on the first of a series of Cosmopolitan pictures for M-G-M.

"Lights of Old Broadway" is scheduled for release in October. It is based on the Laurence Eyre stage success, "Merry Wives of Gotham," and was adapted for the screen by Carey Wilson. Conrad Nagel plays opposite the star.

First National Finishes Four

Photography Completed on Features, While Five Others Enter Production

PHOTOGRAPHY was completed last week by First National on four feature releases, with the exception of a few clean-up shots, and work is scheduled to start on five new features by the end of next week.

The four pictures completed are Colleen Moore's starring vehicle, "We Moderns," "Memory Lane," "The Beautiful City" and "The New Commandment." The stories going into production are "Ceasar's Wife," "Joanna With a Million," "Rainbow Riley," "Just Suppose" and "Bluebeard's Seven Wives."

"We Moderns," with Colleen Moore, is ready to go into the cutting room. In the supporting cast are Jack Mulhall, Claude Gillingwater, Dorothy Seastrom, Louis Payne and Cleve Morison.

John M. Stahl finished photography on his own original story, "Memory Lane." Cutting was due to get under way this week. In the cast are Eleanor Boardman, Conrad Nagel, William Haines, Dot Farley, John Standing, Kate Price and Earl Metcalf.

"The Beautiful City" is an Inspiration picture with Richard Barthelmess as the star. Cutting and editing are now under way.

"The New Commandment" is Robert T. Kane's initial production for First National. It is an adaptation from the Frederick Palmer novel, "Invisible Wounds." Howard Higgin directed and in the cast are Blanche Sweet, Ben Lyon, Claire Eames, Holbrook Blinn, Dorothy Cummings, Effie Shannon, Pedro de Cordoba, George Cooper, Diana Kane and Lucius Henderson.

The first of the new stories to go into production on September 3rd was the Corinne Griffith picture, "Ceasar's Wife," with Irving Cummings directing. Edwin Carewe started work on "Joanna With a Million," with Dorothy Mackaill in the leading role. C. C. Burr got under way with Johnny Hines in "Railbow Riley," from Thompson Buchanan's play, "The Cub."

Two pictures are scheduled to start next week. They are the Inspiration picture with Richard Barthelmess, "Just Suppose," and the Robert T. Kane production, "Bluebeard's Seven Wives."

Lon Chaney's Next to Be "Mocking Bird"

Lon Chaney's next starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be "The Mocking Bird," an original story by Tod Browning, who will direct the production. The story is said to be of the Limehouse district of London, with an underworld plot and a strong love theme.

William Wellman Engaged by Columbia

William Wellman has been signed by Columbia Pictures to direct a feature starring Dorothy Revier. Wellman has been engaged in picture production for the past ten years, starting as an assistant director. He directed features for Fox Film and other big producers.

M. G. M. Assigns Leading Roles

Leading Players Are Engaged to Play in Productions Soon to Get Under Way

A NUMBER of important roles have been assigned to leading players in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions. Norman Kerry has been signed to play the leading role in Rex Beach's "The Barrier," which is to be directed by George Hill. The picture is scheduled to go into production this month.

Rosita Ramirez, Cuban beauty and granddaughter of General Colixto Garcia, makes her motion picture debut in Rex Ingram's production of "Mare Nostrum." Ingram met the Cuban beauty in Europe and made a screen test of her. It was so satisfactory he cast her for the role of Pepita. Alice Terry and Antonio Moreno have the leading roles in "Mare Nostrum."

Another selection made by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was that of Edmund Lowe for the leading male role in Elinor Glyn's production of "The Only Thing." This is an original story written by Madame Glyn directly for the screen. Lowe was borrowed from the Fox Film Company, to whom he is under contract.

Constance Bennett has been engaged to play the role of Sally in Edmund Goulding's production of "Sally, Irene and Mary." Miss Bennett, daughter of Richard Bennett, has been in the east making a series of pictures, but will leave immediately for the west coast and will start work in the Goulding production within the next few days.

Actual shooting of La Boheme, starring Lillian Gish, has been started at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios under the direction of King Vidor. John Gilbert plays opposite the star, while other roles are in the hands of Renee Adoree, Roy D'Arcy, Karl Dane and Edward Everett Horton.

Associated Starts Work on "North Star"

Associated Exhibitors have started production at the F. B. O. studios in Hollywood on "North Star," starring Strongheart, the wonder dog, under the direction of Paul Powell. The story was adapted for the screen by Charles Horan from the novel by Rufus King.

The appearance of Strongheart on the Associated Exhibitors program followed an arrangement made by Howard Estabrook with Miss Jane Murfin, owner of the dog, whereby the canine star will be loaned to the producer for his new series of outdoor pictures, all of which will be released by Associated Exhibitors.

Alice Ardell and Chester Conklin in scenes from "Lame Brains," a two-reel comedy released by F. B. O.

Fox Production Units All Busy

Various Companies Ahead of Schedule Planned for the West Coast Studios

FOX production units are well ahead of their production schedules, but there is no slackening of the pace set at the West Coast studios. In fact the various companies are busier now than they have been at any time during the season.

With "Lazybones" completed, Frank Borzage has started shooting on his second Fox picture, "Wages for Wives," based on the John Golden stage success, "Chicken Feed." He has selected a cast including Jacqueline Logan, Creighton Hale, Zasu Pitts, Earle Foxe, David Butler, Claude Gillingwater, Margaret Seddon, Dan Mason and Tom Ricketts.

John Ford has left for Jackson's Hole, Wyoming, with a crew numbering more than a hundred to start filming "Three Bad Men."

Tom Mix has just finished "The Yankee Senor," scheduled as his second starring vehicle of the season and is engaged in casting for his next, as yet untitled.

"The Silver Treasure," Fox screen version of Joseph Conrad's "Nostromo," has just been finished under the direction of Rowland V. Lee and is now in the cutting room. George O'Brien is Nostromo.

Henry Otto has finished filming the fantasy sequences in "The Ancient Mariner," based on Samuel Taylor Coleridge's poem.

Buck Jones is well along on the season's schedule. He is now in the midst of filming "The Desert's Price," based on William MacLeod Raine's novel, under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke.

Casting has started on "The First Year," one of the John Golden stage successes, in which Matt Moore will play the leading male role.

George O'Brien has been selected as the dashing young cavalry officer hero of "The Golden Strain," first of the Peter B. Kyne stories.

'Phantom' Opens in New York

Premiere of Universal Spectacle Attracts Capacity Audience to Astor Theatre

UNIVERSAL'S new super-production "The Phantom of the Opera" had its New York premiere at the Astor Theatre, Sunday night, September 6. The performance which was attended by a capacity audience, took its place with the notable motion picture "first nights" staged on Broadway.

An elaborate lobby decoration, featuring a dungeon-like interior designed by the Eastman Studios, New York, carried out the atmosphere of the mystery story. Special interior decorations were installed in the Astor and the vivid colorings were further stressed by the red uniforms worn by the ushers. There was a ballet number, staged by Albertina Rasch, and the orchestra, which rendered the special music score was under the direction of Eugene Conte, composer of the accompaniment. An added feature of the presentation was the "phantom" produced by Thurston, famous magician.

Among those who were present at the premiere were many representatives of foreign governments, including Sir Harry Armstrong, consul general of Great Britain, and Lady Armstrong; M. Mongendre, consul general of France; M. Bronget, consul of France; Senor Don Mariano Vidal, acting consul for Spain. Prominent motion picture officials and screen celebrities were also present.

"Wandering Footsteps" to Be Third Banner Release

Henry Ginsberg, distributor of Banner productions, announces that the third release in the series of Banner pictures will be "Wandering Footsteps" instead of "The Checkered Flag," originally announced for that position on the schedule. "Wandering Footsteps" will be released October 15. Featured in the cast are Estelle Taylor, Bryant Washburn, Alec B. Francis, Frankie Darro and Eugenie Besserer. The work was adapted from the Charles Sherman novel "A Wise Son," and was produced under the direction of Phil Rosen.

Promotions Announced in F. B. O. Ranks

A number of promotions are announced in the organization of the Film Booking Offices. S. D. Weisbaum, manager of the exchange in Denver has been made exchange manager in San Francisco, and W. E. Matthews, former manager at Portland now heads the Denver exchange. H. F. Moore, salesman in San Francisco succeeds Matthews in Portland. All three of the appointees have been with the company for several years.

Valli and Hersholt to Be Co-Featured by Moomaw

Universal has loaned Virginia Valli and Jean Hersholt to Lewis F. Moomaw, who will co-feature these two Universal players in a production to be filmed in Portland, Ore., for release by another company. Miss Valli, who has been playing in pictures abroad will go to Portland upon her return to this country next week. Hersholt will accompany the producer to Portland, where production is scheduled to start soon.

Ethel Wales Cast for Role in "Penalty of Jazz"

Ethel Wales has been selected for a prominent part in "The Penalty of Jazz," a forthcoming Waldorf feature for Columbia Pictures with Dorothy Revier in the featured role.

World Premiere of "Pony Express" in Frisco

THE world premiere of "The Pony Express," James Cruze's latest production for Paramount, took place at the Imperial Theatre, San Francisco on the evening of September 5th. The event was attended by screen luminaries and notables in every walk of life.

The picture, an epic of California and offered as Cruze's sequel to "The Covered Wagon" was named by the Diamond Jubilee photoplay and will play a part in the celebration commemorating the seventy-fifth anniversary of California's admission into the Union. Senator Samuel Shortridge made the closing talk preceding the showing of the picture. The usual huge crowds attracted to premieres to get a glimpse of the stars and celebrities packed Market Street and held up traffic. The production was heartily acclaimed by the first night audience.

Exhibitors Service Bureau

The nightmare idea was carried out in cubist fashion in Manager Walter League's lobby for "Beggar on Horseback" (Paramount) at the Strand theatre, Memphis. Brilliant color in odd shapes and designs made the display one that couldn't be overlooked.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Varied Campaign on "Her Sister From Paris"

Exploitation on "Her Sister From Paris," at the Empress theatre, Owensboro, Ky., included a 10-foot banner, cut-outs from 24-sheets, and a five-foot cut-out made of beaver board, as well as extra newspaper advertising, and an overhead billboard.

A telegram from the First National representative at Louisville was used verbatim several days before the three day showing, calling attention to the fact that Owensboro was getting the second Kentucky showing on "Her Sister From Paris."

A lighted billboard over the marquee carried posters announcing the coming attraction half a week ahead of the showing.

A Sunday lobby showing included the hat-box cut-out made and painted by a local artist, Herbert Williams, two cut-outs from 24-sheets, and frames. The ten-foot banner went up Saturday night when lobby display was fixed for Sunday showing. These banners are huge and can be seen coming and going for blocks.

The hat-box cut-out was the same on both sides and during the showing was placed on the curbing, with cut-outs turned one to the street and one to the pavement. Connie's bandbox was done in red and white stripes, with lettering in black.

Manager G. M. Pedley found this layout something new for his patrons.

Twin Contest in Raton on "Ten Commandments"

Although there is nothing in "The Ten Commandments" to inspire the idea of a Twin Contest, nevertheless Al. Birch, Paramount exploiteer for the Denver territory, put on a twin contest at Raton, N. M., when the picture played at the Shuler, which had Raton and all the rest of the territory burned up with curiosity trying to find out how many twins there were; who they were; how thin they were, and how fat they were. That's the way the contest was staged. Not only did every pair of twins that presented themselves at the box-office of the Shuler get a pair of tickets free, but there were cash prizes for the prettiest, the fattest, the thinnest, the oldest, and the youngest twins.

The Raton Daily Reporter tie-up with the theatre carrying several amusing human interest stories about the various types of twins applying for the cash prizes which were scaled from $5 for the youngest, to $20 for the prettiest pair of girl twins between 18 and 20 years of age.

"Greed" Passes to Those Opening Bank Account

For every new savings account opened at the Oil City, Pa., National Bank, during the week of the showing of "Greed" at the Venango theatre, two tickets were given away in accordance with terms arranged by Norman W. Pyle, Metro-Goldwn exploiteer, who advertised the offer prominently in the local dailies and also in the windows of the bank. A teaser campaign ran in the press for a week preceding the premiere.

The lobby was decorated with cut-outs and stuffed money bags illuminated by green lights. Twenty-four-sheets were posted throughout the entire county and brought much business into town. Six-sheets, one-sheet, and window cards were prominently displayed throughout the downtown district.

A trailer was used in the theatre and 100 inches of extra advertising space was contracted for. Manager Marks collaborated actively with Exploiteer Pyle throughout this campaign.

"Light of Western Stars" Given Beauty Tie-up

By tying-up with the "Miss Oklahoma City" local beauty contest, during the showing of "The Light of Western Stars," Manager Pat McGee of the Criterion cut in on the front page publicity given the event.

This was accomplished by having a special cameraman take motion pictures of the choosing of "Miss Oklahoma City." The camera carried a sign advising that the film would be shown at the Criterion the next day. This stunt caused a lot of favorable comment.

In addition to showing the special film, Manager McGee had "Miss Oklahoma City" appear on the Criterion stage the last two days of "The Light of Western Stars."

Cosmetic Showing on "The Slave of Fashion"

Crowds gathered around the window of a Standard Drug store in Cleveland, O., recently, in which C. C. Deardourff, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, had placed an attractive young woman in negligee to demonstrate the correct use of cosmetics in connection with the appearance of "A Slave of Fashion" at the Stillman theatre. The young woman was attended at her toilet table by a smartly costumed colored maid.

Two other young women, equally attractive, each having a small dog painted on either leg just below the knee, strolled through the town's busiest section with announcements to the effect that this new style had been inspired by the new film, "A Slave of Fashion," at the Stillman. A special story with photographs broke into the press on this stunt. Other special stories were carried by the Plaindealer, the Press and the News.

One hundred and fifty special cards were carried on the street car fronts, and the town was lavishly posted. A teaser campaign initiated the active press campaign which was waged, and there was a special lobby display. A trailer was used at the theatre.

Palette Display Stand for "The Painted Lady"

For his showing of "The Painted Lady" at the Rialto, Augusta, Manager C. F. Creslin used a large cut-out of an artist's palette on an easel in the center of lobby.

On palette was painted the head of a man facing a pasted cut-out of Dorothy Mackaill. Daubs of various colors ornamented the palette, which also bore the wording: "The Painted Lady" with Geo. O'Brien and Dorothy Mackaill.

Kings Theatre Garden, St. Louis, took a 24-sheet cut-out of Tom Mix and built a hat over it for "The Lucky Horseshoe" (Fox).

Handkerchief Stunt Boosts "As No Man Has Loved"

An old but never-failing interest arouser was used by the Fox exploitation forces for the Cleveland run of "As No Man Has Loved." This consisted of neat linen handkerchiefs enclosed in white envelopes, with the envelopes carrying the line "For Ladies Only." In one corner of the handkerchief was imprinted:

"For a good cry go to B. F. Keith's Palace theatre, beginning Sunday July 19th. "As No Man Has Loved," greatest love story ever told.

hile the device has been used before, it is nevertheless a telling exploitation medium, inasmuch as the theatre had difficulty keeping stocked with the handkerchiefs, so great was the demand for them.

Diversified Campaign for "Beggar on Horseback"

"Beggar on Horseback," playing the Strand, Memphis, was the recipient of extensive and forceful campaigning at the hands of Manager Walter League, who played up the 'dream' angle in all his exploitation.

Campaign was launched two weeks in advance, with trailer on screen. Two thousand "Morning-Evenings" were distributed by newsboys two days prior to opening. They also made all outgoing trolleys at principal intersections during the five o'clock rush with "Extra Special Free Extra." A special banner was displayed in lobby two weeks in advance, and afterwards moved to lobby of leading hotel where it remained throughout run.

An exceptionally fine window tie-up was effected with the Houck Piano Company made up of various musical instruments and featuring sheet music with the word 'dream' in its title. A large card on the attraction, with a number of stills and photos from the picture were prominently displayed in the window.

Another window display with a local jeweler exhibited beautiful pieces of jewelry with a card announcing the photoplay at the Strand. A tie-up with the Betty Brown Candy Stores resulted in a window display carrying a large card advertising the attraction along with attractively mounted display cards of a fantastic nature.

With the co-operation of Station WMC, a radio dream contest was held, the station announcing that 20 pairs of Strand tickets, good for "The Beggar on Horseback," would be awarded to the persons submitting the best account of their funniest or strangest dream. The passes proved good bait, the contest going over with a 'bang.'

Manager Oscar White of the Liberty theatre, Greenwood, S. C., built this front on "Just a Woman" (First National) from odds and ends of beaver board at trifling cost. Natural vines were used on the front of the small "house" in the centre.

"Havoc" Showing Boosted by Automobile Parade

An outstanding feature of the exploitation campaign that accompanied the St. Louis showing of "Havoc" was an auto parade that toured the streets for several days preceding the showing.

The auto parade was made possible by a tie-up arrangement with the Durant Motor Car company, who loaned fifteen new Star cars for the stunt. The cars bore large banners reading: "You Won't Play Havoc If You Buy A Star," "Buy A Star And You Won't Play Havoc With Your Bank Roll," etc. Other banners also carried the names of the cast, and play date. Two laundry wagons, one car advertising a shock-absorber and two Chevrolets also took part in the turnout. The laundry wagons carried signs reading: "The National Laundry Won't Play Havoc With Your Wash," with the car demonstrating the shock-absorber,and the Chevolets carrying similar Havoc signs.

The great length of this stunt touring all the principal thoroughfares attracted great attention, and undoubtedly contributed largely to the interest in "Havoc" at the Kings and Rivoli theatres.

Striking front display for "Le Monde Perdu" ("The Lost World"), First National's picture now in an extended run at Reginald Ford's Cameo theatre, Paris. The dinosaur was lighted from the inside.

Novelty Wedding Rings as "Marry Me" Advertising

Thomas Shrader, manager of the Olympic theatre, Pittsburgh, put over an effective campaign for "Marry Me" when it played there. The outstanding feature of the campaign was a small envelope on which was printed, "If he says Marry Me tell him here's the ring." Then followed the name of the theatre, play date, title, etc. In this envelope was a small wedding ring.

A few foot lines in the Sunday newspaper advertisement stated that every lady attending the matinees at the Olympic would receive a wedding ring free.

Punch Served in Lobby as "Old Home Week" Stunt

FOR the two days showing of "Old Home Week," patrons of the Sunset theatre, Ft. Lauderdale, were treated to "punch" which was served in the lobby by three girls.

In addition to the conventional campaign and a special lobby befitting "Old Home Week," Manager J. L. Denton had the theatre's orchestra play in front of the playhouse each night from 6:45 to 7:15, their performance drawing crowds.

Fire Chief Ties Up With "Smouldering Fires"

The Fire department of Wilmington, Del., entered wholeheartedly into the campaign which Al Feinman, Universal exploiter, arranged for "Smouldering Fires" at the Arcadia theatre. Members of the department personally distributed 2,500 cards to factories, department stores, cigar shops, lofts, etc., with the following copy on them:

"Notice! Be careful with smoking stubs, lighted matches, open flames, gasoline and oil tanks. Don't put ashes in wooden receptacles. Smouldering fires always result from carelessness. 'Let the citizens be the fire preventers and the firemen the fire fighters.' Bureau of Fire, William J. Lutz, Chief. See 'Smouldering Fires' at the Arcadia theatre."

Feinman also addressed letters to the secretaries of the four women's clubs in Wilmington asking them to notify their members at the next meeting of the presentation of "Smouldering Fires." He referred to it as "a woman's picture for the women of Wilmington."

A tie-up with the Wilmington Evening Journal brought about a contest for essays on "What is the happiest age for men and women to marry?" There were two cash prizes of $5 each and tickets for each contestant whose contribution was published.

Display set up in Evansville, Ind., for the engagement of "The Sporting Venus" (Metro-Goldwyn) at the Strand theatre in that city.

Clever Auto Banner Copy for "The Mad Whirl"

A clever automobile banner for "The Mad Whirl" was designed by F. Raoul Cleaver, the exploitation man working out of Universal's Detroit exchange. It was used in Grand Rapids, Mich., for the "Mad Whirl" engagement at the Isis theatre.

The banner read: In The Mad Whirl of Traffic the lady driver needs the new snappy Essex Six. Drive Your Essex to see "The Mad Whirl" at the Isis theatre—Now.

Through this tie-up with the Hudson-Essex distributors, the Isis had Essex coaches carrying this banner on the street all day at no charge to the theatre whatsoever.

Police Association Helps "Heart of a Siren" Run

George J. Schade, of the Schade theatre, Sandusky, O., had the membership of the Ohio Police Association — wives, children, friends and all—as guests one evening not long since. There was something like two hundred of them; more than four hundred taking in everybody. "The Heart of a Siren" was the attraction.

The chiefs were holding a convention at Cedar Point, a Lake Erie summer resort across Sandusky bay from Sandusky. Schade's theatre party was down on the official program. And by reason of its being on the program Schade and the Schade got a lot of newspaper notice that they wouldn't have gotten otherwise.

Everybody wanted to be at the Schade because it was known that the chiefs were to be there. Those who didn't want to be on hand for that particular reason had another, to wit:

Schade had offered a police dog pup to the person getting the most votes in a popularity contest arranged to further the interest of "Tracked in the Snow Country," the attraction that gave way to "The Heart of a Siren." There was much interest in the competition.

The winner of the pup was to be announced at the conclusion of the presentation of "The Heart of a Siren" that had been arranged for the chiefs and their party.

The pup went to Chief C. Al Weingates of the Sandusky police department, who received something like 2,900 votes to about 2,800 for the party second in the race and 2,700 for the party third.

Liar Contest Exploitation for "Lightnin'" Run

An exploitation feature of the Cleveland showing of "Lightnin'" was a Liars Contest that created no end of amusement, and incidentally directed a lot of extra attention to the picture.

As everybody knows, "Lightnin'" Bill Jones, from whom the picture takes its name, is one of those likeable old characters who, no matter how big a tale is told him, can always top it with a more impressive, if not entirely truthful tale.

Arthur Swanke's shadow-box for "The Lady" (First National) at his Rialto theatre, El Dorado, Ark., recently.

John R. Royal, the manager of Keith's Palace, that housed the showing, acting in concert with the Cleveland Plain Dealer, and the Fox exploitation forces, ran a series of announcements a week before "Lightnin'" opened, giving all details of the contest. Under a heading of "Here Is One Time When Lying Will Be Rewarded," a bid was made for the cooperation of all those having elastic conceptions of the verities. Ananias, Baron Munchausen and all of history's great prevaricators proved that they have many exponents carrying on their work in Cleveland, if the deluge of "lies" which poured in on the contest judges is any criterion.

For the most gigantic falsehood turned in, $10 was awarded. For the second biggest "lie," $7.50. For the third best tale, $5, and twelve pairs of seats for the next twelve best. The judges who decided on the output of the Loyal Order of Myth Makers was John R. Royal, W. Ward Marsh and the Fox exploitation representative.

Home Products Displayed on "Old Home Week"

One of the many splendid features of Manager E. B. Roberts' elaborate campaign on "Old Home Week" at the Majestic, Austin, was the exhibit of Home Products staged in the lobby of the theatre during the picture's run.

Merchant displays ranged from machinery to real estate, the latter firm exhibiting a miniature plaster of Paris building model. Caldwell's Products gave away samples of potato chips, potato salad, popcorn, peanuts, etc. All the merchants who displayed in the theatre lobby had a full page truck in the Austin American on the opening day of the picture. This page carried a heading which tied-up Old Home Week directly with the picture coming to the Majestic.

The lobby was decorated in white and purple, the City's colors, and all lights were dyed to carry out this effect. Through the courtesy of the Mayor, the official City Flag was artistically draped in the lobby. A copy of the Mayor's proclamation, in which he designated week of June 28th as Old Home Week, appropriately mounted, occupied a conspicuous place in the theatre lobby.

At the Chamber of Commerce picnic, attended by 500 members and their families, Manager Roberts distributed a special attendance card, specially numbered. This card was a direct tie-up with "Old Home Week" coming to the Majestic.

Puzzles Introduced as Ad for "Dixie Handicap"

When "The Dixie Handicap" played recently at the Lyceum theatre in Thief River Falls, Minn., Morris Abrms, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, discovered that cross word puzzles had never been used in the town in connection with exploitation and induced both local papers to run contests with free tickets to the picture as prizes. This innovation proved immensely popular and exploited the picture effectively.

Two thousand heralds were distributed in addition and extra display space was taken in the press. Slides were also used to popularize the picture and the town was well posted.

Queen of Tresses Contest Given "Pretty Ladies"

A Queen of Tresses contest proved an exceedingly popular feature of the elaborate campaign waged by W. J. Murphy, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer and the management of Loew's Warfield in San Francisco when "Pretty Ladies" opened there recently. The first prize for the most beautifully dressed head of hair was a week's vacation at Hotel Capitola, a vacation outfit contributed by the Emporium Sportswear Shop and a three weeks' engagement under Fanchon and Marco. The second prize was $50 in cash, and there were 15 additional prizes.

Eight elaborate window displays each featuring a number of artistically mounted stills were secured, while street cars carried cards exploiting the showing also. Five hundred strips reading "Pretty Ladies, Take a Ride With Me" were distributed among automobilists and proved popular, drivers pasting them up eagerly on their windshields and windows. A large number of brilliantly colored 24-sheets were posted, together with many other posters of varied sizes.

Rare Mechanical Display for "The Speed Spook"

The noteworthy feature of Manager Rodney Bush's lobby for "The Speed Spook," playing the Galax, Birmingham, was the mechanical nature of the display, which consisted of a huge racing car cut out of Upson board with a white spook standing behind it, pointing a warning finger. The wheels of the car were made separate from the centerpiece and mounted on fan blades which actuated the wheels to a speed attained by an ordinary electric fan. A stiff piece of leather placed on back of car, where one end of it hit the protruding fan blade on each revolution, produced a motor effect that even attracted the attention of motorists. The car was painted a light chrome yellow with a blue streak running the length of the body. As an attention getter, the display couldn't be excelled.

Animated display piece in "The Speed Spook" (C. C. Burr) by Rodney Bush, manager of the Galax theatre, Birmingham, Ala. Electric fans made the wheels revolve and one fan slapping a leather flap made the engine noise.

Enviable word-of-mouth advertising and newspaper publicity was accorded the picture through the Post newsboys who were the guests of the management at an evening performance of "The Speed Spook." In addition to the advance stories given the invitation, the Post expressed its gratitude in a special article on closing day of photoplay.

Branford's Wow Contest on "Heart of a Siren"

D. J. Shepard, the live managing director of the Bradford theatre of Newark, N. J., was quick to see the merits of the Wow Contest exploitation stunt arranged for "The Heart of a Siren," and arranged with the Newark Star-Eagle to conduct the contest during the engagement of this production of his theatre.

The Star-Eagle gave "The Heart of a Siren Contest" space on its front page for the entire week prior to the opening of the feature an dincreased the space each day of the engagement as the contest gained momentum. The novel contest proved extremely popular with Star-Eagle readers and the hundreds of clever and humorous definitions submitted made the selection of winners a difficult task.

Twelve Star-Eagle trucks carried banners reading "Wow! Follow the Star-Eagle Brandford Tehatre Contest" all during the contest. The newspaper campaign on contest and picture was backed up by atractive window displays in the windows of leading book merchants which were arranged through E. P. Dutton & Co. assisting in the contests.

The first prize of $25 given by the Branford theatre was won by Gladys B. Machter for her definition of a wow as "something unexpected, unrivalled, or extraordinary, that prompts a spontaneous outburst of enthusiastic approval." The set of Roget's Thesaurus (donated as second prize by E. P. Dutton & Co.) was won by C. T. Johnson who described a wow as "That which excited an extraordinary enthusiastic outburst of good feeling." The Star-Eagle published fifteen of the best definitions received each day and they were awarded pairs of seats for "The Heart of a Siren" at the Branford theatre. Many of the definitions sent in were written in a humorous vein exciting not a few laughs and many smiles with their slang wording.

Attractively arranged window display for "Lost—a Wife" (Paramount) when that photoplay showed at the Rialto theatre, Chattanooga, of which J. L. Cartwright is manager.

Independents Go Through With Big Programs

By Thomas C. Kennedy

MORE than 300 independent productions will be offered on the market this season, according to estimates based on actual accomplishments at studios in the east and on the west coast to date. To a precedented degree the independents are adhering to the production plans announced by them in the spring and features of every type, from the high-class modern society play down to the low cost westerns will be available to exhibitors from state rights operators this year.

The number of features from the independents this year exceeds by far that for any previous twelvemonth. Taking 300 as the total —and, in view of the large number of producers who are well along with their schedules, that is a conservative figure—the volume of state rights pictures this year is fifty per cent. greater than that of 1924-25, when there were about 200 features, and 100 per cent. greater than in 1923-24, a period during which there were less than 150 independently released features. In 1922-23 the state rights features totaled slightly more than 100.

The independent producers have made heavy investments this year and with a majority of the territories sold to exchanges the crucial period approaches as the booking season opens. Whether the producers will do as well proportionately on an increased volume, as they did last year, when many of the leading organizations in the field turned a neat profit on their investments, remains to be seen—the exhibitors with their play dates being the factors which will determine that.

The producers and distributors are in an optimistic mood. They have received a high order of encouragement in the success achieved in their producing activities to date. To begin with the better established firms are on a sounder financial basis than ever before, for money is available at reasonable rates. Their studio organizations have functioned competently and with a minimum of waste. And finally and most importantly, the pictures so far made have measured up to a very high standard. The initial productions of several of the companies have been shown and have received the highest praise from screen critics and trade observers.

While there is optimism, and just cause for it probably, there is also now a spirit of watchful waiting on the part of the producers. The exchanges are beginning to sell to the exhibitors and the results of those campaigns will tell the tale of whether or not the exhibitors want the state rights producers to survive on their present rather flourishing basis or not.

The year will be a veritable bonanza for the exhibitors seeking products from the independent channels. With a great volume of pictures from which to select there will be no difficulty, or should not, in obtaining high-class programs at fair prices. The majority of the producers have striven for quality pictures and with so many attempting to hit the mark it is reasonable to suppose that the supply of good attractions, up to the present day standards of feature pictures, will be plentiful.

Because of the number and quality of pictures which will be offered on the state rights market this year the exhibitors will be in a stronger position than ever before to book for quality and profit. An imposing list of box office names have been attracted to the state rights productions and books and plays of some reputation are among the literary properties which have been selected for production. In fact the independents have taken a bold step forward and even now are planning to attempt even more ambitious programs next year. Whether these plans ever materialize will depend upon the circulation they can get for their pictures this season. It has been said that an increase of 25 per cent in the number of play dates over last year will suffice to see the independents through on their present schedules and afford them the encouragement necessary for them to make an even better showing as producers of box office attractions next year.

The following list gives the number of features which will be made this year by the prominent state rights producers:

Anchor	16
Arrow	32
Artclass	24
Astor	13
Aywon	18
C. C. Burr	1
Chadwick	17
Columbia	18
Davis	70
Ginsburg	12
Independent	18
Ivan	4
Jans	6
Rayart	36
Schulberg	18
Sunset	13
Tiffany	12
Truart	14

To this list must be added productions from other companies who have not announced definite programs but will nevertheless make several features. The list above shows a total of 342, so a shrinkage, which is likely, will still leave the number above 300.

A fact which has been commented upon this year is the absence of "orphan features". For the past few seasons these "orphans" have appeared with considerable regularity. Made by some organization formed to produce a single picture "with an idea" or with some particular exploitation angle, these orphans usually drift about the market seeking a release and with their backers hoping against hope to place them and thus get a start in the production field. The backers of such enterprises have been howled down by the bigger independent producers as fly-by-nights and to the operations of many them has been laid the blame for the difficulty which the independents formerly experienced in getting financial backing. The independents of today form a sort of "middle class" in the motion picture social scheme. They have gained a reputation among the bankers as being substantial enough to merit financial support and their operations are considered legitimate fields for investment.

So far the well organized state rights producers have measured up to standard in their studio accomplishments. The early crop of pictures, which number many now being discussed as box office attractions of great potential value, appears to justify the early claims of the producers.

The remarkable strides made by the majority of the independent producers during the past few months clearly demonstrates that their studio organizations are capable of turning out pictures of high quality on scheduled time. The fact that many have gone ahead of their production programs also illustrates that the independents may be taken at their word, for advance announcements of the schedules are now shown to have been conservative in the estimates on which the release programs of these companies were based. Several companies have already finished a major portion of the pictures they scheduled for the 1925-26 season. Columbia, for example, has completed camera work on 14 of the eighteen pictures to be offered this year, and the remaining four are now in production.

The finished works show that the state rights people are making their grand gesture this year and are determined to demonstrate that they can make better and bigger pictures if the exhibitors want them to. The answer as to whether they will operate on an even larger scale next year lies with the exhibitors, and now that exchangemen are beginning to offer the pictures for booking the question will be answered soon.

Lee-Bradford Offering Five Features

WITH four productions completed and the fifth now in work, the Lee-Bradford Corporation is in readiness to offer exhibitors the entire program for 1925-26 well in advance of release dates. Much of the territory on these features has been closed already and the early offerings on the company's list soon will be available for screening before exhibitors at the various exchanges handling the product.

The program will be initiated by "The Passionate Adventure," a Graham Cutts production made in England with Alice Joyce, Clive Brook, Marjorie Daw and Victor MacLaglen. This production is considered by exchange men to be in the class of first run class "A" attractions and is pointed out by its sponsors as the standard of feature which they will offer through state right exchanges this year.

The next picture on the list is "The Blackguard," another Graham Cutts production, in which Jane Novak is featured. This will be followed by "Shea," an elaborate screen adaptation of the novel by Sir H. Rider Haggard. Betty Blythe and Carlyle Blackwell play the principal roles and the picture was directed by De Cordova.

"Wives of the Prophet," the fifth picture is now in production. The company, in which Alice Lake, Violet Mersereau, Melville Caldwell and Ruth Stonehouse will be features, now is working on location in West Virginia. The film will be based on the story of the same title by Opie Reid.

With the completion of "Wives of the Prophet" the Lee-Bradford schedule bill for the coming season will be ready for the market. In all these productions special exploitation material will be issued and substantial aid will be given exhibitors in launching publicity campaigns well before the date of the opening engagements of the pictures at their theatres.

Arthur A. Lee, president Lee-Bradford Corporation.

Anchor Schedule Lists 24 Productions

NOTEWORTHY progress on the schedule of 16 features and 12 short comedies to be offered independents this season by Anchor Film Distributors, Inc., has been made at the studios of the company in Hollywood.

With a series of eight Helen Holmes features, eight starring Al Hoxie, and eight Bob Reeves features, with a series of 12 two-reel comedies featuring Bobby Ray, the Anchor company this year is essaying a most ambitious program and an enlarged organization has been formed to handle the schedule. The result is that production is well ahead of the producing program and exhibitors are now assured that the pictures will be delivered to exchanges well in advance of release.

The Helen Holmes series will be composed of railroad thrillers of the type in which this star established herself as a favorite with a host of screen patrons. The pictures are being directed by J. P. McGowan, who filmed the Helen Holmes successes of the past. The titles of the pictures, in the order of their release, are: "Perils of the Rail," "Webs of Steel," "The Train Wreckers," "The Open Switch," "Mistaken Orders," "The Lost Express," "The Mainline Wreck," and "The Fast Freight."

> The program from Anchor Film Distributors for the coming season includes the following series of features and short comedies.
> ..8 Railroad Thrillers Starring Helen Holmes.
> 8 Western Melodramas Starring Al Hoxie.
> 8 Western Stunt Dramas Starring Bob Reeves.
> 12 Two-Reel Comedies Starring Bobby Ray.

Al Hoxie, a western star, will be presented in a group of colorful western melodramas specializing in speed, stunts and romance. These pictures also will be directed by J. P. McGowan. Particular attention will be given the backgrounds, every effort being made to lend pictorial flavor and the atmosphere of the great open spaces to these features. Al Hoxie's first of the series will be titled "Riding Romance." This will be followed by "Unseen Enemies," "The Texas Terror," "Red Blood," "Ace of Clubs," "A Lost Trail," "Hidden Gold," and "The Road Agent."

Larry Wheeler is the producer of the series in which Bob Reeves, another sprightly western star, is to be featured by Anchor. These action and stunt dramas of the far west are titled "Cyclone Bob," "Ambushed," "Riding Straight," "Fighting Luck," "The Iron Fist," "A Desperate Chance," "Riding for Life," and "A Narrow Escape."

Speed and situations will be stressed in the twelve two-reelers in which Bobby Ray, a popular comedy personality, is to be starred.

Rayart Ahead on Production Schedule

SIX producing units are pounding away on the coast on the Rayart Product for the 1925-6 according to W. Ray Johnston, President of Rayart.

"Our releases for the months of September, October and part of November are already in the house," states Mr. Johnston, who continued.

W. Ray Johnston, president of Rayart.

"Next week we will release our serial attraction 'The Flame Fighter,' a ten-chapter thriller starring Herbert Rawlinson. This was directed by Robert Dillon and produced by Beacon Films Corporation.

"Also in September we will release 'Starlight, the Untamed,' a Harry Webb production, 'The Crack O'Dawn,' starring Reed Howes, and 'The Fear Fighter,' starring Billy Sullivan. Also a two-reel comedy produced by Billy West and featuring Gloria Joy entitled 'Wood Simps.'

"For October we will release Reed Howes in 'The Cyclone Cavalier,' a Central American revolution story, Jack Perrin in 'Dangerous Fists,' a Whirlwind Western, and Billy Sullivan in 'The Goat Getter,' a Harry J. Brown attraction.

"Of especial interest in our October program will be the Gerson Production 'The Pride of the Force,' directed by Duke Worne. This is an unusual police story with a cast that includes Tom Santschi,' Gladys Hulette, Francis X. Bushman, Jr., Crauford Kent and Edith Chapman.

"For November we will again have an attractive lineup headed 'The Golden State Limited,' a railroad story, Reed Howes with Bull Montana, Dorothy Dwan, Sheldon Lewis and Jimmy Aubrey in 'The Bashful Buccaneer,' and Billy Sullivan in 'The Speed Champion.' Also a new comedy feature entitled 'The Thrill Chaser,' starring Billy West with Virginia Pearson, Kathleen Myers, John Miljan and Lionel Belmore. This will be the first of a series of four features length comedies starring Billy West.

"Other productions on our list for this fall include 'The Danger Quest,' a South African story in which Reed Howes will appear. 'The Beloved Pawn,' from the Harold Titus novel of that name. 'The Last Alarm,' a fire story; 'Somebody's Mother,' 'The Call of the Klondyke,' 'The Coast Guard Patrol,' 'The Patent Leather Pug,' 'Fighting Fate,' and 'The Windjammer.'"

Bischoff Schedule Half Completed

SAMUEL BISCHOFF'S guarantee to the independent market that he would produce and deliver thirty-six two reel comedies of merit and quality this season is being fulfilled with great expedition at the California Studios in Hollywood.

To date Bischoff has completed fifteen of his comedies, has three more in production and three more in preparation for filming the minute the last trio are photographed.

Bischoff has three sets of comedies. The first set is the H. C. Witwer "Classics in Slang." These in the main are travesties on the works of Shakespeare and other famous authors. Another is the Biff Thrill comedies series. In these comedies the object is to thrill and produce laughter at the same time. The other series are Gold Medal comedies, stories of swiftly moving action from start to finish.

Comedies completed by Samuel Bischoff include the following: "Classics In Slang" Series: "Mac's Beth," "Battling Romeo," "Taming of the Shrewd," "The Merchant of Weenies," "Account of Monte Cristo."

Biff Thrill Comedies: "The Live Agent," "Six Miles to Go," "Working for the Best," "Hollywouldn't," "The Starvation Hunters."

Gold Medal Comedies: "Play Ball," "Assorted Nuts," "Spooky Spooks," "Roomers Afloat" "Vauda Villains."

To insure the scenes in these productions going over with the utmost laughter and thrills Bischoff assembled what is considered the greatest array of laugh producers gathered under one banner. Notable in the list are Al St. John, Eddie Gribbon, Mildred June, Chester Conklin, Charles Delaney, Eddie Phillips, Charlotte Morgan, Johnny Sinclair, Al Alt, Jack Richardson, Dot Farley, Jack Cooper, Cliff Bowes, Billy Franey and others.

The comedies that Bischoff has completed to date are five of the Witwer series, namely, "Mac's Beth," "Battling Romeo," "Taming of the Shrewd," "The Merchant of Weenies," and "Account of Monte Cristo."

The five Biff Thrillers are "The Live Agent," "Six Miles to Go," "Working for the Rest," "Hollywouldn't" and "The Starvation Hunters." Then there are five of the Gold Medal variety, namely, "Play Ball," "Assorted Nuts," "Spooky Spooks," "Roomers Afloat" and "Vauda Villians."

New Artclass Short Subjects Series

LOUIS WEISS, managing director of Weiss Brothers' Artclass Picture is offering a new series of six single reel special short subjects on the independent market this week. The series is titled "Guess Who," and comprises a series of guessing contests with well known screen stars as the object of the contest.

Each reel will contain pictures of twenty-five well-known stars, who will be seen portraying their individual characteristics. Their names will be left for the spectators to guess. Cards will be provided for the fans to write out their answers to the questions as to which stars were shown on the screen in the "Guess Who" reels.

The names of the twenty-five stars will be printed in alphabetical order and in large type on the card so that all the participant in the "Guess Who" contest has to do is to identify the star and mark the star's number on the reel along side of the star's name.

Prizes can be given for the individual reel and then a grand contest made of the series. It is anticipated that if the individual reels be shown for a number of days that a great many people will come back again to have another try at the names of the stars that were missed.

The press sheet gives the exhibitor a great number of possible ways of attracting attention to the contest and once it is started will work itself up. A brilliantly designed one sheet is made up for each reel showing the names of the stars who will appear in the reel. That alone with the drawing power of the stars will prove a big number with the public.

Two reels of the series are already in New York for showing. In them is a great array of stars. Among those in the first reel are Wallace Beery, Betty Blythe, Hobart Bosworth, Margaret De La Motte, Percy Marmont, Nazimova, Anna Q. Nilsson, Pat O'Malley, Charles Ray, Alma Rubens, Milton Sills, Alberta Vaughn, Claire Windsor.

Some of the prominent stars in the second reel are Monte Blue, Ruth Clifford, Corinne Griffith, Elaine Hammerstein, Norman Kerry, Cullen Landis, Laura LaPlante, Jacqueline Logan, Ben Lyon, Bert Lytell, Dorothy Mackaill, Antonio Moreno, Marie Prevost, Anita Stewart, Lewis Stone.

Chadwick Star Units Hard at Work

I. E. CHADWICK, who has just departed for the Coast to supervise the production of several super-special films, has purchased outright the Independent Studios in Hollywood for the use of the Chadwick Pictures Corporation and they will now be called The Chadwick Studios.

The Chadwick Pictures Corporation's 1925-26 schedule is a gala one. Nine productions have already been completed and two more have been started by the West Coast Studios.

Larry Semon has finished two comedies, "The Wizard of Oz" and "The Perfect Clown," an original story written especially for Mr. Semon and directed by Fred Newmeyer.

Theda Bara, original screen vampire who has been in retirement for five years, has just completed "The Unchastened Woman," adapted from the drama by Louis K. Anspacher, directed by James Young and including an all-star cast—Wyndham Standing, Eileen Percy, John Miljan, Dale Fuller, Milla Davenport, Eric Mayne, Mayme Kelso and Frederic Kovert.

Another return is that of Charles Ray to the rural roles. Ray has just completed "Some Pun'kins" and "Sweet Adeline," the story based on the famous song. Jerome Storm, directed both of these comedies. The cast of "Some Pun'kins" includes Duane Thompson, Bert Woodruff, George Fawcett, William Courtright and Fanny Midgely. For "Sweet Adeline" the following stars have been cast: Gertrude Olmstead, Gertrude Short, J. P. Lockne, Frank Austin, Sybil Johnson and Jack Clifford.

Three pictures with George Walsh have just been completed and three more are to follow. The first release starring Walsh is "American Pluck," adopted from the novel "Blaze Derringer," by Ralph Spece. Wanda Hawley plays the feminine lead, and the supporting cast include Sidney De Grey, Frank Leigh, Tom Wilson, Leo White and Dan Mason. "Blue Blood" and "The Prince of Broadway" are the two other completed productions, the former a story dealing with the "class problem," the latter a fight film including an all-star prize-ring cast. "The Prince of Broadway" was directed by John Gorman.

Elaine Hammerstein in "Paint and Powder" and Lionel Barrymore in a "Man of Iron" are also listed among the completed pictures.

Work on "The Count of Luxenbourg," a picture version of the operetta of the same name, has just been commenced, and will be filmed by Arthur Gregory, famous European director. And Lionel Barrymore has been cast for the lead in "The Bells," a filmization of the world-famous play.

I. E. Chadwick, president Chadwick Pictures Corporation.

Davis Dist. Program Lists Big Features

By J. CHARLES DAVIS, 2nd, President, Davis Distributing Division, Inc.

THERE are lots of good pictures on the independent market and the exhibitors are playing them. Also they are paying fair prices for fair product. I know from my contacts with producers making pictures for the Davis Distributing Division, Inc., there is much good material available for distribution.

By the deal with the Vital Exchanges our product will receive national distribution. This means that companies making pictures for us will get national distribution and that the exhibitor throughout the country will get Davis Distributing pictures on a set release date.

Of the product which we will handle there are three super-specials. "Tales of 1001 Nights," the Arabian Nights Fantasy, and "Red Love" starring John Lowell and Evangeline Russell are now ready; Mrs. Wallace Reid has cast and is producing the "Red Kimono".

We have a series of five James Oliver Curwood pictures of which "My Neighbor's Wife" and "The Gold Hunters" are completed. This will be followed by "Tentacles of the North," "The Courage of Captain Plum" and "The Wolf Hunters". The eight pictures from the books of Gen. Chas. King U. S. A. are well under way and five have been completed, "Under Fire," "Warrior Gap," "Fort Frayne," "A Daughter of the Sioux," and "Tonio, Son of the Sierras".

In the Marilyn Mills series of eight, one has been completed and is ready for release "Tricks". The second, "Three Pals," is in production. Among the titles of the other six to be made are "Long Odds," "Fleet Foot," "White Fury," "The Killer," Ken Maynard is making a series of eight westerns for us. The series will feature "Tarzan," Ken's pal and the Hollywood Beauty Sextette in every picture. "$50,000 Reward," "Fighting Courage," "The Demon Rider," and "The Haunted Range" have been completed. "The Grey Vulture" is in production and will be followed shortly by the "Lights of Mojave," "The Texan's Oath" and "Timber Wolves."

Peggy O'Day is making a Secret Service Series of eight pictures dealing with the adventures of a girl secret service operative. The first, "Peggy of the Secret Service" is ready and "Peggy in Chinatown" is being cast.

We will have two series of pictures starring Al Ferguson. The first six, "Shackles of Fear," "Trail of Vengeance," "Phantom Shadows," "Scarlet and Gold," "A Fighting Romeo" and "The Fighting Parson" are already completed. "Lawless Love," the first of the second series has been finished and the second is in production.

F. Schumann-Heink is making a series of pictures under the direction of J. J. Fleming in Beaverton, Oregon, and has completed two pictures—"Hills Aflame" and "Youth's Highway". The same producer will also have for us a series of eight comedy-dramas co-starring Forest Taylor and Anne Berryman.

We have the most complete line-up of independent short product on the market. For the coming season there will be fifty-two comedies, two serials, six "Fragments of Life" (2 reel novelties, "Tales Told Without Titles") and fifty-two "Cinema Star" reels.

J. Charles Davis, 2nd, President Davis Distributing Division, Inc.

I. M. P. A. Now Lists Hundred Members

ONE of the concrete facts of "Independence Year" is the growth of the Independent Motion Picture Association in America.

Started less than two years ago by a handful of earnest men who came to the conclusion that the state righter's salvation lay in organization, it has developed into an association of great force and now has 108 members—26 producer-distributors and 82 separate exchanges.

Since June 15th, when Frederick H. Elliott was called in as General Manager, it has grown 45 per cent.

The I. M. P. A has dignified the state right market and raised it to a position where its members command the respect of the industry. I. E. Chadwick, as president, has been at the helm since the organization's birth, with W. E. Shallenberger, Chairman of the Board of Directors. Others who have been factors in its advancement are Ben Amsterdam, first vice-president; Oscar A. Price, second vice-president; Joe Brandt, third vice-president; Nathan Hirsh, treasurer; Jack Bellman, recording secretary.

Committee heads include William Steiner, M. H. Hoffman, W. Ray Johnston, Louis Weiss, Abe Carlos, Herman Gluckman, Jack Cohn, B. P. Schulberg, J. G. Bachmann, Harry Thomas, S. S. Krellberg, Oscar Neufeld, Joe Klein, John Lowell Russell, Joseph L. Friedman and H. W. Pearlman.

The business and responsibilities of the association became so diversified this year it was found necessary to call in a general manager to direct its affairs. Frederick H. Elliott, a potent force in the organization and upbuilding of the old National Association, was summoned from another field of activity to handle the job.

The I. M. P. A. offices at 1650 Broadway, New York, maintained as "Independence Hall," are the headquarters for the independents of the country. An information bureau, with telephone, mail, publicity and stenographic service included, is maintained for the benefit of the visitors.

Jaffe Company Completing First Feature

Hanna Jaffe, vice-president Jaffe Art Flm Corporation.

THOUGH a comparative newcomer into the field of independent picture production and distribution the Jaffe Art Film Corporation, formed recently by Louis N. Jaffe, a New York lawyer and realtor, is completing the first of a series of features to be offered this season at the Tec Art Studios in New York.

The picture is titled "Broken Hearts" and with Lila Leet in the featured role is scheduled for release in October. The principal male role is being played by Maurice Schwartz, a noted Jewish dramatic actor. It is a drama dealing with immigrant life and is based on a stage play.

Hanna Jaffe, an active addition to the many women who have chosen the pictures as a career, is vice-president of the corporation and general manager of the producing and distributing end of the Jaffe Art Film Company. It was she who selected "Broken Hearts" as the first work for production by the organization. The story is said to be based on the true life story of two lovers. The action is played against a background of immigrant life and is said to afford many opportunities for the introduction of the realism and atmosphere which gives the picture supremacy over the stage.

It is probable that the other features which Jaffe will produce will be filmed in New York. The pictures will be distributed by the company which produces them. Territorial rights on "Broken Hearts," which will be ready for release in October, are now offered to state rights exchanges.

The organization has been perfected and both the sales and production branches of the enterprise are now going forward with an ambitious program.

Seven of 32 Arrow Features Completed

"NEVER before in the history of the motion picture industry has the exhibitor been offered the opportunity of booking as many good pictures as will be his experience this season," says W. E. Shallenberger, President of the Arrow Pictures Corporation, one of the most important of the Independent Producing and Distributing organizations.

"In outlining the policy of my company for the season of 1925-26, I determined that over and above all things, good pictures would be our aim. Preparations for this objective were not made over night. The twenty-four pictures which will represent the Golden Arrow Franchise of first run features for this season will be the result of the policy outlined above.

In the pre-view showing of "Children of the Whirlwind," a Whitman Bennett Production, the cast of which is headed by Lionel Barrymore, Johnny Walker and Marguerite De La Motte, "The Primrose Path," an Arthur Beck production, directed by Harry Hoyt, in which Clara Bow, Wallace McDonald, Stuart Holmes, Tom Santchi and Arline Pretty are employed in the principal roles;

W. E. Shallenberger, president Arrow Film Corp.

"Tessie," a Sewell Ford story, produced and directed by Dallas M. Fitzgerald, with May McAvoy, Bobby Agnes, Myrtle Stedman, Lee Moran and Gertrude Short; "The Substitute Wife," another Whitman Bennett production, directed by Wilfred Noy, starring Jane Novak, with Niles Welsh, Louise Carter and others in the cast; "Scandal Street," with Madge Kennedy, Niles Welsh, Louise Carter, Edwin August and others; "The Unnamed Woman," directed by Harry Hoyt, for Arthur Beck, with a cast headed by Katherine McDonald, Wanda Hawley and Herbert Rawlinson; "Wandering Fires," directed by Major Maurice Campbell, with a cast embracing Constance Bennett, Wallace McDonald, Henrietta Crosman, Effie Shannon and George Hackathorn, without exception, every one who was privileged to see these pictures declared in no uncertain terms they would take rank with the very best pictures shown by any producing organization, irrespective of affiliations in the past two years.

"I am proud," continued Dr. Shallenberger, "of the work of all concerned in the production of these first seven of the twenty-four Bolden Arrow features. How can I feel otherwise, for it is a feat, almost unprecedented, to produce seven of what are considered by competent judges, "knock-out" features of the first magnitude in seven attempts. It means that the organization is hitting on every cylinder, with an efficiency of 100%."

18 on Hollywood Films Sales Program

HOLLYWOOD Film Sales Service are listed among important state rights distributors contributing to the 1925-26 program with a list of 14 features and four single reel comedies. The pictures are being made in Hollywood and many of the territories have been closed for the product well in advance of release date.

The features consist of six high speed western comedy dramas starring Wm. (Bill) Patton, eight speed dramas featuring Johno Wells, and four comedies in a series called "Seeing Hollywood With a Newspaper Reporter." The comedies will show many "behind the screen" scenes of the great motion picture producing centre.

Wm. Patton is known to a large portion of the picture-going public. He has specialized in western characterizations of a very breezy and likeable type and his pictures generally have blended fast action and thrill stunts with humorous situations prominent throughout. Patton will be supported by casts assembled from groups of players well skilled in the western type of play and the great out of doors will figure importantly and pictorially in assisting the star to accomplish his entertaining characterizations.

Pace and movement keyed to a high pitch will furnish the special flavor which is claimed for the eight dramas featuring Johno Wells, an actor whose dash will carry him far along the road toward widespread popularity with the screen fans.

Hollywood Film Sales Service will have the scheduled productions ready for release well in advance of the scheduled time, according to M. S. Rosenfield, eastern representative with offices in the Loews State Theatre Building in New York.

Columbia Supplying Popular Demand

WHEN President Joe Brandt of Columbia Pictures made the statement three years ago that the public wants melodramas—of a better sort of course than those which flourished on the legitimate stage about a quarter century ago, he made a prediction which since has been borne out by the repeated success of screen productions of this type.

"Today," Mr. Brandt explained, "I find after visiting all parts of the country, repeatedly, and conferring with the biggest, as well as some of the smallest of exhibitors, that they all shout for honest-to-goodness melodrama. Of course such pictures must have really worth while stories.

"They want action. And more action, all the time. Not without reason did those great producers of melodrama, Al Woods, Charles Blaney and Corse Payton attract the greatest audience numbers to their box offices by giving them powerful melodramas—crude and ridiculous though they seem to us when weighed by our modern standards of screen play craft, but powerful plays, nevertheless.

"From the very start we have borne this fact in mind and the success we achieved with 'More to be Pitied,' 'Only a Shopgirl,' 'Temptation,' 'Fighting the Flames,' and 'The Midnight Express,' have proven that this form of entertainment is what the vast majority demands.

"Polite dramas, and dramas that treat over-much of sex, even when they are brilliantly done, and have excellent stories for plots, never achieve the mark which a fairly good melodrama reaches. And an overdose of sexy and polite society drama only paves the way for melodramas of 'The Bat' and 'The Gorilla' order.

"When we prepared our present season's production schedule we had this angle in mind and worked hard to put it over. 'The Danger Signal,' first of our Columbia series, as well as 'Enemy of Men,' first of our Waldorf series, our fast action Perfection Series, and those pictures which follow, are all carefully constructed along such lines.

"In our forthcoming productions for the future seasons, we expect to adhere to this technic. It is essential so long as the public retains its desire for powerful action drama. We have realized this need from the start, and the film fans who have filled the theatres to see Columbia pictures have attested to our judgment."

Joe Brandt, president Columbia Pictures Corporation.

Two Reel Comedies

A year ago we advised you to keep your eyes on Charley Chase.

We told you that the way he was coming the sky was the only limit to his future.

What has happened? During the past year he has appeared in an uninterrupted succession of really big comedies, with not one poor or just fair one in the lot. Each one has delivered a really startling number of laughs; each has been gilt-edged in production quality.

Have these latest rib-rockers screened for you, if you are out to get the best in two reel comedies.

Keep your eye on Charley Chase!

Charley Chase means extra money at the box office, IF you let 'em know he's on your bill.

Madame Sans Jane

(Madame Don't Give a Whoop)

He wanted the girl but her father didn't want him.

To lose him the old man set sail for Europe with his daughter. But on the same boat, disguised as a movie vamp, was the boy, prepared to do or die and stand the old man on his addled bean.

Tryon as the movie vamp is one of the choicest bits of humor your eyes have seen in many a long day. It will outshine all but the very biggest features.

You can only get all that's coming to you IF you advertise it.

Short Subjects and Serials

Pathe Acquires Series of Holy Land Films

Pathe has acquired a series of twenty one-reel Holy Land films, which they describe as ideal subjects for forthcoming Christmas season programs, as the first six subjects depict scenes of Christ's activity upon earth from the time of His birth to the resurrection. "A pilgrimage to Palestine" is the title of the series, which was produced by Holy Land Film Company of Cincinnati.

The first six subjects which will be available on October 4th are as follows: Bethlehem; Nazareth; Scenes of Christ's Early Ministry, showing the Sea of Galilee, Capernaum and adjacent territory; Scenes of Christ's Later Ministry, showing scenes around Jerusalem and Bethany; Gethsemane, showing the scenes of His Trial, the home of Caiphas, the high priest, etc., Via Dolorosa (The Sad Way), showing the road to the Cross, the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, Christ's Tomb and scenes of Jerusalem.

Comedian Billy Moon in Production Field

Billy Moon, comedian, has entered the production field and will produce a series of twelve Billy Moon Comedies, featuring himself. They will be released one each month. Lyle Salveaux will direct the series, and Eugene E. Voltaire will serve as general manager of the unit. Negotiations are now being completed for the distribution of these comedies and Voltaire will leave for New York shortly to complete these arrangements.

Bray Productions Start "Unnatural History"

Bray Productions are making interiors at the Tec-Art studios in New York for the first of the "Unnatural History" subjects which will be released by F. B. O. The initial picture is titled, "How the Elephant Got his Trunk." Walter Lantz is featured. This Bray subject, in addition to real actors employs a number of cartoon characters.

Helen Ferguson in New Pathe Serial

Helen Ferguson is to be featured opposite Jack Mulhall in the new Pathe serial, "Wild West," staged at the famous Miller Brothers 101 Ranch in Oklahoma. It is a C. W. Patton production in ten episodes directed by Robert F. Hill from the scenario by J. F. Netteford. This marks Miss Ferguson's debut as a Pathe serial player.

Jess Robbins Directing All Star Cameo Cast

Jess Robbins is directing an all star cast in Educational-Cameo Comedies. The cast includes Helen Marlowe, Phil Dunham, George Davis and Babe London.

Highlights from "Half A Man," a two-reel comedy starring Stan Laurel and released by F. B. O.

Many Fox Short Subjects Due

Splendid Progress Being Made Under the Supervision of George Marshall

WITH the Fox comedy units now all under the supervision of George E. Marshall, splendid progress is being made in production. Marshall is devoting all of his time to the supervision of Van Bibber, O. Henry, Helen and Warren and Imperial comedies.

At the present time five Imperial Comedies are finished and being rushed through the laboratories. Four others of the series are being rushed to completion. Two of the O. Henry comedies have been completed and the third is under way. The first three of the Helen and Warren series have been completed and are scheduled for early release. Five of the Van Bibbers are finished.

Earle Fox is the star of the Van Bibber series, with Florence Gilbert, Frank Beal and Lynn Cowan in support. "The Big Game Hunter," directed by Robert P. Kerr was the first of the series released on August 16th. "The Sky Jumper is due September 20th, "The Wrestler," November 1st and "A Parisian Knight," December 13th. "The Feud" has been completed but no release date set.

Kathryn McGuire and Harvey Clark have the leading roles in the O. Henry stories. "Shoes," first of the series was released September 6th. "Transients in Arcadia" is due October 18th.

Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley have the leading roles in the Helen and Warren comedies which are being directed by Albert Ray. August 30th was the release date of "A Business Engagement," first of this series. "All Aboard" is set for October 11th and "The Peacemakers" will be presented November 22nd.

The first of the Imperial Comedies, "On the Go," went to the exhibitors August 23rd. This was followed by "Sweet Marie" on September 6th. "Love and Lions" will be released September 20th and "A Cloudy Romance," October 4th. There are twenty Imperials in the series.

Stills from "Three Wise Goofs," one of the series of Fat Men comedies produced by Standard for F. B. O.

Scenes from "The Constant Simp," second episode in the "Adventures of Mazie" series of two-reel comedies offered by F. B. O. with Alberta Vaughn in the starred role.

Alberta Vaughn Resumes Comedy Series

Alberta Vaughn has returned from a brief vacation and has started work at the F. B. O. studios in Episode No. 3 of the "Adventures of Mazie," her new series of two-reel comedy features. It is titled, "Or What Have You." Larry Kent, new juvenile lead, Al Cook and Kit Guard are supporting Miss Vaughn.

Standard Selects Title for Comedy

"A Ton of Fun in a Beauty Parlor" is the title decided upon for the third of the Standard Comedies which Joe Rock is producing for F. B. O. release. The series features the trio of heavyweight comedians, "Fatty" Karr, "Tiny" Alexander and "Kewpie" Ross.

Rene Marvelle in Comedy Leads With Bowes

Rene Marvelle, a French-Canadian girl from Montreal, is playing leading roles with Cliff Bowes in Educational-Cameo Comedies under the direction of Hugh Fay. Previous to her entry into Cameo Comedies, Miss Marvelle played parts in feature pictures.

First "Buster Brown" Released

First of Series Offered This Month; Four Other Century Comedies in Sept.

UNIVERSAL has announced that "Educating Buster," first of the series of "Buster Brown" comedies produced by Century, will be released in September. The picture will initiate a group of 12 two-reelers based on the famous newspaper comics of R. F. Outcault.

"Educating Buster" has had pre-release showings in many important first-run theatres throughout the country and has received praise from reviewers of the trade press and daily papers. Arthur Trimble is starred in the name role, and "Tige," the faithful dog is played by Pete the Dog. Mary Jane is played by Doreen Turner, and others in principal roles are Charles King, Emily Gerdes, Hilliard Karr and several clever young screen players. It will be released on September 23.

"Stranded" is a two-reeler directed by William Watson, with Miss Marian supported by Hilliard Karr and the Century Follies Girls. In it she portrays the role of a country girl who is bus driver, baggage tosser, cook and waitress and general utility girl for a country hotel.

"Officer 13," Eddie Gordon's latest comedy, was directed by Edward I. Luddy and has a strong supporting cast including Frank Whitson and Betty Browne. This picture has been played in many houses and is hailed as Gordon's best film work to date.

"Too Much Mother-in-law" brings a new Century star to the screen in the person of Constance Darling. This picture was directed by Noel Smith. The cast includes Blanche Payson, as the mother-in-law, and Charles King, as the bride-groom.

"Cupid's Victory," the Wanda Wiley comedy for September release is a two-reeler directed by Charles Lamont, with Earl McCarthy and Tony Hayes as the chief supporting players. It shows Miss Wiley in the role of a dignified bespectacled clerk in a law office.

A trio of scenes from "The Fighting Cub," a Truart Production co-featuring Mary Carr and Wesley Barry.

Pathe Contests Aid Business

Storey and Comedy Competitions Develop Keen Rivalry in Many of the Exchanges

BOSTON, New York, Detroit, Dallas, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, New Orleans, Salt Lake and Memphis proved the winners of the Storey Victory Campaign and the Special Two-reel Comedy contest conducted by Pathe Exchange, Inc. The contests have just been concluded and according to the Pathe office resulted in the greatest Summer business for a given period in the history of the organization.

As an incentive to better business, Pathe instituted a billings campaign, named in honor of Assistant General Manager, J. E. Storey, then General Sales Manager. This campaign started on April 19th and was continued for sixteen weeks. At the same time a special Two-Reel Comedy Contest was started and run coincidentally with the Victory Campaign. Every employee entered actively into the spirit of the drives and results have been better than were ever anticipated.

To add zest to the campaigns the various branch offices were arranged in groups and given the names of military divisions.

The Boston Branch under the management of Ross G. Cropper, won the Storey Victory Campaign, while in the same division New York, under the management of William T. Raynor, won the comedy contest.

In the artillery division the Storey Victory campaign was won by Detroit under the management of Oscar Hanson. The comedy contest was won in the same division by Dallas.

Los Angeles, under the managership of William Jenner, won the Cavalry division in the Storey campaign and in the same division Milwaukee won the comedy contest. New Orleans took both ends of the contest in the Engineer Division.

Manager W. G. Seib and his crew of Salt Lake took the Storey competition in the Aviation Division, while Memphis took the other angle of the contest.

Give Shorts Bigger Ad Space

Educational Says Northwest Leads in Comedy Exploitation; Ad Material in Demand

EDUCATIONAL reports that information received at the home offices from branches throughout the country show that exhibitors are increasing their ad space on short subjects and that the briefer comedies are exploited more extensively in the Northwest than in other sections of the country at present. An increased demand for theatre aid material issued by Educational in connection with its comedy and novelty reels is reported from all branch offices.

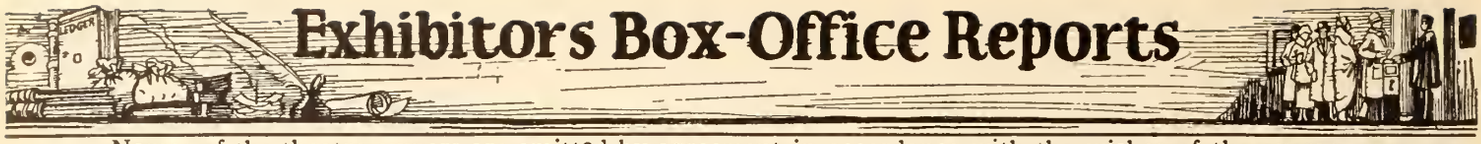
One of the theatres cited as notable among the houses which give short subjects adequate advertising support is the Fuller at Kalamazoo, Mich. This theatre, managed by Roy Tillson, has long made a practice of 100 per cent advertising for every item on the program.

For, as Mr. Fuller explains, "there are a whole lot of my patrons come to see the comedy as much as they do the feature and the vaudeville."

"I devote a good conspicuous box in my newspaper ad layout to my comedy, and make it especially forceful when I have stars like Lloyd Hamilton. Comedy stars such as Hamilton get 50 per cent of the electric sign display and I consider that any comedy that is worth showing in the theatre is worth giving a good display in front of the theatre. This display generally amounts to half of the entire lobby display.

"This is by no means an experiment with me, for I have proved the value of exploiting the short subject through a long period of such exploitation, and have shown conclusively that good short subjects will attract people to the box-office when properly advertised."

In Milwaukee there has been a very noticeable increase in newspaper space devoted to comedy subjects.



"As a matter of fact," writes Max Stahl, manager of the Educational exchange in that city, "every two reel comedy which is used at our first run theatres in Milwaukee is advertised in the newspapers with the one or two column ads illustrated in our press sheets, for which we furnish exhibitors with free mats."

Perez Will Direct Blue Ribbon Comedy

Marcel Perez, known to film fans as "Tweedy" has been signed by Joe Rock to direct the third of the Blue Ribbon Comedies in which Alice Ardell and a well known comedian will be starred. The subject will be released by F. B. O. in November.

Franey Joins Joe Rock Comedy Cast

Billy Franey has been added to the cast of Joe Rock's second Blue Ribbon Comedy in which Alice Ardell and Lee Moran are starred. The series is to be released through Film Booking Offices.

Names of the theatre owners are omitted by agreement in accordance with the wishes of the average exhibitor and in the belief that reports published over the signature of the exhibitor reporting, is a dangerous practice.

Only reports received on specially prepared blanks furnished by us will be accepted for use in this department. Exhibitors who value this reporting service are urged to ask for these blanks.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Speed Mad

(Columbia Picture Corp.—4442 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS one lives up to its title in point of lively action, featuring some great thrill stuff in the auto racing line, with an aeroplane stunt worked in toward the climax for good measure. Director Jay Marchant didn't allow William Fairbanks many restful moments while producing the feature, for that energetic star, seen in the role of a young chap whose great delight lay in breaking speed laws, is continually gyrating around like an unchained devil on wheels, making love impetuously, beating up his foes, escaping from kidnappers, finally leaping from a plane into his car and winning an auto race in a furious finish. Of course there's a love affair which winds up satisfactorily and the net result is a good program attraction which ought to please a majority of fans.

THEME. Auto-racing comedy drama, with love interest and numerous thrills.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Fairbank's speeding thrills. The brisk comedy situations and romance. Scene where Fairbanks jumps from plane to auto and wins race.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Fairbank's dare-devil stunts. Stress love affair, the comedy stuff. Feature the big auto race and hero's leap from plane to car.

DRAWING POWER. Should do good business wherever William Fairbanks is popular and fast comedy drama, with exciting punch stuff, gets the patrons.

SUMMARY. Lightning action comedy drama, with romantic appeal and sensational stunts in plenty. Features big auto race in finale, with aeroplane side-kick.

THE CAST

Bill Sanford.....William Fairbanks
Betty Hampton.....Edith Roberts
Alan Lawton.....Lloyd Whitlock
John Sanford.....Melbourne MacDowell
Freckles Smithers.....Johnny Fox, Jr.
Grandma Smithers.....Florence Lee

Author, Dorothy Howell. Director, Jay Marchant. Photographed by George Meehan.

SYNOPSIS. Bill Sanford, broke, leaves home with his dog, Buddy, and racing car. He meets and falls in love with Betty Hampton, whose folks have met with financial reverses, but she scrapes up an entrance fee for Bill to participate in a big auto race. He is kidnapped by a rival, but escapes with the aid of Buddy. A friendly aviator takes him to the track. Bill jumps from the plane to his car, throws out the chauffeur hired by his rival to run it, wins the event, money prize and Betty.

Edith Roberts in "Speed Mad," a Truart picture.

Speed Mad (Columbia Pictures)

PRESS NOTICE

A RIOT of comedy and wild thrills, with one of the most exciting auto races ever filmed, that's what you can look for in "Speed Mad," billed as the chief attraction for the _____ theatre on _____. William Fairbanks is the hero celebrated for his lightning stunt work, and he fairly outdoes all his previous dare-devil exploits in this picture.

Bill's father gets tired of his son's escapades in breaking speed laws, casts him out and Bill starts to carve out a path to fortune for himself with the help of his dog and racing car. And he makes good, winning a big race, prize money and beautiful wife.

CATCH LINES

Hero Bill faced the world broke, his only assets a dog and racing car. But the combination proved a winner, when he proved victor in a big auto race, and secured a pretty wife as well.

Aeroplane and auto stunts, thrills and romance. A bully picture with not a single dull moment in the whole five reels.

The Call of Courage

(Universal—4661 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THERE is more variety in the plot of this picture than distinguishes the average Westerner, and in point of quick action and thrills it stacks up even with the best of its kind. Those who like animal stuff will find additional interest in the film because of the bits of drama and comedy contributed by two four-footed actors, a horse and dog, both the faithful adherents of the cowboy hero, who are always on the job to help their master out of a tight corner. The scene where this intelligent pair, Raven and Rex, restore Art Acord after he has been knocked unconscious and help him to escape, scores a great hit, and one can imagine how juveniles, in particular, will enjoy it.

THEME. Western melodrama, cowboy hero falsely accused of murder, proves innocence, wins pretty girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Chase after stage coach. Scene where dog and horse release their bound master and help him escape. Rescue of Hazelton by hero from powder magazine. Acord's riding stunts, comedy relief, climax.

EXPLOITATION. Bill this as a fast Westerner offering plot somewhat out of ordinary. Stress love romance, Art Acord's horsemanship, powder magazine incident. Feature Art Acord and Olive Hasbrouck.

DRAWING POWER. Good box office attraction whereever Western melo is popular.

SUMMARY. A lively Westerner, story gets out of the stereotyped rut, presents interesting complications. Has some dog and horse stuff that will amuse old and young.

THE CAST

Steve Caldwell.....Art Acord
June Hazelton.....Olive Hasbrouck
Sam Caldwell.....Duke Lee
Slim.....Frank Rice
Jeff Hazelton.....John T. Prince
Jimmy.....Turner Savage
The Cook.....Floyd Shackelford

Author, Harold Shumates. Director, Clifford Smith. Photographed by Edward Linden.

SYNOPSIS. Lazy Steve Caldwell, cowpuncher, is falsely accused of shooting Jeff Hazelton, his brother Sam being guilty of the crime. Steve, arrested, finds that the supposed dead man's daughter believes him innocent. His horse and dog free him. He hides in powder magazine of mine and is astonished to find old Hazelton there alive, victim of Sam's plot. The two men go after Sam who is drowned trying to escape. Steve wins June.

Art Accord, Universal star in "The Call of Courage."

PRESS NOTICE

ART Acord, his dog and horse perform some extraordinary stunts in "The Call Of Courage," a fast and colorful Westerner, which is billed as the chief attraction at the _____ theatre on _____. The plot differs considerably from that of the average picture of this type, although in point of adventure, fast action, romance and comedy it holds its own with the best.

Art Acord and his animal friends make an especially strong hit with juvenile patrons, as well as adults, and Olive Hasbrouck scores in the heroine role.

CATCH LINES

His besetting sin was laziness, but when danger threatened and love called, he became a humman buzz saw.

Two wonderfully intelligent four-footed actors, a dog and horse, share honors with Art Accord in "The Call of Courage."

Some Pun'kins

(Chadwick Picture Corp.—6500 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

CHARLES RAY returns to the sort of role which made him famous, as the hero of this attraction. It is a rural comedy drama, with the star cast as Lem Blossom, chief of the local fire department in the village of Mosville, who falls in love with Mary Griggs, tries to corner the pumpkin market, has his courtship continually interrupted by fire alarms, most of them false and the work of a rival, finally saves the girl's life from the flames, wins her and makes a fortune. Mr. Ray is thoroughly at home in this kind of a characterization, and the fans who remember his similar portrayals in "String Beans" and "The Egg Crate Wallop," ought to welcome their favorite in such a setting.

There's just sufficient melodramatic urge to balance the comedy values nicely, lively action and a whale of a climax. Duane Thompson plays the heroine sweetly and the support is all that could be desired.

THEME. Comedy drama. Hero fire chief in rustic village, who tries to corner pumpkin market and has courtship constantly interrupted by alarms.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Charles Ray's work in lead. Pleasing rustic atmosphere and village types.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tell patrons that Charles Ray again assumes the kind of role which brought him film fame. Praise his work as awkward country youth, stress the funny situations and crashing climax. Mention Duane Thompson.

DRAWING POWER. Wherever Ray is a favorite this ought to please. Should do particularly well in neighborhood houses.

SUMMARY. Comedy drama, village locale, hero fire chief, who falls in love with girl, is continually interrupted in courting her by fire bell, tries to corner pumpkin market, finally saves sweetheart from flames. Presents Charles Ray in country youth role, the kind that made him famous. Pleasing film.

THE CAST

Lem Blossom.....Charles Ray
Mary Griggs.....Duane Thompson
Joshua Griggs.....Bert Woodruff
Ma Blossom.....Fanny Midgley
Jake Blossom.....George Fawcett
Tom Perkins.....Hallam Cooley

Author, Charles E. Banks. Directed by Jerome Storm.

SYNOPSIS. Lem Blossom, fire chief of village of Mosville, falls in love with Mary Griggs. His rival, Tom Perkins, purchasing pumpkins for a cannery, frequently interrupts Lem's courtship by turning in false fire alarms. When Lem learns that pumpkin crop in the North has been destroyed by frost, he conceives idea of cornering the pumpkin market in the county. The Griggs home catches fire. Lem saves Mary and quenches fire with pump of his own invention. With old Grigg's aid he sells pumpkins at record prices, makes a fortune and wins Mary.

Charles Ray, star of "Some Pun'kins," a Chadwick feature.

Some Pun'kins (Chadwick Pictures)
PRESS NOTICE

CHARLES RAY became a great film star through his work in pictures starring him as a simple country lad. In "Some Pun'kins," which comes to the ———— theatre on ————, He portrays Lem Blossom, chief of the fire department of the village of Mosville, ambitious to make money so that he can wed Mary Griggs. He has a rival who interrupts his courtship by turning in false fire alarms.

How he carries out a scheme for cornering the county pumpkin market, saves the girl in a fire, defeats his rival and wins her, is set forth in this bright, snappy and amusing comedy drama. Mr. Ray is supported by Duane Thompson, Bert Woodruff, Fanny Midgley, George Fawcett and Hallam Cooley.

CATCH LINES

A treat for the fans! Charles Ray in a country youth role, the kind that made him famous.

The Knockout

(First National—7450 Feet)

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

MILTON SILLS continues to deliver in good shape in starring vehicles, and "The Knockout" is a worthy successor to "The Making of O'Malley." Here he portrays a gentleman pugilist who becomes involved in a lumber fight in the north woods. The course of the action includes two ring fights, a rough and tumble fight that starts in a cabin and continues to the river bank, a mighty log jam, the effort to dynamite it, and some remarkable shots of log-rollers in action.

It is a he-man picture, with vigorous action from start to finish, and the Sills fans should "eat it up." Sills makes a pretty convincing sort of fighter, even though the winning of a world's championship bout with one arm disabled savours a bit of the miraculous. The log jam and river scenes are the most remarkable we have seen.

THEME. Story of a gentleman pugilist who becomes involved in a lumber fight, is the unwitting tool of a crook and ultimately fights a championship battle to pay off the mortgage on the girl's timber land.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The log jam and river scenes. The dynamiting, in which Sills is trapped after lighting the fuse. The two ring fights. The rough-and tumble fight with Black Jack. Sills' good work in the stellar role.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Get the sporting editor of your paper to review it, round by round. Aim your advertising at the Sills fans. Tell them this is another picture with a punch from the star of "The Sea Hawk."

DRAWING POWER. Should prove popular in any sort of house.

SUMMARY. Well produced melodrama of the prize ring and the lumber camps in the north woods, with star well cast in a sympathetic and vigorous role.

MILTON SILLS, will appear in another of his starring pear in another of his starring pictures, "The Knockout," at the ———— theatre on ————,

As Donlin, a puglist, he goes to the north woods, after tearing a ligament in his good right arm. Here he becomes the tool, unknowingly, of a crooked lumber baron who opposes the interests of the heroine, an independent lumber operator. Donlin promises her a square deal, and carries it out, but his men double-cross him and dynamite the dam. This ties up her logs for a year, and she cannot meet the mortgage. Donlin has fallen in love with her, and can meet the payment by re-entering the ring, but she hates fighting and will have nothing to do with fighters.

CATCH LINES

The Coming of Amos

(Producers Distributing Corp.—5677 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A GOOD box office attraction! It's romantic melodrama, staged against a Riviera backgronnd, with turreted castles galore, dark dnngeons, a beautiful Russian princess in distress and Australian hero, peculiarly expert in throwing the boomerang, who comes to her aid when she needs him worst. All the elements here for a story sure to win the favor of picture patrons in general. It isn't the most probable yarn in the world, but carries its interest to the finish just the same, and being a Cecil B. De Mille film, is naturally rich in gorgeous settings. There's a sprinkling of comedy too, and if the hero chap gets the worst of it at first in a duel with the arch villian, he evens matters up nicely when he reverts to the native boomerang as a weapon. Noah Beery is the bad man of the narrative, plays the part with his usual sinister leer, and is lamented by none when trapped and drowned at the finish.

Rod La Rocque is the hero lad and gives a convincing performance, with Jetta Goudal the most graceful of heroines, and smooth support contributed by the rest of the company.

THEME. Romantic melodrama. Australian hero wooing and winning Russian princess on the Riveria, after many adventures.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The attractive sets. Hero's boomerang-throwing stunts. The Rose Carnival. Kidnapping of princess. Flooded dungeon scene. The rescue. Death of villain. Comedy relief.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Book-store tieups on author William J. Locke's novel. Boost the De Mille settings. Stress story's romantic intensity and melodramatic situations. Play up Rod La Rocque, Jetta Goudal, Noah Beery.

DRAWING POWER. Should do well in any house.

SUMMARY. Romantic melo, with attractive backgrounds and fine sets, action laid on Riveria. Moves fast, has general audience appeal, a likely boxoffice bet.

THE CAST

Amos Burden.....Rod La Rocque
Princess Nadia Ramioff.....Jetta Goudal
Ramon Garcia.....Noah Beery

The Police Patrol

(Gotham-Lumas—6000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

PICTURES with police and firemen heroes are having quite a run in the film markets just now, and this latest addition to the cycle of cop features holds its own with the best of them. It's the sort of entertainment that has a sure mass appeal because it mixes melodramatic punches with sentimental lure, while dealing with the everyday folks of everyday life, easy to understand and follow, without making any undue drain on the mental faculties. James Kirkwood looks good in uniform, a real handsome specimen of a patrolman, and plays the role in refreshingly natural fashion, with Edna Murphy doubling as heroine and the adventuress who is her living image; and proving herself a versatile performer, possessed of considerable physical attractions.

The support is good, director Burton King has kept the action moving swiftly throughout, and introduced several shots of police parades and annual field games which add to the picture's realism. Photography is excellent.

THEME. Melodrama with policeman hero and dressmaker heroine, latter having crook double who causes her lover lots of trouble.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where cop, Jim Ryan, stops runaway horse and saves heroine's little brother. Police station stuff. Realistic slum shots. Race of pursuing patrol boat down river. The climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You should be able to get the local police force interested. Might put on special police night. Stress film's melodramatic strength and romance. Play up James Kirkwood and Edna Murphy.

DRAWING POWER. Good for the neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. A rousing melo with policeman hero and poor girl heroine, has sure audience appeal, outside of highbrow element. Skillfully directed and acted.

THE CAST

Jim Ryan.....James Kirkwood
Alice Bennett.....Edna Murphy
Dorothy Stone.....Edna Murphy
Lieutenant Burke.....Edmund Breese
Maurice Ramon.....Robert McKim

Adapted from stage play by A. Y. Pearson. Director, Burton King. Supervised by Lon Young. Cameraman, C. J. Davis and Jack Brown.

SYNOPSIS. Patrolman Jim Ryan falls in love with Alice Bennett, a dressmaker. During a tussle with fur thieves he fancies he recognizes a woman confederate as Alice. Later he realizes that Alice has a double in Dorothy Stone, a noted thief. Ordered to arrest Alice as Dorothy, Jim tells the captain he is mistaken, and is suspended. Jim realizes that to clear Alice's name he must run down her double. With Alice posing as Dorothy he gets in touch with the gang. Dorothy is killed in a fight, Alice kidnapped. Jim pursues in patrol boat, captures abductor and rescues Alice, whom he weds, after being reinstated.

Graustark

(First National—5900 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THEY'VE made a great audience picture out of this hot-paced romantic story, written by George Barr McCutcheon some twenty years ago, and the first of a long series of best sellers, wherein a young American performs heroic exploits in a mythical foreign country and wins a royal bride. Norma Talmadge as the lovely princess Yetive is a truly fascinating figure giving an exquisite performance which will surely delight all her numerous admirers. Eugene O'Brien in a clean-cut, vigorous portrayal of the handsome young fellow from the U. S., shares dramatic honors with the star, and every member of the carefully selected cast contributes to the picture's well-deserved success. Full credit must be given Dimitri Buchowetzki for his masterly direction. He has handled the big melodramatic situations with just the right amount of reserve, stressing them almost to the breaking point, but never to excess.

THEME. Romantic story with strong melodramatic punches, depicting adventures of young American who mingles in politics of foreign State and wins princess.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. First meeting of princess and hero out West. Hero's arrival in Graustark, The melodramatic situations. Well sustained suspense. Gorgeous settings. Climax where princess's marriage to rival is halted.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Arrange tieup with book stores on McCutcheon novel. Boost the tremendous heart-interest, the exciting action. Tell them this is one of Norma Talmadge's finest. Feature star and Eugene O'Brien.

DRAWING POWER. Any house, big or little, should pack 'em in with this one.

SUMMARY. A fine audience picture adapted from George Barr McCutcheon's well known novel "Graustark." Crammed with melodramatic punches, alive with heart interest. Well directed, beautifully photographed.

THE CAST

"GRAUSTARK," a film version of George Barr McCutcheon's famous novel, is slated as the main attraction at the ——— theatre on ———. Norma Talmadge is the star, with Eugene O'Brien playing the male lead. This is a melodrama in which the progress of a wonderful love story is intermingled with slashing adventure and complicated court intrigue. The hero, a young American, seeks in a foreign country the girl of his dreams and finds her in the person of a princess of the blood royal.

Norma Talmadge is a fascinating figure in the role of the princess, one of her greatest screen portrayals. Among the cast are Marc McDermott, Wanda Hawley, Frank Currier and many other celebrities.

CATCH LINES

A Kingdom revolts in vain against the love of an American for a princess.

The Golden Princess

(Paramount—6395 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A WESTERN melodrama, action taking place in the days of '49, this feature is neither better nor worse than scores of similar pictures whose plots dealt with the gold rush period, presenting rugged but honest miners, dastardly villains, innocent maidens and gallant heroes. The story is said to have been adapted from Bret Harte's "Tennessee's Partner," but except for the name of one of the principal characters, there is nothing whatever in the photoplay to even recall the Harte masterpiece of fiction. There's a good cast in evidence, headed by Betty Bronson, who is delightfully winsome and charming in the heroine role, and well supported by her associates. Miss Bronson's part doesn't really demand much acting ability, but such as it is, she plays it in sprightly fashion, and, due to the interest she excited in her never-to-be-forgotten impersonation of Peter Pan, registers as the best box office asset of "The Golden Princess."

Theme. Western melodrama of California gold rush period, romance, thrills and happy finish.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Realistic and colorful atmosphere and backgrounds. Comedy bits. Fast action. Melodramatic punches. Betty Bronson's personal appeal.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Don't use Bret Harte's name as author. People who like his works would come prepared to welcome a Harte story on the screen, and feel that they had been tricked. Bill as straight melo of '49 days, with lots of excitement, sentimental values, romance. Feature Betty Bronson.

DRAWING POWER. Miss Bronson's widely advertised fame as Peter Pan should bring the fans to see how she makes out in a different role. Picture suited for average house.

SUMMARY. Conventional Western melo of California-flush gold-mining period. Has plenty of stirring action, sentimental and romantic angles, comedy glints. Follows familiar plot trail. Star's name should draw at box office.

This is a stirring adventure and love story of the days of the gold rush in California, brimful of action and strong sentimental appeal. Miss Bronson is said by all critics to give a splendid performance in an altogether different part

The picture is remarkable for its colorful atmosphere and realistic shots of the California of that eventful period. Supporting Miss Bronson are Neil Hamilton, Rockcliffe Fellowes, Phyllis Haver, Joseph Dowling, Edgar Kennedy and George Irving.

CATCH LINES

A story of the California gold days, with cute, winsome Betty Bronson, the celebrated star of "Peter Pan" playing the leading role.

The Phantom of the Opera

(Universal—8464 Feet)

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

IN this picture we have a complete novelty, in that it has been filmed on a spectacular scale from a mystery story, and is the first production of the "super" type in its field. We have had spectacular war specials, historical dramas, pioneer epics, and the like, but just as "The Covered Wagon" was the first "super" western, this is the first "super" mystery thriller. We imagine there will be more of them.

It is also unique in that almost all of the action takes place in, around, above and under the Paris Opera. This has been faithfully reproduced and photographed in color, in many of the scenes. Chaney's long awaited make-up is gruesome enough to satisfy the most exacting.

A splendid cast, both as to type and ability, interprets the Gaston Leroux story. Mary Philbin is a charming Christine, with Kerry as the ardent lover, and Carewe, Gowland, Edwards, Gravina and others are excellent in supplementary roles.

THEME. Melodramatic spectacle, in which insane criminal hides in underground passages of Paris Opera, from where he brings malignant influence to bear on life of heroine and events at the Opera.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Chaney's make-up. The settings of the Opera. The crash of the chandelier. The excellent cast. The pursuit of Erik. The ballet and opera scenes. The general production.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Exploit this along big lines with a dignified and forceful campaign. Feature Chaney, Philbin, etc. Tie up with the photoplay edition of the novel. Tell them about the vast settings in color.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for any house and a good opening campaign should be all that's necessary.

SUMMARY. Represents a novel departure in the production of elaborate spectacles, with a strong, gripping story, enacted by a brilliant cast against backgrounds of unusual beauty

Elliot J. ... direction by Edward Sedgwick.

SYNOPSIS. Christine Daae, understudy of the Paris Opera, is aided in her career by a strange Phantom whom she has never seen. Through his efforts she sings a leading role with great success, but he demands that she give up her fiance. When she refuses, he kidnaps her and takes her into the underground passages of the Opera. Ultimately she is rescued by her lover and the Phantom, an escaped insane criminal, dies.

Kentucky Pride

(Fox—6597 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A RACING melodrama which radiates both human and horse interest, intensely sympathetic and starting from an odd and entertaining angle by having the equine heroine tell her own story. This animal really holds the centre of the stage, although several great race horses of national fame are introduced, including Man O'War, Fair Play, Ladkin, Morvich, The Finn, Negofol and others whose names live in turf history. Interwoven with this is a well developed narrative in which mere humans figure, with thrills, pathos and comedy in rich profusion, but when all is said and done, the chief interest lies in the tale of "Virginia's Future," the horse that broke down at the commencement of a glorious racing career, became the drudge of a junk-dealer, but lived to see her colt Confederacy become the sensation of the turf world and finished as a contented old pensioner in the blue grass pastures.

Henry B. Walthall, in the owner role, and J. Farrell MacDonald, as Donovan, are excellent and receive well balanced support from others in the cast.

THEME. A melodrama of the turf in which a broken-down race-horse tells its life story.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The great racing scenes. The admirable photography, sympathetic interest, suspense, thrills and comedy touches.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature this as a turf story handled from an entirely new direction. Play up the horse romance, the racing sequences, the sympathetic interest, the comedy seasoning.

DRAWING POWER. Should get the money anywhere and please masses as well as high-brow element.

SUMMARY. A melodrama of the turf, with story narrated by horse, handled in unique fashion, strong in sympathetic lure, puts over numerous thrill punches, offers splendid racing shots. A good box office attraction.

THE CAST

Mr. Beaumont	Henry B. Walthall
Donovan	J. Farrell MacDonald
Mrs. Beaumont	Gertrude Astor
Carter	Malcolm Waite
Mrs. Donovan	Belle Stoddard
Danny Donovan	Winston Miller
Virginia Beaumont	Peaches Jackson

Author, Dorothy Yost. Directed by John Ford.

SYNOPSIS. Mr. Beaumont, Kentucky horseman, loses all when his mare, Virginia's Future, falls and is injured when about to win the Futurity. His wife deserts him. Trainer Donovan nurses the horse back to health. She is sold, gives birth to a colt named Confederacy and passes into the possession of a junk man by whom she is ill-treated. Confederacy, ridden by Donovan's son, enters a big race. Donovan and Beaumont bet heavily on Confederacy, who wins. They buy back Virginia's Future and give her a happy home.

Thank You

(A John Ford Prod.-Fox—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

IN "Thank You" John Ford has transferred to the screen one of the most delightful and entertaining stories of the season, a clean tale with a golden rule message that should find its way into every city, town and hamlet of these United States. The picture is an adaptation of the play by Winchell Smith and Tom Cushing, which was presented for a long run on Broadway by John Golden. The action is packed with human interest, situations that strum on the heart strings, moments of quaint humor and some of the finest character portraits registered on the silver sheet in many moons.

THEME. A comedy drama of small town life showing how the hypocrites were made to see the error of their ways by a modern girl and how a hard working but underpaid pastor came into his own.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The acting of Alec B. Francis and other members of the cast. The scene in which the "ladies' aid" discuss the horrors of Paris. The sequence in which David is informed of a cut instead of an increase in salary. The hunt for the lost pastor.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Part of the proceeds of this picture will go to the pension fund for aged and infirm ministers, so go after the co-operation of your local clergy,

DRAWING POWER. The excellent cast, the fame of the authors and producers of the play and the appeal of the story should make this one a welcome attraction

SUMMARY. Appealing comedy drama of "back home" folks, containing much fine acting, many dramatic sequences, a wealth of sure fire humor and a mounting that is a credit to the director.

Based on the play by Winchell Smith and Tom Cushing. Scenario by Frances Marion. Directed by John Ford. Photographed by George Schneiderman.

SYNOPSIS. David Lee, the "thank you" pastor of Dedham, has a salary which consists mostly of stingy donations from miserly vestrymen. David asks for an increase, but the vestrymen use the arrival of a niece from Paris and an unjust "scandal" story about her and the hero, as an excuse for a decrease. The blow is too much for the kindly old minister and he becomes seriously ill. The millionaire father of the hero, grateful to David for aiding in the regeneration of his son, "shows up" the hypocritical vestrymen. David recovers, gets his increase and all ends well.

A Son of His Father

(Victor Fleming Prod.-Paramount—6925 Feet)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

VICTOR FLEMING has made a good western out of this Harold Bell Wright tale. While it is slow in getting started, the early reels being somewhat retarded with unnecessary hokum, the picture picks up later and comes to a close with a satisfactory climax. The plot is not one of startling originality. The villain threatens to foreclose on the mortgage, wanting the ranch as a pasing point over the border for contraband. The hero wins out in foiling his attempt and in the end retains the old homestead. The story is unfolded against an ever changing background of rugged western landscapes.

THEME. A straight western in which the hero thwarts the plans of the villain to get his hands on a rich ranch, the only point not being watched for the latter's contraband smuggling activities.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scene in which Morgan goes alone after his stolen horses and gets them back after some exciting stunts. The good fights. The stirring climax in which the hero turns the tables on the smugglers and with the aid of the border patrol rounds

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the Harold Bell Wright end. Put over book store window tie-ups. Put on a father and son night. Play up the names of the stars.

DRAWING POWER. A good attraction for houses whose patrons like westerns. This one will please because of its good cast and interesting story.

SUMMARY. There are millions who read Harold Bell Wright's works and Paramount has transplanted this novel into a fairly diverting screen drama, which, while possessing nothing new in features of this kind, is well acted and beautifully mounted and has a good quota of thrills.

PRESS NOTICE

THE leading attraction at the ——— theatre on ——— will be "A Son Of His Father" starring Bessie Love and Warner Baxter. This is a colorful and thrilling version of Harold Bell Wright's famous novel, directed by Victor Fleming, who was responsible for many of the big Zane Grey successes. The action takes place in the West, with a hero making a fight against smugglers running contraband across the border.

It is brimful of thrills and romantic interest, much hard riding, gunfights, and attains a rattling climax that will please the most enthusiastic admirers of Westerns. In support of the principals are Raymond Hatton, Walter McGrail, Carl Stockdale, Billy Eugene and other screen favorites.

CATCH LINES

A fast Western melodrama with a great cast, and fine story. Adapted from a novel by one of America's most popular author Harold Bell Wright.

Fair Play

(William Steiner Prod.—5035 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

STARTING off at a rather deliberate gait, this picture gradually develops speed and gets a hold on the audience which doesn't relax until it swings into a highly satisfactory climax. It stands out as an uncommonly "good buy" for the state rights field, offering an interesting plot with love angles and crook atmosphere ingeniously blended. Its drawing power is intensified by a strong cast, featuring Edith Thornton and Lou Tellegen, with several well-known players in support, each name possessing box office value. The film has general audience appeal, is well directed and O. K. for the family trade, despite its sensational developments.

Edith Thornton gives a colorful performance as heroine Norma Keith, Lou Tellegen has a role which doesn't win him much sympathy until toward the close, when he finally makes good with the girl who has sacrificed so much for him,

THEME. Heart interest drama with crook atmosphere, depicting devotion of heroine to her employer, who weds the wrong woman but afterwards turns to girl who clears him of murder charge.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Acting of Edith Thornton and Lou Tellegen. Scene where murder is committed. Suspense and melodramatic punches. Situation where hero finally realizes that he loves girl who has stuck by him through trouble.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the woman's devotion and self-sacrifice angles. Stress the realistic crook atmosphere, sensational trend and love interest. Feature Edith Thornton and Lou Tellegen.

DRAWING POWER. An excellent attraction for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Heart interest drama with strong crook angle and romantic lure and heroine who dares all to save man she loves from murder charge. Has universal appeal, well directed and acted.

PRESS NOTICE

A STRONG heart interest drama, with fascinating crook atmosphere, a sensational murder mystery and continuous thrills, is outlined in "Fair Play" the feature film scheduled for the screen of the ———— theatre on ————. Edith Thornton, in the heroine role, is wonderfully appealing as the girl who is willing to sacrifice herself for the man she loves, and Lou Tellegen gives a powerful performance as the hero.

The story deals with the infatuation of lawyer for an unworthy woman whom he weds, the love of his faithful girl-secretary for him, and her successful efforts to clear him of a murder charge when his wife is slain by her lover. Gaston Glass and Betty Francisco appear in important roles.

CATCH LINES

He wed the wrong woman, but the girl who really loved him was rewarded in the end.

The Thoroughbred

(Truart—5481 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AN acceptable program offering, skilfully directed by Oscar Apfel and presenting a cast of standard merit. It is snappy comedy drama, with a full quota of thrills, well-turned love angle, and there's an exciting horse race in which an entry backed by hero and heroine actually loses—this being a totally unprecedented event in filmland, especially when the leading man is supposed to have bet his last nickel on the result. But so it runs with the losers reaching happiness goal by another route than that of the turf. Maclyn Arbuckle, as the testy millionaire uncle, and Carter De Haven, in the role of a society hanger-on, broke but cheerful, are responsible for the laughs and get a lot of fun out of their respective roles. Theodore Von Eltz and Gladys Hulette are the lovers around whose varying fortunes the plot swirls. Both work with considerable vim and decided appeal and the support is adequate.

THEME. Comedy drama, with racing sequence, in which he has to make the high society grade in order to please wealthy uncle.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Arbuckle and De Haven's comedy work. Development of love affair. Scene in which Drummond is thrashed by Bob Bemis. The horse race, with unusual ending. Acting of Theodore Von Eltz and Gladys Hulette.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature as amusing comedy drama in which hero is compelled to break into social running because his rich uncle wants to boost the family name. Play up heroine's rescue by lover from assailant and big fight which ensues. Horse race worth mentioning, but not as main thing in picture. Advertise Von Eltz, Gladys Hulette, Maclyn Arbuckle and De Haven.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Fast comedy drama with well sustained love interest, thrill stuff, horse race and bright, gingery comedy. A good program attraction.

The Thoroughbred (Truart)

PRESS NOTICE

SENSATIONAL incident, an appealing love romance and bright comedy are combined in "The Thoroughbred," which is due to appear on the screen of the ———— theatre on ————. The plot hinges on the desire of a wealthy uncle to have his nephew break into high society, instead of which the young fellow falls in love with a pretty chorus girl and buys a racehorse, which loses in a thrilling race.

Malclyn Arbuckle and Carter De Haven furnish the laughs, with Theodore Von Eltz and Gladys Hulette doing great work as hero and heroine. A large suporting cast is in evidence, with Hallam Cooley, Virginia Brown Faire, Lillian Langdon, Thomas Jefferson and other favorites playing important roles

His uncle wanted him to break into society, but Bob Bemis preferred the quiet life and the girl he loved.

Regional News from Correspondents

Central Penn.

A CAMERAMAN of the Wilmer & Vincent organization accompanied the 400 members of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce on its annual "cruise" during the four days of which they visited nine cities, going as far west as Detroit. He shot pictures of the cruisers' activities everywhere and these are to be shown later in the various Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg. This was the largest excursion of the kind from the viewpoint of the number participating ever made by the business and professional men of any city of the United States, and included visits to Lewiston, Altoona, Johnstown, Pittsburgh, Youngstown, Cleveland, Detroit, Buffalo and Williamsport.

C. Floyd Hopkins, manager of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg, and a former president of the Chamber of Commerce, was chairman of the Program and Stunts committee of the cruise, which provided the entertainment for the excursionists. This included a big theatre party in Cleveland. The cruisers left Harrisburg on the morning of September 8 and returned the evening of the 11th, covering a total of 900 miles, part by rail and part by steamships on the Great Lakes.

Announcement has been made of the complete personnel of the executive staff of the half-million-dollar New Strand picture theatre that was formally opened by the Nathan Appell Amusement Enterprises, in York, on August 27. Louis J. Appell is general manager of this and the other Appell theatres in York; the manager of the New Strand is C. C. Pippin; house manager, C. W. Hoffman; organist, John De Palma; assistant organist, J. Howard Wiley; chief projectionist, W. E. Raffensberger; treasurer, Marie Rhoads; chief usher, Raymond Landis; chief doorman, Daniel Petrie, and special officer, E. J. Smith. Individual motion pictures of each of these employees was displayed on the New Strand screen as a feature of the program on the opening night.

Special Labor Day programs were provided in many of the Central Pennsylvania picture theatres, some of which put on four instead of three performances for the holiday. A feature of the Labor Day Program at the Alto theatre, Columbia, Lancaster county, was a display of local films of the thousands who attended the Lancaster City bathing revue at which the final selection was made of Miss Estella Wittell as "Miss Lancaster" for the 1925 Atlantic City bathing beauty pageant. The feature film for Labor Day at the Alto was "A Thief in Paradise," with Doris Kenyon, Aileen Pringle and Ronald Colman.

The new fire-proof steel and concrete theatre erected by Julius Freedman, in Forest City, with a seating capacity of 1,000, was formally opened on Labor Day.

James McFadden, at one time proprietor of the Lyric theatre, Kulpmont, died very suddenly at his home in Dalmatia. He was 40 years old.

The Strand theatre, Shamokin, operated by the Chamberlain Amusement Enterprises, Inc., was formally opened on Labor Day for the 1925-1926 season. It is devoted to pictures and vaudeville. Announcement was made that the Strand Concert Orchestra will be under the direction of Jack Dale.

The Columbia Opera House, Columbia, Lancaster county, had a special Labor Day program of pictures and vaudeville, at which special prices were made for the holiday. Admittance to the matinee was 10 cents for children and 25 for grown-ups, while the evening prices were, children 10 cents and adults 25 and 40 cents. The feature film was "Paths to Paradise," with Betty Compson and Raymond Griffith.

The Feeley theatre, Hazleton, put on four programs instead of the usual three, for Labor Day. The feature film was "The Mine With the Iron Door." There were two matinees and two night shows.

Improvements recently made under direction of Manager F. E. Barry, to the interior of the Jackson picture theatre, York, include a new system of colored lights, a new silk curtain and extensive redecorations and renovations.

Herman Fisher, of New York, special exploiteer for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company, and Mr. Pyle, of the Philadelphia office, have arranged with the Harrisburg Evening News to print in serial form the story, "The Unholy Three," on which the film play of that name is based.

There is speculation rife in Harrisburg as to whether Peter Magaro, pioneer picture exhibitor of that city, who last spring sold his Regent theatre to the Marcus Loew interests will reenter the picture business in Harrisburg. Upon his return recently from a summer spent in Europe, Mr. Magaro was asked whether he has any such intentions, to which he replied: "That is a matter which I cannot discuss at this time." He said, however, that for the present he will devote his entire time to the management of his Coliseum dance hall and amusement building and to his large Harrisburg real estate interests.

Several motion picture exhibitors are reported to be negotiating for control of the theatre in the new Moose Temple, in Reading, which is soon to be completed, at 1018 Penn street, but at this writing no lease has been made.

Wilmer & Vincent's Hippodrome theatre, Reading, has a new manager in the person of William Masard, of New York, who succeeds Frank S. Mickley who has been made manager of the Rajah, pictures and vaudeville, which has just been reopened for the Fall season.

Among the Pennsylvania theatres reopened on Labor Day for the Fall season, is the Poli theatre, Wilkes-Barre, which has been renovated during the summer and which has increased its seating capacity by the removal of the lower boxes, devoting the space to several rows of new seats. Fred Herman is manager.

Houston

CURTIS DUNHAM, publicity man for Paramount in the southwest was in town this week enroute to Galveston. Mr. Dunham won fame and promotion with his organization last spring when he dug up the original heroine of "North of 36" the Emerson Hough novel which Paramount filmed in Texas. South of San Antonio in the cattle country Dunham found the original Tessie Lockhart around whose ranch this famous story was laid. He plans to have a big publicity campaign on Paramount's forthcoming production "The Pony Express." From Galveston Mr. Dunham will go to San Antonio, stopping again in Houston enroute.

Word has reached Houston that Earl E. Crabb, for the past two years district manager for Southern Enterprises, Inc., of Texas has been promoted to the directorship of Paramount's biggest theatre in Boston which will be open in about seven weeks. Mr. Crabb was very popular with the theatre men and public in general and many regret that he is leaving but wish him good luck in his new field. He will be succeeded by T. L. Freedle who has been director of the Palace theatre, Dallas for two years. Prior to his connection in Dallas he was a publicity man for Paramount in the West.

Sam Abrams and family of the Rialto theatre left Sunday morning for a motor trip through north Texas. They plan to be out of the city about ten days.

S. L. Lowery, manager for Progress Film Exchange was in town this week booking his new product with the Crown and Folly theatre.

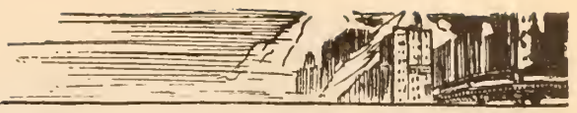
Harve Holland Tent Theatre has opened an indefinite engagement on Harrisburg Blvd, just outside the city limits. This is the first tent theatre to open in Houston for more than three years, the last one played a 54 weeks' engagement.

E. L. Bickert, road man for Saenger Amusement Co. who has been in Houston for several days has returned to Dallas, where his company control the Old Mill Theatre, a former Paramount Theatre.

The Majestie, the local Interstate Amusement Co., vaudeville, theatre is featuring a picture attraction above their vaudeville number. This is the first time in the history of the Majestic that this policy has been followed. Tom Mix is the star that is being featured at the Majestic. They are doing extensive advertising both newspaper and outdoor.

Virgil E. Siner and his company who have been playing at the Prince theatre for the past ten weeks will close their engagement Sept. 12th. For the final week they are featuring Ollie Bebrow, a Houston black face comedian, who has played in vaudeville for several seasons also with "The Follies" for one season.

The new popular price theatre being erected at 914 Preston avenue has a new name, however it won't be open for several weeks yet. It was first called the Cameo theatre and signs were posted to that effect but a few days later the signs were hauled down and it will make its bow to the world under the title of the RITZ Theatre. Work is progressing at a fast clip and the management is sure they will be able to open before many days of the fall season have passed.



Work on the new million dollar theatre has been held up, temporarily. This theatre is being built by Jesse H. Jones, local capitalist, and will be leased to the Famous-Players organization. It will rank with the best in the South when completed.

Sam Abrams, manager of the Rialto theatre, is giving the film boys a whiz in his brand new Hudson car. Sam plans to take a few weeks off in a short time and motor through Texas.

Hal. H. Norfleet, newly appointed exploitation manager for Fox Film Exchange, southern district, is in Houston for a short time.

Chicago

PRESIDENT Al Steffes of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the Northwest, was in Chicago last week in the interests of his organization.

General Manager F. M. Brockell of the Balaban & Katz Midwest Theatres, Inc., has appointed C. E. Bond, well known exchange manager, to an executive position with the Midwest organization. Mr. Bond resigned the managership of Associated First National's Chicago office to accept the new post. He had been manager of the First National office for the past five years and prior to that was associated with Paramount as sales manager for more than three years.

Lou Metzger, manager of the Complete Plan Service Department of Universal, is making his headquarters in Chicago for a few days and while here conferred with Manager Alexander and held several sales meetings in which all salesmen participated. Mr. Metzger is making a complete tour of Universal exchanges and will go as far west as the Pacific Coast before returning to New York City.

Bill Brimmer is now handling the north side territory for First National, formerly covered by Carl Leserman, who was promoted to city sales manager and Tom Gilliam has been appointed to the south side.

Ward P. Woolbridge of the Hays organization is in Chicago, promoting the Saturday Morning Movie Movement. Distribution of programs which have been specially prepared for children, will be made through Universal's Chicago exchange.

M. Siegel, former owner of the New Home Theatre, has returned to Chicago after a three month's vacation in the east, which included visits to the principal cities and a sojourn at a Catskill Mountains summer resort.

Manager Frank Scott of the Iris Theatre, has returned from a motor trip to the Dells of Wisconsin, which he enjoyed in the company of Mrs. Scott.

Starting on September 3rd the Rialto Theatre at Altamont, Illinois, will be opened on Thursday and Friday nights.

Frank Marshall, popular Wurlitzer salesman, is back on the job selling organs after an illness of three weeks. Mr. Marshall was overcome with the grippe while on the road and had to be brought back to Chicago.

The committee in charge of the Midwest Film Golf Tournament has sent out notices to the effect that the fall tournament will be held on Friday, September 18th at Olympia Fields, it having been necessary to make this change in playing arrangements to accommodate the large crowd that has entered. Entries should be sent, at the earliest possible time, to F. M. Brockell, 162 N. State Street, Chicago.

Charles Pyle, who expects to open his beautiful new theatre at Danville, Illinois, at an early date, has taken over the Victory Theatre at Kokomo, Indiana, from Manager Heller. The new Danville house will be one of the handsomest theatres in the state and will accommodate 600 patrons.

The eight motion picture theatres located in Champaign and Urbana are operating despite the strike of operators, whose demand for a substantial wage increase was refused. The strike was called at 2:30 A. M. and before 1:00 P. M. that day, a sufficient number of operators to keep the machines going in all the houses, was on hand and performances went on as usual.

J. J. Schmuck is now connected with Associated Exhibitors as a salesman covering Illinois territory. Mr. Schmuck came from New York to take this position.

A group of independent producers have chartered Premier Films, Inc., under the laws of Illinois, with I. E. Chadwick as president and Henry Ginsberg as vice-president, and have completed arrangements with Joe Friedman of Celebrated Players Film Corporation, whereby the latter company will distribute in Illinois and Indiana the pictures produced or purchased by Premier Film Company. According to Mr. Friedman, the new connection assures Celebrated of fifty feature releases for the year.

Rubens Rialto Square, the big theatre now under course of construction in Joliet will be ready for opening about January 31st, according to Morris Rubens, who states it will be one of the finest houses in the middle west with a seating capacity for about three thousand. A feature of this house will be the lobby which Mr. Rubens states will be even larger than that of Balaban & Katz's recently opened Uptown Theatre.

Regge Doran of Pathe's Public Relations Department, is making her headquarters at this company's Chicago office for the present and while here will work to establish closer relations between the exhibitors and their patrons.

Joe Lyons is now selling film for Renown on Chicago's south 'side, after several years' connection with Fox Film Corporation.

Bill Cook who has been covering the south side for Associated First National, is going to Florida, where it is said he may remain. Another former Chicago film man who is now located in Florida, is J. A. Steinson, who recently severed his connection with Warner Brothers.

The Stratford Theatre is presenting Miss Eva Tanguay to its patrons this week, in addition to the "Diamond Horseshoe," a sensational stage presentation produced by Francis A. Mangan, as well as the usual program of pictures.

The Enterprise Theatre Company, Inc., celebrated anniversary week at their Empress Theatre, 6230 S. Halsted Street, starting on August 31st. As a feature of the occasion they dedicated their new Robert Morton Unit Organ with Harry Wagner solo organist at the console. Many floral offerings were received by Billy Pearson, manager, and quite an assemblage of film men helped make the affair a success.

C. R. Johnson has taken over the Gem Theatre at Grafton, Illinois, and will start remodeling the house some time in September.

Milwaukee

STATE Fair Week again demonstrated itself as a negligible quantity as a box office booster for downtown Milwaukee picture houses, according to opinions expressed by leading local exhibitors, who declare that the advent of the fair just outside of Milwaukee last week did not add one whit to their receipts. Nevertheless, the week was a good one in most of the theatres, but all credit for this is given to the film attractions rather than the fact that tens of thousands of up-state visitors crowded local hotels.

Jack O'Toole, manager of the Minneapolis branch of the Producers Distributing Corporation, stopped in Milwaukee for a short visit with friends among the film men and exhibitors, enroute to Chicago on a business trip.

Paramount Week was celebrated in Milwaukee by having a Paramount picture in each of the downtown Saxe houses, including the Wisconsin, Strand, Merrill and Miller theatres, this week. The Saxe organization has contracted for the Paramount product this year and is distributing the pictures among its various first run houses as listed.

Elmer Zieman, assistant manager of the Wisconsin Theatre, has returned from a two week's vacation in Yellowstone National Park. Among the souveniers brought back is one set of blisters on Elmer's foot, acquired through the unique expedient of inserting said pedal extremity into an ambitious geyser at the park. Elmer also tried his luck at broncho busting while in the west. It is expected that he will be able to sit down without a groan as early as next Thanksgiving.

Carl Ebert, formerly of Metro-Goldwyn, has joined the sales force of F. B. O. at Milwaukee, replacing Lee Anger, resigned. He will travel in the Wisconsin territory.

Frank Trottman, manager of the Gem Theatre, Milwaukee, has left for the Northland to indulge in his annual four weeks of fishing. In order to satisfy the expectations of only half his friends at Milwaukee, who all look for a shipment of fish within the next few days, he will have to catch every scaled inhabitant of the Great Lakes as well as the inland waters of the Wisconsin Land O'Lakes. He probably will, at that.

Sam Abrams, Milwaukee manager for F. B. O., has just returned from a very successful sales boosting trip through Northern Wisconsin, and plans within the next few days to go to the Upper Michigan peninsula, to work in cooperation with Dick Scheinbaum, who with headquarters at Crystal Falls, Mich., has been promoting F. B. O. interests in that territory.

The advent of two double week first runs on Grand Avenue during the same overlapping period is something new in Milwaukee. This week the Alhambra is holding its opening program, featuring "The Gold Rush," for a second week, while the Merrill is doing excellent business with the first week of the two week run of "The Ten Commandments."

Percy E. Brown, 52 years old, 408 Washington street, Jamestown, N. Y., who was granted a permit September 1 to build a $100,000 theatre in Taylor street, in the Chautauqua lake city, died suddenly of heart disease at his home on the evening of the same day. Mr. Brown was returning from a stroll when he collapsed in front of his home. For the past eight years Mr. Brown has operated the Royal theatre in Jamestown.

Falling 90 feet down an elevator shaft at the new Shea's Buffalo theatre, Daniel Shea, 46 years old, 20 North Pearl street, suffered serious internal injuries and a possible fracture of the skull. He is in the Millard Fillmore hospital. Shea was working alone on a ladder at the top of an elevator shaft. The cause of his fall could not be learned. He landed on a pile of planks at the foot of the shaft. He was employed by the Elevator Company of America, which is installing elevators in the theatre.

Stewart Parmalee, former manager of the Capitol theatre in South Park section of Buffalo, is now selling flivvers for a Main street lizzie agency. Many of his distributor friends along Film Row have been in to look over the new models and several have filed orders with Stewart.

Howard Waugh, who for many years was connected with moving picture theatres in Jamestown, N. Y., has been appointed manager of the remodeled Alhambra theatre in Milwaukee, which has been acquired by Universal. Mr. Waugh had been managing houses for Paramount before accepting the Milwaukee post, his last positions having been in Memphis and Atlanta.

Paramount will build a new exchange building in Buffalo in North Pearl street which will be the last word in structures of this type. It is expected the building will be ready for use soon after the first of the new year.

"Hub" Taylor, Pathe plugger in the Southern Tier, was seen the other day, all dolled up in the latest things in golf togs. Another good man has fallen for the famous Scotch game. Tom North, Pathe publicity representative, was in Buffalo the other day for a visit with local manager Basil Brady.

Al Beckerich, manager of Loew's State, pulled a good one when he arranged to have "Miss Pittsburgh" (Miss Mildred Walker) appear at his house for one day when she arrived in Buffalo on her way to the beauty tournament in Atlantic City. As a result Al got a lot of publicity gained in tieups with local auto and other merchants.

Richard C. Fox, president of Freedom Film corporation of Buffalo, announces the signing of a contract for the distribution of 24 Golden Arrow features for 1925-26 in upper New York state. "I am more than fortunate in securing the Golden Arrow franchise," said Mr. Fox, "and am thoroughly impressed with the fact that the independent producer is making a product on par with the best pictures turned out by the big combinations."

Ray S. Averill, manager of the Olympic, Buffalo, is distributing house programs in which is printed a free ticket good one night of the week. Fair enough.

Lionel Edel, manager of the Ritz theatre, Niagara Falls, N. Y., took a half page ad in the local newspaper to announce the booking of the entire Fox product for 1925-26. "Lightning" the first of the bookings is being shown this week.

Harry Gribbon, Mack Sennett comedian, was in Buffalo this week, with a company, appearing on the vaudeville program at the Lafayette Square.

The week of September 20 promises to be a big one at the Palace theatre, Lockport, when Manager George T. Cruzen will offer a new Paramount feature, five acts of vaudeville and Sousa's Band, all at regular prices. Mr. Cruzen is plastering every highway leading into the Lock City with three sheets and continuing to wake up the natives with his live wire exploitation stunts. He has just put up large photos of all the Paramount stars in the barber shop next door to the theatre.

Jim Savage, manager of the Buffalo office of Chase Pictures corporation, announces that Eugene Sternman, formerly with film companies in Philadelphia, is now representing the firm in Albany.

San Francisco

MORTIMER THOMAS, pioneer in the San Francisco motion picture world, has sold his interest in the Golden State Theatre & Realty Corporation at a figure reputed to be $100,000. The transaction is said to have involved the sale of 10,000 shares of stock in the corporation, which was taken by associates in the company. The Golden State Theatre and Realty Corporation operates a circuit of theatres in Northern California. Thomas retains his individual holdings in various theatres in San Francisco and Oakland.

Harry Goldberg, of the Famous-Lasky organization, accompanied by his wife, arrived in San Francisco on the President Polk. He was rounding up a tour of the company's properties while vacationing. Goldberg has just been made head of the Southern Division of theatres, according to word received from New York.

Featured in Fanchon and Marco's novelty act, "Screenland Beauties of 1925" a the Loew's Warfield is Miss Nelly Kelly, a native daughter of San Francisco, who recently completed a successful tour of the Orpheum circuit, and has just signed a contract whereby she will be featured by Larry Semon in his next big productions which will soon be under way at the F. B. O. Studio where Larry produces his features pictures.

Samuel H. Levin has plans under way for four theatres. One at Balboa Street and 38th Ave. is already under construction. The others are to be at Divisadero and Hayes streets, Polk street at Broadway and Fillmore and California streets.

Plans for a jubilee cruise of the motion picture industry in which motion pictures stars and directors will make a special trip to San Francisco during Jubilee week, were announced. The cruise will be taken on board the steamer H. F. Alexander.

Denver

THE new State Theatre, formerly the Strand, is being rapidly remodeled, redecorated and generally overhauled in preparation for a grand and glorious opening September 18th. The new theatre promises to be the most beautiful one on Curtis Street, both exterior and interior. The people of Denver will be refunded with something entirely new in the way of artistic decorations. The theatre will be strictly first-run opening Friday night, September 18th with "Hell's Highroad".

Joe Roth, manager of Fox Theatres in Denver, and Mel Wilson, manager of the branch of Fox Film Corporation, met James R. Grainger, the general sales manager of Fox Organization, in Cheyenne, Wyoming a few days ago. They accompanied Mr. Grainger to North Platte, Nebraska, holding a business conference with their manager while riding on the train. They returned to Denver from North Platte, Mr. Grainger going on to New Mexico.

An unusual number of exhibitors visited Denver during the past week. Some of those who visited film row were Fred Lee, owner and operator of the Victory Theatre, Lamar, Colorado; R. C. Geeting, owner of the Lyric Theatre, Chappel, Nebraska; W. B. Cook and wife, who operate the Dawson Opera House, Dawson, New Mexico; William Ostenburg Jr., owner and manager of the Orpheum Theatre, Scottsbluff, and a small chain in Western Nebraska.

All film men connected with Mendenhall are looking forward to his immediate recovery.

George Carpenter, managing director for the Louis Marcus enterprises, announces that the new Paramount Theatre in Ogden, Utah, will open on September 9th, with Richard Dix in "The Lucky Devil." This new house will run Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn and United Artists Pictures, with Pathe and Educational comedies, and Fox News.

Louis Marcus leaves here for Chicago tomorrow to attend a film meeting.

The Paramount Empress Theatre had a very unique entrance arrangement this week in connection with their showing of "Sally of the Sawdust." They carry one in imagination to the big circus tent, by the sawdust under foot, the tent awning overhead, the ticket wagon in place of the box office, and a real honest-to-goodness lemonade and peanut stand, arranged by Carpenter.

George L. Cloward, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer here, is making the key towns in Montana and expects to be gone about two weeks. All Metro-Goldwyn salesmen are still in their respective territories sending in large numbers of contracts.

W. B. Seib, manager of the local Pathe branch, has returned from a short trip through Idaho in the especial interest of "The Freshman."

Word from New York has just been received at the Pathe exchange that the Salt Lake office has won the contest for the Storey Victory Campaign. The winning of the first prize in this division will mean $1,300 for this office.

C. J. Hamal, Pathe salesman, has just left for a two weeks' trip in Idaho. R. D. Boomer is still in Southern Utah where he has been for the past three weeks. He is expected in the office within the next few days.

R. S. Stackhouse, in charge of the Warner Brothers exchange in this city, leaves in a few days for a short trip into Montana.

L. W. Hyde, who covers the Southern Utah and Nevada territory out of the local Warner Brothers office, is still in Southern Utah, doing a very consistent business. Harry Gibson is sending in the contracts from Idaho, and George E. Jensen from Montana.

It is reported at the Associated First National exchange here that manager W. F. Gordon will return from New York the latter part of this week.

Don Baker of the Perkins Campbell Co., neighbors to the Broadway Film Bldg., is making several radio sets of high power to be used by the Cincinnati Theatre equipment. J. Gelman however, is of the opinion that the sets will never be finished for the simple reason that he paid for the parts in advance and he is very suspicious. Not that Don needs the money, for he has purchased the parts, but it has been too blame hot to work on a radio set up till now and pretty soon it will be too cold to work on anything.

M. D. Devere of the Palace Theatre, Sabina, O., spent several days in the city last week.

John Gregory of the Liberty and Colonial Theatres, Springfield, O., paid his monthly visit to film row.

Much news could be gathered at the F. B. O. offices from Ralph Kinsler, the genial office manager, were it not for the weekly sales meetings held and presided over by Ed. Booth the hustling manager of the local exchange. Anything to better your sales, Ed., say we.

Gus Schifos of the Strand Theatre, Middletown, O., is ill in a local hospital.

Clarence Bell and John Haggerty are checking for Paramount on "The Ten Commandments."

Chas. Regan, district manager for Famous Players, with offices in Cincinnati, returned the other day from Chicago where he attended a convention of district managers of his firm.

Dick Roche has resigned as salesman for Paramount. His immediate connections have not been announced as yet, but will be at an early date.

The Hollywood Theatre in Portsmouth, O., opened to the public last week under the management of Miss Julia Law. The opening was an auspicious occasion for Miss Law and the city on the river with the following theatre and exchange men in attendance: Nat Lefkowitz, manager for Standard; J. M. Johnston, manager for Educational; Nick Shafer, manager for Producers; the Myer Brothers, leading exhibitors of Chillicothe, O.; Gus Sun, well-known theatrical man from Springfield, O., Al Sugarman, short subjects manager for Universal and Chas. Lowenburg, Universal exploiteer.

On Wednesday, September 9th, the Gem Theatre, Newark, Ohio, under the management of Shull & Gallagher, will open as a strict Universal house. The theatre has been entirely decorated and a new twenty thousand dollar organ has been installed. Attendance at the opening will be strictly by invitation.

An extra Universal trade showing will be held at the Grand Theatre, Ironton, O., on September 16th. L. G. Frecka is manager of the house. Chas. Lowenburg, Universal exploiteer, is making all the arrangements.

L. B. Wilson, manager of the Liberty Theatre, Covington, Ky., has secured the Tom Mix pictures for release in his house. He is of the opinion that they will do big business for him.

Rufus Davis, one of the most popular men in Southern film circles, who has been the North Carolina representative for Liberty Film Distributing corporation up until the present time, is to assume on the 15th of September the management of an exchange in Charlotte, the newly created North and South Carolina office of Liberty Film Distributing corporation. Formal announcement of the addition of this exchange in their chain was made by Oscar Oldknow, president of the company. It will be located at 223 West Fourth Street, where Metro-Goldwyn also have their quarters. The office will be opened on September 15th.

Phelps Sasseen will be star salesman for the new exchange and will represent the company on the road. Miss Bertha Schindelhauer, will be another member to transfer to the Charlotte office, where she will have the position of bookkeeper. It is planned at present that Mr. Davis will select the rest of his office force in Charlotte, no other transfers being reported at this time.

Reynolds Wilbanks and O. L. Freeman, members of the local Paramount exchange, left town Wednesday on a business trip through the southern part of Georgia. They will return to the city shortly.

Mrs. E. C. Dunn has assumed the duties of chief accountant in the Paramount exchange this week.

Charlotte

C. D. Turner, of the Carolina Theatres Incorporated, Asheville, N. C., announces they have taken over the Rivoli Theatre at Lincolnton, N. C., and the Rivoli Theatre at Hickory, N. C. These theatres were formerly managed by Claude Lee. Turner announces they have taken over the Grand Theatre at Newton, N. C., which is being remodeled and put in first class condition.

Claude Lee, who was formerly manager of the Rivoli Theatres at Hickory and Lincolnton, N. C., has disposed of his interests and accepted a position with Universal as manager of one of their theatres in Florida.

F. P. Bryan, manager of First National is attending a sales meeting of his Company in New York.

E. C. Pearce, who formerly owned the Amuzu Theater, of Winston-Salem, N. C. and sold same to A. F. Sames, of that city, is now manager of the Broadway Theatre, Columbia, S. C., for Warner Brothers.

The Carolina Theatre Supply Company has moved to their new quarters in the new Film Building. J. U. McCormick, owner, stated that he had put in a complete line of equipment and theatre supplies and that he would now be in a position to place on the floor of his exhibition room models of the new Superior Machine of which he has sold a large number in this territory. McCormick states that he was unable to place a machine on the floor previously as the factory could not keep up with his sales as they were behind in their orders.

Nat L. Royster, General Manager in charge of Warner Brothers Theatres in this territory, returned last Friday from a week's visit to the Home Office in New York and reported that everything was moving a top speed in Warner Brothers production schedule. Royster also announces important changes in additions to the management of the Broadway Theatre, in Charlotte, N. C. S. H. B. Stough, formerly manager of the Rialto Theatre, Birmingham, Ala., has been appointed by him to assistant managership of the Broadway. Plans have been completed for the installation of a fourteen piece orchestra in the Broadway on September 14th. This theatre will on September 14th begin presenting vaudeville sketches and musical numbers, which on and after that date will be a part of the weekly program.

Thomas A. Little, has been appointed manager of the Producers & Distributors Corporation in Atlanta, to succeed Amma H. Sessions. Little entered into his new duties the past week. Little, who was connected with Metro-Goldwyn Exchange in Charlotte for almost five years, was also associated with the Hodkinson Corporation before it became Producers & Distributors Corporation, for a period of about eighteen months. Executives of the Producers & Distributors feel they have secured in Mr. Little a man thoroughly versed in film exchange work.

R. H. Masterman, formerly advertising manager of Famous Players is now traveling North Carolina for Metro-Goldwyn out of the Charlotte office.

Ernest Neiman, District representative, for Producers & Distributors, has left the past week for Atlanta and will make a trip covering all the exchanges in the Southeast.

N. Miras is building a new theatre in Greensboro, N. C., which will seat about 800. This house will be a colored theatre.

E. F. Dardine, Manager of the Universal Exchange, Charlotte, N. C. has just returned from a two weeks vacation.

The New Charlotte theatre will open it's doors to the public on Labor Day. This was formerly the old Ideal Theatre. This house has been torn out completely and rebuilt and redecorated. They will seat about 500 and we understand they will play large productions second run. This theatre will be managed by Harry Lucas, and it is also one of a chain of theatres owned by the Sunset Amusement Company controlled by Arthur Lucas.

Cleveland

NORMAN MORAY, late manager of the local First National Exchange, now a bona fide Florida real estate broker, was in town for just one day last week. "Nothing like it," says Moray. "After you get the first million, everything's clear sailing." Both Moray and Nat Baruch, also a former local exchange manager now located in Florida, have taken to commuting between Miami and Cleveland.

J. E. Beck, for the past nine years connected with the local Vitagraph exchange, first as assistant manager, and then as manager, is now with the Cleveland office of Producers Distributing Corporation. He's visiting the exhibitors in the Youngstown territory in person.

G. C. Johnson, who used to be the local Producers Distributing Corporation's sales force, is now with Fox Film in Cincinnati.

Robert Cotton, P. D. C., division manager for District No. 4 held a central sales meeting last Saturday at the Statler Hotel, where he passed on to the exchange managers of his territory, the sales policies of the company as expounded at the recent division managers' convention in New York. Among those present were: George W. Erdman, Cleveland exchange manager; Frank Stuart, Detroit manager; G. R. Ainsworth, Pittsburgh manager; N. G. Shafer, Cincinnati manager; Dudley Williston, Indianapolis manager; Chester Loewe, district representative; Carroll S. Trowbridge, Christy representative; and H. O. Duke, assistant secretary of the corporation.

Ike Lipston, southern Ohio motion picture magnate, has purchased all of W. N. Skirboll's Gold Seal productions for showing in his Cincinnati and Dayton houses.

George Moore, theatre owner of Bucyrus and Bellevue is very ill in a hospital at Bellevue. He had a sudden attack of appendicitis. Before he could be operated upon, the appendix burst. His many friends in Cleveland are anxiously awaiting word of his condition.

Max Marcus, proprietor of the U. S. Theatre has sent out announcements to his many patrons, of the formal opening of his house on Labor Day for the season. True, the U. S. has never been closed. The "opening" means simply the beginning of the new season's pictures. He sent out 2,000 notices on Sunday, the day before the opening, and another 2,000 on Monday, the day of the opening. The U. S. is the only picture theatre in Cleveland that operates all the year through without a break and without any tears. All seasons are good. All weather is good. The 1,400 seats in the U. S. are always filled, regardless of the thermometer, be it too high or too low. And the reason for this is Price. Marcus charges five and ten cents admission. Never more. And his motto is "WHY PAY MORE?" He gives his patrons a daily change, each program consisting of a feature, a comedy, a news and a novelty. Also there is a symphony orchestra. The U. S. theatre is located in a district of toilers. They need entertainment. Max Marcus gives to them, good entertainment, at a price that makes it available for the whole family. So the ten cent pieces mount up until Marcus is rated one of the most successful exhibitors in the territory.

E. Mandlebaum has issued invitations to a pre-release showing of "The Iron Horse" at his Temple theatre, Toledo, for Friday night. The picture opens its Toledo engagement at the Temple the following Saturday. City officials, railroad officials and friends received invitations to the party. This is the first opening of the Temple since Mandelbaum remodelled the house.

The Film Bldg. register was much in use last week. The following out-of-town exhibitors were signed: Paul Muelle, manager of the Palace theatre, Ashtabula; Arthur Dunlevy, Strand, Akron; J. S. Beidler, Eastwood, Royal and East Auditorium, Toledo; Charles Menches, Liberty, Akron. And Charles Barbian of Akron was here. Barbian is interesting in the new Keith building in Akron, which will play a combination vaudeville and picture policy, so it is understood.

The Standard Film Service Company of Cleveland has issued invitations to a midnight screening on Friday, September 11, of two of their pictures of the season, namely, "Souls for Sables," and "The Girl who wouldn't Work." Harry Charnas, president of the Standard Film Service Company, has purchased in excess of 200 pictures for release in Ohio, Michigan, West Virginia and western Pennsylvania, the largest number of pictures to be released by any independent exchange in the country. Charnas states that he has over a hundred pictures now in his exchange, all finished and ready for release. The private screening is the first of a series by which Charnas will introduce the type of product to be released through his exchanges.

One hundred theatres in this territory were playing Paramount pictures during Paramount week. Paramount pictures were being advertised everywhere — on bill boards, in store windows, with stunts, through the newspapers, and with co-operative merchants ads. All of which helped both the exhibitor and Paramount week.

The Capitol theatre, Steubenville, opened Monday September 7th, with the Warner feature, "The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted." The Capitol is a very beautiful new house erected by the Tri-State Amusement company of Steubenville. J. K. Papulias is president of the Tri-State Amusement Company. A. G. Constant is general manager. The new theatre is said to be the finest of its kind in the country, equipped to the last detail. The second floor is to be used as a dance hall.

The Ambassador is Cleveland's newest motion picture theatre. It opened on Saturday night for the first time. Messrs. Lustig, Stotter and Berkowitz, who also built and own the Ritz and other local houses, built the Ambassador, which is located on Superior Ave., and East 124th St. Oscar Stotter is manager.

The local Metro-Goldwyn exchange has come up in the world from the fifth floor to the eighth in the Film Exchange Bldg. They can go no higher. More space and better service facilities caused the move.

Jack Flannigan, Pathe news service man out here, had some bad luck in his efforts to get pictures of the wrecked Shenandoah. As soon as news of the disaster reached Cleveland, Flannigan hopped on a plane headed straight for Ava, where the disaster occurred. He had gone only a short distance when his plane refused to travel further. He had to make the rest of the trip by train. And when he reached Ava, it was too dark to get any pictures. Nevertheless, Flannigan was the first one on the scene in the morning, took the pictures, and sent them to New York by plane, where they were printed and delivered again in Cleveland on Saturday, ready for the screen.

Samuel Bradley, who formerly had a film laboratory in Cleveland, has now organized the Bradley Players. He has offices in the Hippodrome Bldg. Bradley is training aspirants to the stage. He has already placed several of his pupils in prominent New York Productions.

Charles Miller of the F. B. O. exchange in Chicago spent a few days in Cleveland last week visiting his brother D. C. Miller, who is a son-in-law of Max Marcus of the U. S. theatre.

Garrett Graham, advance man for "Doc" Holah and his "See America First" Universal train, has left the Cleveland territory and is now on his way west with stops at St. Louis, Kansas City and then on out to the coast. Holah is due in Cleveland about Wednesday. He has been held up on the roads by heavy rains.

Gabriel Hess, general attorney for the Film Boards of Trade was in Cleveland last week to try to effect peace between the exchange and exhibitor factions of the Board of Arbitration. The board has not been operating smoothly for some time. It is understood that Hess' visit bore no satisfactory results, and that C. C. Pettijohn will be here early in the week to see what he can do to iron out the existing difficulties.

Omaha

VERA MAY GOODSELL, Strand theatre organist, who has been ill in the hospital for several weeks, is well on the way to recovery.

By special request, "The Black Cyclone" is again being shown at the Muse theatre. It appeared first at the Sun theatre which like the Muse is operated by the World Realty company.

After a frantic search by their mother and the police, two little lost girls, Jean and Violet Lipp, 8 and 10 years old, were found sound asleep in the Moon theatre at 2:30 a. m. The theatre had been closed several hours.

Manager Sutphen of the Brandeis theatre welcomed kiddies of Omaha to a four o'clock special movie show featuring Buster Brown and Tige September 4.

Newsboys of the Omaha Bee were guests of Manager Art Cunningham of the Strand theatre September 2, at a performance of "Don Q."

When temperatures soar in Omaha, Manager Harry Watts of the Rialto, delights in demonstrating his cooling plant. He has a big thermometer just outside the theatre door and another just inside and Harry can be seen making frequent trips between the two. The other day when it registered 108 outdoors the inside mark was 72.

A special showing of "The Gold Rush" was given at the Strand theatre last week before members of the motion picture industry and newspaper critics. "The Iron Horse" will be shown at the Sun theatre Saturday, September 12, according to Harry Goldberg, manager of the World Realty theatres.

Albany

C. H. BUCKLEY, who first entered the ranks of exhibitors just three years ago, observed his third anniversary in the theatre business last week and announced that three years hence would find him the owner of more theatres than at present. He is now running the Leland and Clinton Square theatres in Albany and the Empire in Glens Falls. J. F. Gilmore is the new organist at the Leland, starting his duties on Labor day. Mr. Gilmore was at one time organist at the Avon in Utica, as well as the Empire in Syracuse.

Jacob Golden, of the Griswold, in Troy, established a new house record an amateur night last week, when he gave eight acts of vaudeville along with double features. The house was packed by seven o'clock. Mr. Golden is also using a Miss Brewer, of Albany, a soloist at the WGY broadcasting station, in illustrated songs.

The Pastime theatre in Granville, which was recently taken over by new parties, and after being renovated, was opened to the public last week. Despite the fact that Granville is but a small village, over 1,000 persons attended the opening presentation.

The fact that Governor Alfred E. Smith and C. H. Buckley, the latter operating the Empire theatre in Glens Falls, are firm friends is entirely responsible for the fact that Mr. Buckley has offered the use of the Empire on September 24, when Governor's day will be observed in Glens Falls.

Clarence Fish, of the American in Schenectady, has once more settled down to the ordinary run of an exhibitor's existence, the Saratoga track having closed. Mr. Fish is presenting some high class pictures at the American this fall.

Lew Fischer was unable to secure a delivery of the new seats for the Bradley theatre in Fort Edward in time to permit him to open the house as he had hoped on Labor Day. The house has been closed for the past month or so, during which time it has been improved in many ways. A complete new installation has been made in the electric light system throughout the entire theatre.

The Woodlawn, in Schenectady, a residential house, appears to be taking more than ordinary interest in the political scrap now on in that city. The entryway of the theatre was plastered last week with placards in the interest of John G. Myers, one of the candidates for the nomination for Mayor at the coming primaries.

The Palace in Oneonta, is now serving on Sunday as a church for the Methodists of that city, with a morning and an evening service. On the other six days of the week, the theatre is showing pictures. In explanation, it appears that a new Methodist church is being constructed and after looking over the city, members of the congregation decided to lease the theatre as a place of worship.

Bess Meredyth, Warner Bros.' staff scenario writer who wrote the script for John Barrymore's "The Sea Beast" and who will prepare the script for "Don Juan."

There is no use talking, William Smalley is a great advertiser. Entering Cooperstown a week ago, one's eye was naturally caught by the whole front of Mr. Smalley's theatre in that place, advertising the attraction of the day and in a way that could not be overlooked even by a blind man. Mr. Smalley is also using Ford cars in carrying his message of current attractions over the highways in that part of New York state.

The State theatre in Schenectady smells of paint these days as workmen are engaged in going over various sections of the house. The work continues throughout the afternoons. A painter will now be retained throughout the year, and will be employed on other of the Farley houses as soon as the State theatre job has been finished.

L. B. Tefft, of Berlin, N. Y., was a caller along Film Row during the week. Mr. Tefft has a 250 seat house in the small village, but is using big pictures whenever opportunity presents itself. He recently ran "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" two nights to the capacity of the theatre.

Miss Wilhelmina Wenzel, cashier at the Pathe exchange, and Miss Rea M. Carmody, sales control clerk at the same office, are once more back at their duties following a two week's vacation. George Doolittle is also once more back in the Pathe shipping room. Leon Medem, local manager for Pathe, and Charles Boyd manager for Associated Exhibitors, spent the weekend in New York city.

Amateur acts are simply overwhelming Morris Silverman at the Pearl theatre in Schenectady. No less than 13 acts applied to Mr. Silverman last week, and he used six. Exhibitors who are now running an amateur night each week are cooperating with each other and making it less hard to secure the right sort of acts to run along with their pictures.

Ben Apple, who for years was one of Troy's best known exhibitors, and who recently disposed of the King theatre, left last week for Florida, and may remain there throughout the winter. Charles Walder, who resigned as local manager for Fox, to go to Florida, must have journeyed over to Havana a week or so ago, as postals have been received here from him, bearing the Havana postmark.

Jake Rosenthal, of the Rose in Troy, allowed all children in that city to attend his matinees last week for five cents admission. He did this in appreciation of the business which has come to his theatre during the vacation when the boys and girls of that city, threw many dollars away on Mr. Rosenthal.

Everybody who is anybody along Film Row, as well as in the ranks of exhibitors in central New York, is planning to attend the outing of the Albany Film Board at Saratoga Lake, on Monday, September 14. Those who do not own cars will be provided with transportation by notifying any of the exchange managers. The exchanges will be closed the entire day in order that everyone may attend the blowout.

F. C. Adams, who has theatres in Copake and Dover Falls, was along the Row last week and gave an interesting account of conditions as they exist in Dover Plains, a place of 600 inhabitants. There are three motion picture theatres in the village, each running a couple of nights a week, although only one will probably operate throughout the winter. The village is without a newspaper and the exhibitors are forced to depend on bill boards and heralds to advertise their attractions.

Herman Vineberg, who has been handling the Mark Strand in Albany in a way beyond criticism and who was recently promoted to the management of two houses, took over the Albany and Regent theatres on Labor Day, and plans to bring these houses to as high a standard of entertainment, as the Mark Strand.

Handsome invitations were received in this city during the past week for the reopening of the Liberty theatre in Herkimer, which is now one of the Schine houses. The house was formerly handled by Charles Moyer, and ranks as one of the handsomest motion picture theatres in the entire Mohawk Valley.

Amos Leonard, of the Pathe sales force, covering northern New York, is enjoying a two weeks vacation at his camp near Boonville. He expects to have as his guest for a short time, Charles Stombaugh, of New York city, former manager of the Pathe office here. R. S. Coyle, inspector-booker for Pathe, has been in Albany for the past week.

Maurice Chase, who was district manager for Universal some time ago, and who is now head of the Chase Pictures Corporation of Buffalo, paid a visit to Albany last week, and received a warm welcome along Film Row.

On account of the vast amount of work ahead of him, through the reopening of the American in Troy; the acquisition of two additional theatres in Albany and the construction of another house in the same city, Uly S. Hill, managing-director of the Strand group of theatres here, has decided that he can not spare the time to go to Buffalo for the coming conference between the Albany and Buffalo committees on new by-laws governing the two zones. No date has yet been fixed for the conference.

Employees of the Pathe exchange continue to hold frequent screenings which are also social affairs for the office, the last occuring Tuesday night when "The Coast of Folly" was screened, followed by a dance.

Fred Mausert is having some little delay in securing the seats for the theatre which he is building in Glens Falls these days by transforming the old Presbyterian church of that city into a first class motion picture house. Mr. Mausert has decided to name the house "The State." It will have a seating capacity of 1,200 and the paneled walls will be in a lavender and blue color design.

William Shirley, of Schenectady, has returned to his real estate interests in Florida, and will probably not return north for some little time to come. Meyer Freedman is still in Schenectady.

When someone asked James Roach, manager of the Farley houses in Schenectady, last week, if he had yet taken his vacation, he simply replied by saying that during the past two months or so, since he became the active manager of the three theatres, he has had time to make but one trip to Albany's Film Row.

Ernest J. Wolfe, who breeds prize winning Great Danes, as well as running the Bijou theatre in Lowville, had the satisfaction of seeing one of his dogs appear on the screen last week in several scenes in "Miss Manhattan." The news that the dog, which is known to practically the entire village, was in the picture, brought much additional business to the house.

New Orleans

ACCORDING to official announcement received here, J. A. Bertram, manager of the Palace theatre, a first run photoplay house, New Orleans, La., will succeed Earl Steward, who has resigned to engage in real estate business in Miami.

Steward is regarded as one of the most efficient showmen in the country. It was his idea that the Orpheum introduced summer vaudeville combined with motion pictures. Bertram has been equally successful with the Palace, the Junior Orpheum here.

Vic Meyer, one of the most popular treasurers that ever served the New Orleans public, has been named manager of the Palace to succeed Bertram.

Vincent Guerano has been named treasurer at the Orpheum.

Minnesota

BEN FERRIS, formerly director of St. Paul publicity for Finkelstein & Ruben, has been promoted to circuit advertising director for all the F. & R. houses. He has moved his headquarters to Minneapolis where he will be in direct contacct with the F & R. officers.

E. J. Kelly of the Pioneer Press, St. Paul, will succeed Ferris on the St. Paul publicity job, taking the position corresponding to that of Frank Woolen in Minneapolis.

The Minneapolis publicity office of F. & R. has been moved into new and larger quarters as a part of the expansion of the office to take over the most of the fourth floor of the Loeb Arcade.

Minneapolis Universal has a new assistant manager. He is H. J. Quinn. He will assist Phil Dunas, relieving him of numerous onerous duties. The arrangement was authorized by F. W. Frankson of the New York office.

E. T. Gomersall, Minneapolis, manager of Fox Film, is back from another three-day trip to Chicago where he conferred with the Fox general sales manager.

Thomas Gavin, Fox exploitation man for this district, was in Dubuque, Ia., this week.

George W. Johnson, manager of the Metro theater at Red Wing, Minn., has been scouting around in Minneapolis recently. He reports renewed interest in the pictures attributable to Greater Movie Season.

Thomas A. Burke, Warner Brothers' Minneapolis manager, has been in Fargo for several days.

Twin City picture men have been standing around with their mouths open watching Charles Lee Hyde of the Grand theatre at Pierre, S. D., do his stuff with the Pierre polo team. He conducted himself very creditably in the Twin City tournament much to the delight of his trade associates.

George Bromley who recently took over the State theater at Alexandria paid his first visit to the Twin Cities since the deal the other day. He is said to be planning to take over other theatres in the vicinity.

Carl Sather of Annandale is said to be about to open a new theater at Robbinsdale, Minneapolis most famous suburb. The house will be completed shortly.

Dick Dickinson has released the Opera House at Brinsmade, N. D., to the McCarthy circuit.

The Lyric theater at Little Falls has been reopened by A. J. Hand after a period of darkness.

John Piller of Valley City is plastering his new $75,000, theater there and expects to have the lights on October 1. It is one of the finest theatres in North Dakota, they say, having every modern equipment including ventilation system and a $15,000 pipe organ. It will seat 946 persons.

A second theater is contemplated in Little Falls, Minn. The promoters of the project have not yet revealed their identity but there is said to be no question but that H. R. Smoots who has had things his own way with the Lowell theater in this town of 5,500, will soon have competition.

Mrs. M. E. Brinkman of the Grand theater, Bemidji, did her film shopping in Minneapolis the other day.

Joe Klug of the State Theater at Zumbrota, Minn., visited Producers' Distributing company offices last week.

Ray Zerbel who has the Delf theaters at Marquette and Escanaba, Mich., spent a few days recently in Minneapolis.

Sam Hess and Rowe, owners of the Metropolitan and Lyric theaters at Watertown, S. D., have been visiting Minneapolis.

Al Anson, manager of the Lyceum theater at Duluth, got into Minneapolis the other day just when the heat was at its hottest and he soon hurried back to the place where they have one month poor sleighing.

Bill Bennett who has been a member of the Metro sales force for five years in Minneapolis has gone over to Producers' Distributing corporation to work for Jack O'Toole. He will continue to handle southern Minnesota.

Fred Hines of Cresco, Ia., visited at Crockett Brown's Lyric theater in Nashwauk recently.

W. J. Rogenbeck has taken over the opera house at Webster, S. D., formerly owned by Harry Nelson.

Mrs. Thomas Kirk of Ortonville, writes that her new theater is nearly done and she is looking for an operator.

New England

A REHEARSAL not on the program provided a few minutes of genuine thrills at the Gayety Theatre, Boston, the other night when an automobile left parked by Isaac G. Holmes on the incline of Boylston square, rolled down the incline, crashed through the stage doors and rolled out to the edge of the stage. Only the earliest arrivals among the patrons witnessed the scene, however, the screen was soon replaced and other damage repaired before the show started.

Arrangements have been made by the trustees of the Jewett Repertory Theatre Fund, Inc., in Boston with the Yale University Press Film Service to present the entire series of "Chronicles of America" photoplays to the school children of Greater Boston free, commencing early in November. The performances will be given Saturday mornings.

Baltimore

THE McHenry Theatre, 1032 Light street, which was taken over several months ago by Walter D. Pacy, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, Inc., and proprietor of Pacy's Garden theatre, has had extensive renovations and improvements made on it costing about $10,000, according to Mr. Pacy. The operating room has been entirely remodeled and refitted, he says, at a cost of about $2,500 alone. Other improvements consisted of redecorating and repainting, and fixing the chairs and other furnishings. This playhouse has a seating capacity of 1,000 persons and is located in a residential section of South Baltimore.

A cat, a rat and a mouse, have furnished excitement recently in two large Baltimore Theatres. The other night a pet white mouse seemingly came from nowhere and plopped into the lap of a woman seated in the audience. She immediately became panicky and shrieked, throwing the house into an uproar and a police sergeant captured the disturber of the peace, placed it under arrest, took it to the Central station where it is now keeping the telephone clerk company and answers to the name of "Oswald." The house cat at another playhouse downtown did a star act "in one" when it calmly walked across the stage in the glare of the footlights with a rat in its mouth as the orchestra was playing the overture. The rat was still wriggling and while some women shrieked, some men gave cat calls and others applauded while the majority howled with laughter.

The Garden Theatre, a large downtown playhouse, was the only Baltimore Theatre to show the special section of the International News reel giving the details of the Shenandoah Disaster, on Friday night, September 4 and Saturday, September 5, H. M. Messiter, of the Whitehurst Combined Theatrical Interests, saw the film in Washington, D. C., immediately phoned Dr. Whitehurst about it booked it, and it was shown that night. The assistant publicity man, well known as a Baltimore newspaper man, was called in in the absence of the regular advertising man on business, and back page ads were flashed for Saturday and a front page story was run in the American Saturday morning with a two column head.

A new theatre is being built at Richwood, W. Va., on the lot formerly occupied by the Star theatre destroyed by fire about three years ago. The Cherry River Amusement Company with which J. C. Holt and others are connected, is backing the project. The playhouse will be completed by the first of next year it is thought.

From Asheville, N. C., comes word that a theatre building may be erected by Olive Tiford Dargan, of that city, as a memorial in honor of her late husband.

The Flag Theatre, 1318 East Fort avenue, has been reopened under the management of J. J. Hartlove, well-known exhibitor and exploitation man of Baltimore. This is a residential playhouse of South Baltimore with a seating capacity of 500 persons. About $2,000 was spent on renovating the theatre.

Dr. J. H. Whitehurst, president of the Whitehurst Combined Theatrical Interests, operating the Century, New, Garden, and Parkway theatres, Baltimore, Md., has returned from a vacation of three weeks to Atlantic City, which he enjoyed very much.

St. Louis

THE American Theatre, Twelfth and Barton streets, St. Louis, Mo., has been purchased by Sam Lewis who also conducts the New Shenandoah Theatre, Broadway and Shenandoah avenue. The American was owned by Joseph Wagner, who operates the adjoining airdome. The theatre contains about 700 seats and is said to be a nice money-maker.

During the week Lewis also closed a deal for the purchase of the New Shenandoah theatre building. He has operated the house under lease for some time. It seats about 1400 persons. It is reported that the deal for the two houses will aggregate $250,000. A large airdome was included.

The St. Louis Amusement Company controlled by Skouras Brothers and Harry Koplar owns some fourteen theatres and several large airdomes in St. Louis, Maurie Stahl who recently took over the New Delmar Theatre, Delmar boulevard near Kingshighway, St. Louis, has changed the name of the house. He calls it the Embassy Theatre. It was formerly operated by Hector M. E. Pasmezoglu, but was leased by Stahl several weeks ago. About the same time Pasmezoglu leased his Criterion and Congress Theatres and is dickering on deals involving his Plaza and Yale theatres. He plans to take a trip to Greece after he has disposed of his theatre and other holdings in St. Louis.

Ernest Scherler, 43 years old, of Cleveland, O., was overcome by heat Sunday, August 30, a few minutes after he had entered the Lyric Theatre, 114 North Sixth street, St. Louis.

Paul Haynes and Leslie Mace, salesmen for the local First National office were on the sick list the past week.

The Rialto Theatre, Altamont, Ill., opened September 3 and plans to operate on Thursday and Friday evenings until further notice.

G. P. Bates has purchased the Grand Theatre, Salem, Mo., from Lulu Donaldson.

The Barlow Theatre, Barlow, Ky., is closed while undergoing extensive alterations and repairs.

The Eureka, Eureka, Mo., and the Belle High School, Belle, Mo., are closed.

The Crescent Theatre, 118 West 2nd street, Little Rock, Ark., is being repaired. J. M. Ensor operates the house under lease.

Herbert J. Krause, manager for Paramount, on a trip to Cairo, Ill., closed a contract with I. W. Rodgers for his houses.

Canada

THE labor situation at Montreal, Quebec, had reached a tense situation early in September, following the refusal of Local 56 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes to accept a five per cent increase in wages and no annual vacation with pay. The Montreal Theatre Managers Association, made up of members representing His Majesty's, Princess, Imperial, Loew's, Capitol, Palace, Gayety, St. Denis, Orpheum, and many other houses, negotiated with the stage hands and projection machine operators, the spokesman for the theatres being B. M. Garfield, manager of one of the local houses operated by United Amusements, Limited.

Announcement was made by Theatrical Enterprises, Limited, Montreal, that it had cancelled all but one road show for the whole of the coming season because of the demands of organized labor and it was announced that B. E. Lang had been appointed agent for the J. B. Sparrow Amusement Co., Limited, Montreal, the company owning His Majesty's Theatre building for the purpose of renting the house to any who would care to take it over. This practically meant that the Theatrical Enterprises, Limited, which operated the house last year, ceased to exist.

Robert Knevel, assistant manager of the Pantages Theatre, Toronto, has returned from an important trip to Elkhart, Indiana, where he was quietly married without advance notices to any of his friends in Toronto.

N. L. Nathanson of Toronto, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., operating 100 theatres across Canada, and also an executive officer of Regal Films, Limited, Trans-Canada Bookings, Limited, and other important affiliated companies, has returned home after a three months stay in England and on the Continent for business and pleasure. Mr. Nathanson conferred with leading moving picture producers and theatre men in London, Paris, Berlin and other cities.

The Regent Theatre, Toronto, started on its fourth week with Charlie Chaplin's "The Gold Rush" on Saturday, September 5, this being the first run of the feature for Canada. The Regent, which specializes in outstanding productions for extended engagements, is now under the management of D. C. Brown, formerly manager of the Orpheum Theatre at Fort William, Ontario.

Prior to taking over the management of the Savoy Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, H. E. Wilton was honored by the staff of the Strand Theatre, Hamilton, of which he had been the manager for the past four years. George Murray, in behalf of the house staff, presented him with a handsome ebony brush set and a bouquet of roses to Mrs. Wilton. After the ceremony, refreshments were served and dancing enjoyed. B. J. McKilliam is now the manager of the Strand.

Every night is a "special" at the Strand Theatre, Calgary, Alberta, according to the schedule which has been drawn up by Manager Pete Egan. Monday is merely "opening night" for the week's presentations but on Tuesday it is "Aluminum Night" when cooking utensils are distributed among the patrons under an arrangement with a local firm; on Wednesday there is a "Lady's Guest Matinee" when every lady patron can bring another lady free while every Wednesday evening a $15 lady's hat is given away thanks to a tie-up with a local millinery shop. Thursday night is "Pay Night" when every purchaser of a ticket gets a pay envelope in which is enclosed a coin anywhere from one cent to $2.50. Friday night is "Dad's Night" when every father can bring his whole family of kids for the price of one ticket. Saturday has "Community Singing Night" when the audiences are encouraged to participate in both new and old songs with slides and a special song leader.

Jimmie Crang, manager of the Oakwood Theatre, Toronto, one of the largest of suburban houses, gave his employes and their friends a very enjoyable outing to his father's farm, a few miles out from Toronto, on Sunday, August 30. About 100 persons were present. A big feature was a baseball game in which the Oakwood Theatre team defeated a rival aggregation by 28 to 1. There were many picnic races and, in the evening, a dance was held with music furnished by the Oakwood Theatre orchestra under Ernie Knaggs.

T. J. McDougall, who was recently appointed manager of the Danforth Theatre, Toronto, a former Allen suburban house, has been compelled to take a vacation in search of health. Jack Laver, of the Bloor Theatre, Toronto, is pinch-hitting for Mr. McDougall until the latter's return.

Charles A. Dentelbeck, director of the technical department of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, has blossomed forth as a tournament golf player. Mr. Dentelbeck, who has been president of the Toronto Local of the Motion Picture Projection Machine Operators for years and an authority on film projection, is in the running for the club championship of the Century Golf Club at Cedarbrook, near Toronto.

At a recent stage in the second half of the championship series of the Moving Picture Baseball League at Toronto, Ontario, no less than three teams were tied for the first position in the league standing. The trio were Regal Films, Limited; Famous Lasky Film Service and Famous Players Canadian Corp., followed by First National Pictures, Limited

Des Moines

BESS DAY, manager of the Strand Theatre, Des Moines, broke into print and on the front page of the Des Moines Tribune-News with the kind of publicity that does the motion picture business good in more ways than one. Mr. Day was host at a special performance at ten o'clock on Saturday at which the box office receipts were all turned over to the widow of Ollie Thomas of the city police force who was shot dead by burglars caught in the act of entering one of the downtown business houses. The tickets were sold by the members of the police force and the complete sum, amounting close to four hundred dollars was presented to Mrs. Thomas. The house, which seats 1250, was sold out at a twenty-five cent admission price. The film, "A Son of His Father" was given for the performance by Famous Players without charge and all the employees of the Strand donated their services whether members of the union or not. As it is the rule that union members cannot work for nothing they took their pay but made donations of their wages. Zola Palmer and her Kirkwood Serenaders also gave their musical act for the special show. The Strand's special show put the Ollie Thomas trust fund which had reached $1,808.59 well over the two thousand mark.

A. H. Blank, motion picture magnate, and his wife paid a combined income tax of $13,660. Which isn't so bad. There were several other Des Moines men whose individual tax income receipts showed bigger amounts, so Mr. Blank was not listed as the largest payer.

Joe Jacobson, salesman for Pathe, was quite seriously hurt last week when his car took a complete somersault off the road near Independence, Iowa. Mr. Jacobson pulled to the side of the road to avoid hitting a car which was parked without lights and went off on the other side. The car which turned over several times, was completely demolished while Mr. Jacobson was badly bruised. He was at the hospital in Independence for a week and Mr. Ballentyne, manager of the Pathe office, went down to Independence to bring him back to Des Moines as soon as he could travel. Mr. Jacobson is still much the worse for wear but sustained no serious injuries.

F. B. O. entertained 150 exhibitors of Iowa at their Open House during Fair Week. Following out the plan which proved so successful last year Mr. Young sent invitations to all the exhibitors of the state to attend the State Fair and the F. B. O. Open House at the expense of the Des Moines office. The railroad fare to Des Moines and back was paid by the exchange. A number of exhibitors who had never come to Des Moines to see their pictures took advantage of F. B. O.'s offer and were pleased to meet the men who are furnishing them with film service.

Mr. Jack Nixon who was transferred to Des Moines from the office at New Haven, Conn., is serving Pathe on the sales staff. He takes the place vacated by Mr. Hermann who is now managing the Orpheum Theatre at Clinton for A. H. Blank Enterprises.

C. O. Baker who came to Des Moines from Kansas City to act as booker for Universal has won a very nice promotion. He was transferred to the San Francisco exchange where he will be the assistant manager. Harry Harsha who has been with Universal before as salesman and in the office as assistant manager will fill the vacancy.

Van Dyke and Young of Pella, Iowa, have sold their house there to Chris Nelson. The theatre has been closed for about a month while it was being redecorated. Another change of ownership took place at Independence, Iowa. Ernie Young, owner of the Grand Theatre at Independence bought from Ralph Farrand. Mr. Young was in Des Moines buying pictures.

A string of theatres were bought by Miles and Coston of Chicago through Clifford R. Niles, exhibitor of Anamosa, Iowa. Mr. Niles sold his house, the Crystal Theatre, at Anamosa to the Chicago consolidation and the theatres at Cascade, Lowden, Mechanicsville, Bryersville, Wyoming and Monticello. The theatre at Monticello was bought from E. T. Landis.

The Exhibitors Supply Company sold the equipment for the booth of the new Waterloo Theatre at Waterloo to A. J. Debolt, manager and owner of the theatres, the Waterloo and the Rialto at Waterloo.

Fred Mendenhall, manager of the Sioux Falls office and his booker, John Fritcher, visited the Des Moines office of Famous Players. Ernie Frase, manager of the Minneapolis office was also in. With Paramount Week on again it has been a busy time for the booking staff and Mr. Clement, head booker, has been burning the midnight oil making the wheels go round.

Ralph W. Abbett, manager of Renown's Indianapolis exchange.

A new theatre to be called the "Rialto" will open in October, in Hobart, Ok., under the mangement of Miss Ruth Talbert.

John A. Collins has leased the new $65,000 Majestic Theatre, at Paragould, Ark. Collins has also purchased the house at Wynne, Ark., formerly owned by G. Carey.

The Liberty Theatre, at Fort Sill, Ok., a government-owned house is being repainted and repaired.

The Amusy Theatre, at Frederick, Okla., is building a fifty-foot extension to the building, and adding other improvements, among which a stage for road attractions will also be added.

One of the best run picture houses in the Southwest is being run by John and Pete Sinolpulo, where they are making the Orpheum Theatre, at Oklahoma City, one of the best vaudeville and first run picture house in the Southwest. Nightly they have capacity houses as they show first-class attractions and first-run pictures booked at all times.

Tom Boland, manager of the Empress Theatre, at Oklahoma City, is a go-getter and a winner in all of his undertakings and has never been beaten for anything that he went after. At Oklahoma City, he is being extensively talked of for nomination for mayor of the city at the next election and afterwards as governor of the state.

The Electric Theatre, at Joplin, Mo., is reopened for the fall showing after being closed for redecoration. The opening show was "Night Life of New York."

A new theatre building is being erected at Ponca City, Okla., by Dr. J. A. Douglas, Eugene Wetzel, George Brett, and C. T. Calkins.

The Palace Theatre, at Eufaula, Okla., was destroyed by fire last week, but the owners intend to rebuild in the near future.

Can a down town first run theatre in a city of more than 500,000 population operate successfully with only a pipe organ for music? That question seems to be definitely answered, as far as Kansas City is concerned. About a year ago Universal leased the Liberty theatre from Samuel and David Harding, Kansas City. Up to that time the theatre had maintained an orchestra and done a good business in opposition to the Newman theatre, Kansas City's largest first run house, which has an orchestra of 40. But the orchestra was abandoned at the Liberty. Business continued fair for a while, but there were some "tough weeks." Now the Liberty is to have an orchestra again. Samuel Carver is the manager.

Miss Emma Viets, chairman of the Kansas state censor board, returned last week from a three weeks' trip in which she conferred with motion picture censors of Ohio, Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and New York.

The Studebaker car, carrying the first print of "Seven Days," Christie production, from the West Coast to New York, was worth a liberal news story in Kansas City newspapers Saturday. A. H. Holdson, a Pacific Coast driver, and M. H. Newman, stunt performer, were in charge of the trip.

Miss Lois Bridge and Edgar Barnett of the Globe theatre personnel, Kansas City, were $3,850 poorer in jewelry and $7.50 in cash the other night, as a result of being held up by two bandits shortly after they left the theatre.

Joseph Schildkraut and Jack Pickford, screen stars, were visitors in Kansas City last week, the former being a target for humor by the Kansas City Star when he retired at his hotel at 9 o'clock.

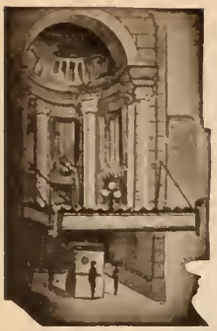
The on-rush of fall business made Kansas City's movie row a hub of activity last week. A large gathering of exhibitors attended a pre-view showing of "The Winds of Chance," a print of which was received at the First National exchange, while the personnel of the Universal exchange was elated over the fact that virtually all of the smaller daily newspapers in the Kansas City territory are to carry in serial form "The Phantom of the Opera." C. A. Schultz, Warner-Vitagraph manager, was named as branch manager of the Kansas City P.D.C. office, while Truly B. Wildman, formerly with Enterprise Distributing Corp., has accepted a position as special representative and assistant district manager for P.D.C. in Kansas City. R. L. McLean, assistant to C. D. Hill, P.D.C. district manager, was in temporary charge of the P.D.C. exchange pending the change in management. Bob Withers, Enterprise branch manager, returned from the territory with this assertion: "The best week's business we ever have had." Russell Borg, the energetic assistant branch manager of Education, left for a two weeks' vacation on the Great Lakes. A record sheet of the Warner-Vitagraph branch for one day last week showed eighty-nine shipments for the day, putting to flight the "bad business" wails. T. O. Byerle, First National branch manager, left behind a busy office to attend a meeting of sales chiefs in New York City. The Midwest Film Distributors, Inc., will move from 130 West Eighteen Street to new quarters at 1710 Baltimore avenue.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were: Hugh Gardner, Orpheum, Neosho, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Aley, Regent, Eureka, Kas.; I. W. Maple, Bethany, Kas.; C. L. McVey, Herrington, Kas.; H. McGuire, Darlington, Mo.; Roy Spurlock, St. Joseph, Mo.; L. Brenninger, Topeka, Kas.; William Gabriel and H. Austin, Garden City, Kas.; G. L. Rugg, Robinson, Kas.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee theatre, Lawrence, Kas.; G. L. Germain, Bonner Springs, Kas.; M. M. Myers, Topeka, Kas.; H. Terry, Grain Valley, Mo.

Glenn Dickinson, Lawrence, Kas., exhibitor who operates a circuit of theatres, has obtained Claire Woods, formerly of the shipping department of the Kansas City United Artists branch, to act as publicity manager.

Lawrence Lehman, manager of the Orpheum theatre, Kansas City, "dressed up" the house a bit last week with the installation of two new Motiograph projectors with G. E. high intensity arcs.

A special warning to exhibitors in the Kansas City territory has been issued by the First National exchange, as a result of an incident which occurred last week. Several small green bugs, which are common about any type of electric lights in the summer months, were found caught in a film which had been returned. When the insects were removed the emulsion came off on every part of the film where one had been, ruining the film.



"Well, well, it's finally come," signed C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, as he walked away from his desk Tuesday night for a two weeks' vacation.

For the last three months Cook has been working "double time" on the Greater Movie Season campaign and careworn lines have found their way on his face. He will visit his relatives in Maryville, Mo., a short time, then go to Colorado.

Samuel E. Morris, general manager of distribution, announced this week the appointment of Louis Reichert as manager of the Warner Bros. branch exchange in Kansas City. Reichert is a veteran salesman and executive. He was at one time assistant general manager of General Films, and later served as special Pacific coast representative of several companies and as branch manager of Select in Washington.

Aileen Bernard, musical comedy favorite, who is soon to make her appearance on the screen.

CONSTRUCTION & EQUIPMENT DEPARTMENT

Proper Method for Ventilating Theatres

Special Consideration Necessary for Motion Picture Houses; Installations Prove Excellent Investments

*By F. R. Still

MOST of the owners of theatres and the engineers who design heating and ventilating plants for theatres have largely failed to consider the wide difference in the requirements of a standard theatre and moving picture theatre. There is hardly any more resemblance in their respective requirements than there is in the provisions to be made to ventilate a school house or a church, yet it has been the general practice to apply the same proportions and employ about the same standards of apparatus for both types of theatre buildings.

The Standard Theatre is occupied for perhaps three hours at a time usually after sundown during six days of the week, and is closed throughout the warm summer months. An adequate and dependable heating system is, of course, necessary to maintain a comfortable temperature in cold weather. The usual standards for ventilating auditoriums will apply to such theatres, and will prove to be entirely adequate under normal weather conditions.

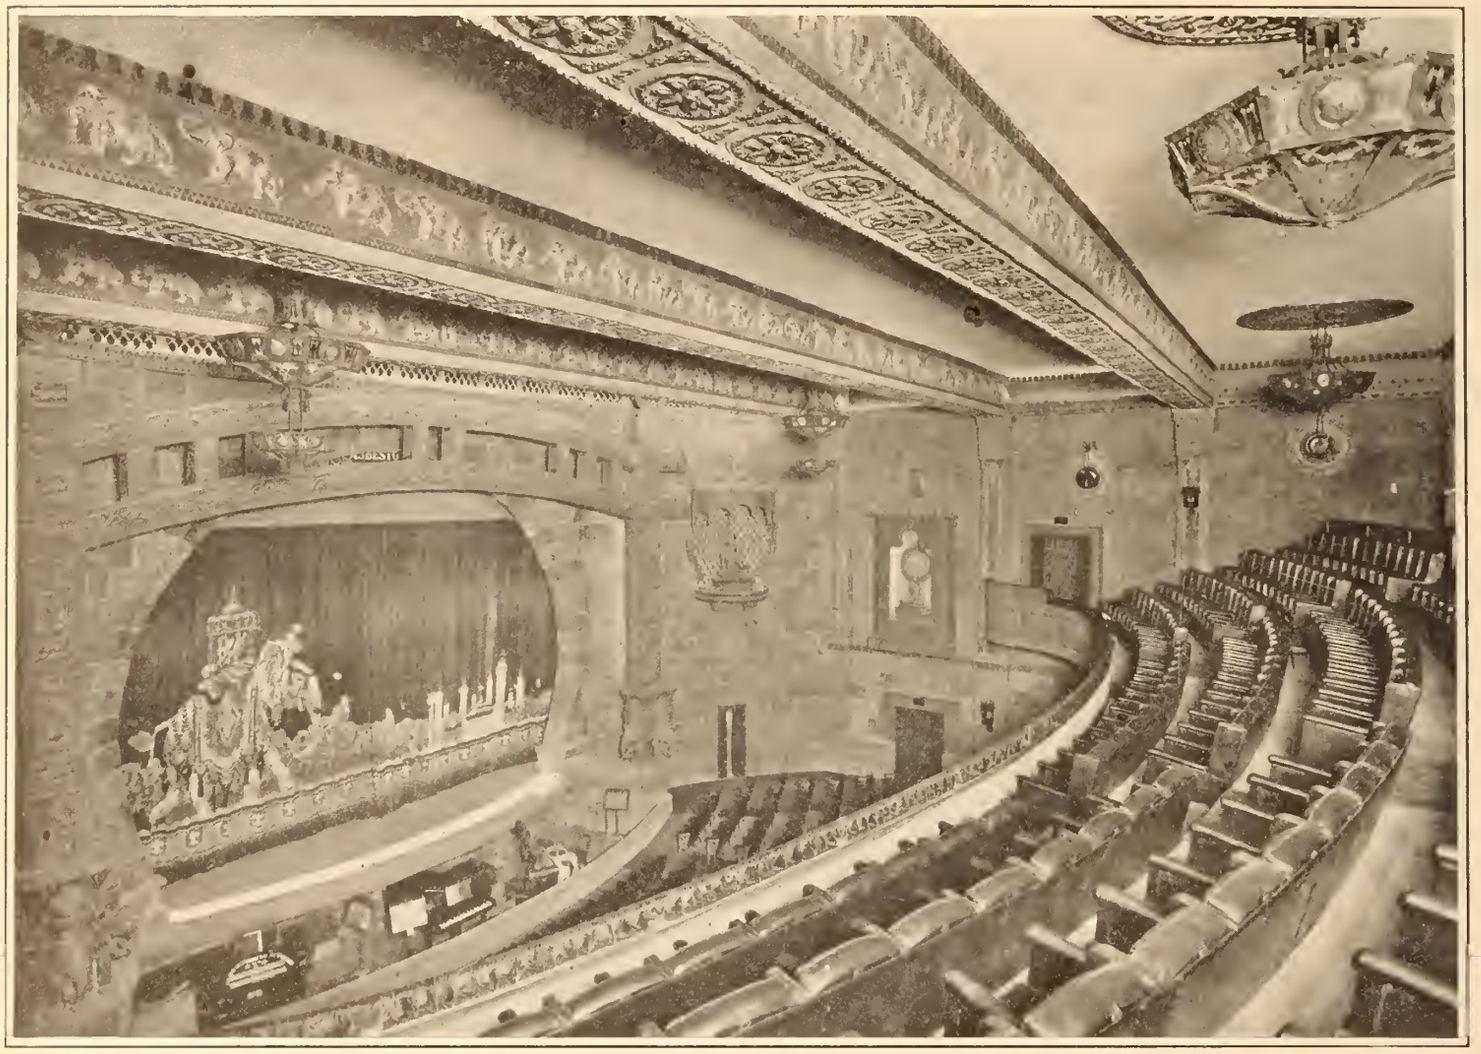
In winter weather there is very little moisture in the outside air. As the temperature of the outside air is raised to the room temperature, the relative humidity is lowered; hence the air should be humidified in cold weather so as to maintain 40 to 45% relative humidity inside the building.

In the late spring and early fall, the outside temperature and humidity sometimes becomes almost as high as during the summer. During these periods it may become uncomfortable inside, but these periods are so short that artificial cooling is hardly warranted.

The Moving Picture Theatre is an altogether different problem. It is occupied, more or less to full capacity, for twelve hours per day, every day in the week including Sundays, and every week throughout the year. The heating and ventilating plant must be designed to meet the requirements of the two extremes of outside weather conditions, viz., winter and summer, both of which extend over several months.

In the winter time, the place must be heated to a comfortable temperature. The air must be clean and pure, devoid of odors and humidified to a comfortable extent.

In the summer time, both the temperature and the relative humidity must be reduced to get satisfactory results. It is impossible to reduce the temperature of the air discharged into the building very much below the normal inside temperature without causing discomfort; hence it becomes necessary to provide for the circulation of a very much larger volume of air in the summer than during the winter to absorb the natural heat radiated from the walls, the roof, the lights and the people. If this large volume is properly distributed and diffused over the whole area of the house, an excellent air motion can be maintained which has a most marked effect on the comfort of the audience in warm weather, because it feels as though the temperature is much lower than it really is, instead of feeling chilly and clammy as is so noticeable in those theatres wherein an attempt has been made to cool them with a small volume of recirculated air which has been lowered to a very low temperature so as to absorb the heat.



It is not infrequent that the volume of air required to maintain comfortable conditions in a Moving Picture Theatre in the summer time will be two or more times the volume of air that would be normally provided for a Standard Theatre of the same size, yet we see plans and specifications right along wherein this difference is entirely ignored, and no greater provision is made for a movie house than would be made for a Standard Theatre.

There are two reasons for this. One is that few designers understand exactly what sort of atmospheric condition should prevail to attain perfect comfort. The other is, that the majority of the architects and engineers did not appreciate fully the great difference there is in the requirements of a Standard Theatre and a Moving Picture Theatre. They knew that certain standards as applied to the older type of theatres gave reasonably satisfactory results, and it naturally followed in the course of their everyday operations that the same would apply to moving picture theatres.

*Vice President American Blower Co.,—paper before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

It is only within the last two or three years that any reliable data has been available to work with which would indicate what the atmospheric conditions should be inside of a building to attain the same comfort that a person feels on a fine June day in the open country. Apparatus was available to maintain any temperature, any relative humidity and produce any air motion, but the right combination was not known. Not until the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers established a Research Laboratory at the U. S. Bureau of Mines, Pittsburgh, and induced the U. S. Department of Public Health Service to take up the investigation of this subject, was any real progress made. This was started nearly seven years ago. The work is now nearing completion, but the whole scope of the problem required nearly five years of constant experimentation and investigation before any definite results were available.

Some years ago Dr. Leonard Hill of London, England, made an investigation of the wet and dry bulb temperatures all over the world. He took particular note of those atmospheric conditions which seemed to be most comfortable. As a result of his observations he found the prevailing wet bulb temperature was somewhere between 54° and 58° and that the dry bulb temperature must vary, depending on the wind velocity and the occupation of the subject, to attain perfect comfort.

With this as a starting point the Research Laboratory at Pittsburgh persuaded Dr. Sayers of the Department of Public Health Service, Washington, D. C., to take charge of the experiments, to definitely determine the reactions of human beings to varying wet bulb temperatures, dry bulb temperatures, air velocities, when naked, lightly clothed and normally clothed; when at rest, at light work, and when vigorously exercising.

As the greatest demand for refined ventilation is in those buildings where the occupants are at rest, the work so far completed covers that condition quite fully. One or two examples will illustrate how the data obtained may be applied.

Supposing a person normally clothed is exposed to a dry bulb temperature of 71° and a relative humidity of 30%; the wet bulb will be 54°. Again supposing the dry bulb temperature is 60° and the relative humidity is 76%; the wet bulb temperature will be 55.75°. Either of these temperatures will afford about the same degree of comfort in still air.

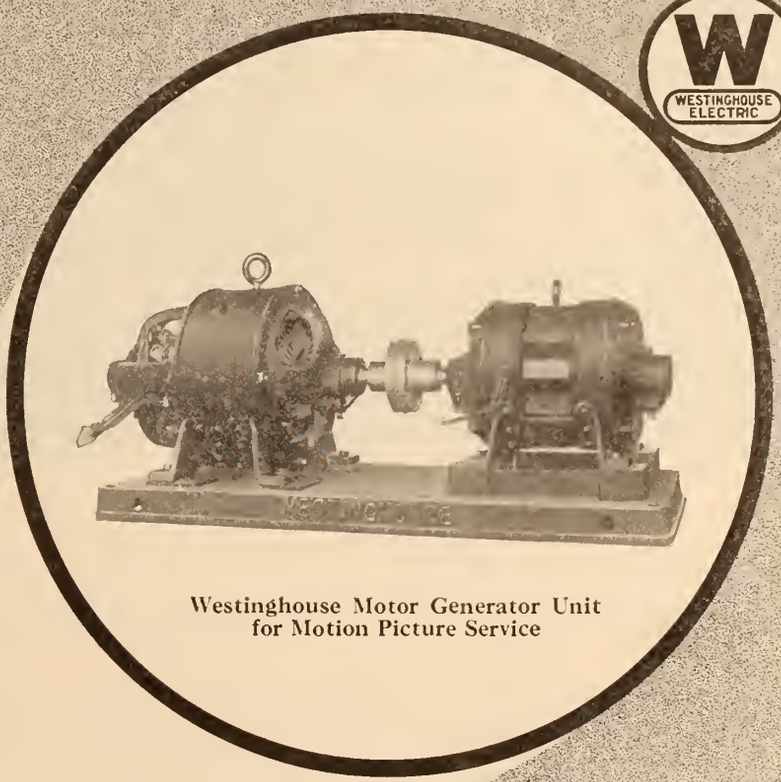
In the first instance if, instead of still air, the air velocity should be 100 ft., the effect will be the same as though the apparent dry bulb temperature was only 69°; at 200 ft. velocity the apparent temperature will be 68°; at 300 ft. velocity the apparent temperature will be 66°.

In the second case, if the velocity should be 100 ft. the apparent temperature would be 68°; at 200 feet. velocity the apparent temperature would be 65°; at 300 ft. velocity the apparent temperature would be 63°.

If a person was stripped to the waist, under these air motions he would soon shiver as though it was 10° to 15° colder.

These citations are given merely to indicate the scope of the work being done and to impress upon you that real comfort can not be obtained by merely heating or cooling air. There is a relationship existing between the wet and the dry bulb temperatures which must be maintained in a still atmosphere. As soon as an air motion is set up, the relationship changes and it varies more or less as the air motion increases or decreases.

Another important factor that affects the comfort of many persons is odors. To what extent the effect they have on some people is physiological or psychological has not yet been definitely determined. A strong odor of musk in a warm, unventilated room has been known to cause some women to faint, yet others enjoy it. Some people can live and thrive in the midst of conditions that are to others most abhorrent and, perhaps, nauseating.



Odors can always be completely eliminated by passing the air through a properly proportioned air washer. Adding a heater to warm the spray water, the humidity of the air can be increased and by cooling the water the humidity can be lowered. With suitable automatic controlling instruments any desired relative humidity can be obtained that is best suited for the air motion maintained regardless of outside atmospheric weather conditions, in addition to the complete elimination of the odors and the removal of the floating dust and dirt in the air as previously mentioned.

Many owners of theatres fail to realize the value in an air washer. The preservation of the decorations and furnishings will alone make it a good investment in many cities, even if its value as an essential adjunct to the ventilating plant is entirely discounted. But the time is fast approaching when there will be no argument about the necessity of properly humidifying and cooling the air. The theatres that are so equipped will soon become generally known and the public will demand the same comfortable atmospheric conditions in all of them by refusing to patronize the houses which have failed to put in such equipment.

While the building and operation of theatres is a business proposition from the standpoint of the owner or manager, it is a place of recreation and pleasure for those who patronize them, and as the patrons begin to realize it is unnecessary to endure uncomfortable atmospheric conditions they are sure to seek out and favor those places where they are comfortable.

Architectural beauty, pleasing and colorful decorations, comfortable roomy seats and good acoustics have all come about because the public has shown it appreciates such things, but none of them would count for much if the place smelled badly, or the atmosphere was close and stuffy, or if it became too warm, or it was drafty and cold.

While there are now quite a number of theatres equipped with ventilating plants of ample capacity to maintain a reasonable, comfortable, thermometric temperature throughout most of the auditorium, we only know of two buildings in which the designer apparently fully recognized the opposite requirements during the cold and warm weather by arranging for a reversal of the air movement during the two periods. That is, the warm air enters the house through the floor, beneath the seats in the winter and finds an exit mostly through the ceiling. In the summer the cool air is admitted through the ceiling and is largely removed through the floor beneath the seats.

Cold air striking a person shortly after it escapes from the ducts always causes great discomfort and complaint. Hence it must be introduced at a considerable distance from the occupants. On the other hand, the warm air coming into immediate contact with the occupants in cold weather is very agreeable provided the velocity of the air is not excessive.

In both of the theatres referred to, this reversal of air currents is accomplished by shifting two or three dampers. Of course the fans are speeded up to get a larger volume in the summer than is required in the winter, and the velocity can be very much greater owing to the air entering at a distance so remote from the audience.

The question uppermost in your mind is likely "What does it cost to install an efficient ventilating plant such as has been herein described?"

That is a very difficult question to answer with any degree of definiteness, because there are so many variables in the construction and location of the buildings, the climatic conditions prevailing in different parts of this country, the size of the building, its exposure and the type of refrigerating plant used.

It may be stated that it requires approximately from 75 to 100 tons of refrigeration per thousand people, and a complete ventilating plant with refrigeration will cost anywhere from $200.00 to $800.00 per ton refrigeration.

In other words, a house seating 3000 people, with a ventilating plant designed to cool it to 70 degrees when it is 95 degrees outside, recirculating 80% of the air would require about 285 tons capacity. This is based on an initial dewpoint of 40 degrees. With the same dewpoint and outside temperature, if the inside temperature is 85 degrees instead of 70 degrees, it will require about 267 tons of refrigeration, or about 6½% less.

With the same outside temperature and a dewpoint of 50°, to maintain 70° inside will require about 284 tons, and to maintain 85° inside will require only 250 tons capacity. Thus there is only 15% difference in the extremes of refrigeration required in these examples, which are fairly representative of conditions encountered in the summer in this section of the country. It also indicates the possibility of obtaining very comfortable temperatures even when it is impossible to reach an anticipated low dewpoint.

Such a plant would cost from $50,000 to $85,000 complete. This includes blowers, motors, heating surface, humidifying equipment, pumps, ducts, automatic controlling instruments, etc., all installed on foundations and adjusted ready for use.

The next question is the testimony of those who have tried it. The lowest estimate we have obtained from any manager is an average increase of 26¼% in the attendance of patrons during the months of June to

One Thing More

In your modern motion picture house every detail of projection, decoration, ventilation, temperature, seating, has been carefully worked out to make the theatre attractive and comfortable.

But there's one thing more you can do—and it's a real factor from the box office point of view: make sure the picture is printed on Eastman Positive Film, the film that safeguards for the screen the quality of the negative so your public may enjoy it.

Inquiries and Comments

Vision by Contrast and Color Illusion

SOME time ago we published an article explaining the general characteristics of vision in which the statement was made that vision was of two principal kinds—that is, by means of color difference or by a difference in brightness.

In a more specific article on the theory of vision, Dr. Hickman of the Royal Photographic Society explains in detail just how this is accomplished and uses it as a prelude in support of his recommendations regarding the proper treatment of contrasts between the lighted motion picture screen and its background.

In continuation of last week's article, he takes up next the subject of contrast after having first explained the action of color vision. Contrast vision treats primarily of the colors "black" and "white", which, strictly speaking are not colors at all. While objectively black is merely the absence of light, physiologically and subjectively black is a definite sensation. If we stand in a perfectly dark room we are much more conscious of not being able to see than of actual blackness. The blackness is lit up with a starry mist, a graininess of texture. There is a definite living background of grey-black, against which one is able to picture true blackness. If, now, the dark-adapted eye is turned for a few seconds to a feebly illuminated card, after withdrawal there remains an after image of the card painted in a blackness more intense than the darkness itself. A piece of black velvet held in sunlight appears definitely black, even though it reflects sufficient light to suggest texture in its parts. Wandering along a bright seashore, the illumination being, perhaps, 5000 foot-candles (Dr. Hickman suggests 15,000 meter-candles or approximately 1,500 f. c. but intensities of from 2,000 to 10,000 foot-candles are common in summer in the open) when one comes across a cave, though the very air between you and the cave is reflecting light, the cave, subjectively, suggests a forbidding blackness. As a general fact, then, one can produce the sensation of black by contrast, either temporal or spatial. One can dilute a color, virtually, with black by looking first at a bright object, or by placing it against a bright background.

Flicker Effect

There is one other point we must consider, and that is flicker. The Talbot-Plateau law states that when the eye receives a certain number of quickly succeeding impressions the resulting stimulus is the mathematical addition of all the light and dark intervals. It is the quantitative law of the persistence of vision, and on it depends the whole of kinematography. There is a minimum slowness at which impressions can be received to blend without flicker—about 16 per second. It is not generally known that the number is variable and depends on two factors—color and brightness. (These two points were emphasized in the recent series of articles on flicker presented in this department.) The vanishing-flicker frequency for any color and any screen brightness can be expressed in the form of an equation by means of which it can be calculated for any color of light and any intensity. Increasing the screen illumination 10 times means that the picture frequency must be doubled to give the same continuity.

Color in Tinted Pictures

We are now in a position to examine the question of picture tinting and projection.

Films are generally tinted yellow, blue or blue-green. We have seen that the effect of increasing the brightness of white light is to make it yellower. By yellowing a dull light we endow it with warmth and apparent brightness, deluding the eye that the illumination is increased; also we steepen the contrast. Blue and blue-green washes are used to convey two illusions, night and purity of texture. Blue is the color associated with the sky, with distance, water, snow and ice. In tinting blue we not only induce the sensations associated with these, but also produce a physiological sense of quietness. In blue light appearance of flicker is reduced by two-thirds, and contrast is so diminished that inequalities due to scratches, dust, or grain pattern become less obvious, and we have an improvement in the quality of projection which suggest placidity and purity.

Where a deep blue is used to depict night the "Purkinje" effect is being utilized. Because neutral tones become bluer on diminishing, artificially bluing the light suggests a dimness to the eye. When first the blue-dyed night scene follows a yellow film the illusion is excellent, but presently the eye becomes adapted to the blue, to which it is more sensitive at these illuminations, and all sense of dimness is lost, and there remains nothing but the residue of conventional color to convey the feeling of night. Although blue tinting is quite rightly used to suggest darkness, the illusion is only a temporary one—as indeed, to a lesser extent, is the brightness from the yellow-dyed film.

Wrong Contrast

The reason for this is that in the motion picture the simultaneous contrast is all wrong. Only a small portion of the retina is being used, the central detail revealing area. The outside surrounding region, which is much larger in extent, is being kept dark, whereas anywhere but in a picture house it would be subject to the same illumination as the yellow spot (See last week's article).

It is the field of view embraced by this outside region (See Fig. 2) which determines the sensitiveness of the eye and the diameter of the pupil. Viewing a bright picture in a darkened room the eye is being persuaded to open too widely and too receptively. This has the effect, firstly, of increasing contrast and apparent brightness, giving the picture a fictitious strength and brilliancy, and secondly, it induces eye-strain. A collateral effect is the destruction of all sense of blackness. It is impossible to appreciate as black the shadows in scenes which are projected in such a manner that their darkest parts are always more luminous (lighter than the surrounding mask or the picture house itself. It is analogous to viewing a solitary picture in a room "papered" with black velvet. The shadows of the finest etching would lose tone in such surroundings.

This has been the contention of the writer for a long time—that the black bordered screen practically destroys the tonal values in the screen picture and it also explains the illusion of "depth" and contrast obtained by the light bordered screen of which the Martin Illuminated Border is an extreme example.

Recommendations for obtaining the proper harmony between picture and border will be given in next week's article.

Helios Reflector Arcs on Market Over Two Years

IN THE issue of August 22 on page 972 of this publication a statement was made to the effect that the Helios Reflector Arc, manufactured by the Warren Products Company was not yet placed on the market. This was an error as the Helios Reflector Arc has been on the market now for over two years and numbers of these lamps are in use in all parts of this country.

August inclusive. The maximum report we received was a statement that the house had always lost money during the hot weather; that they afterward advertised daily the outside and inside temperatures and people actually admitted that they came quite as much to get cooled off as they did to see the show. This may not speak very well for the show, but in indicates whether or not it pays to make such an investment.

In Minneapolis and St. Paul there is a basin of very cold water at depths varying from 400 ft. to 800 ft. This water is supposed to come through a stratification leading from Lake Superior.

The Astor Theatre in St. Paul is so located that it gets a severe exposure from the sun and hot winds blowing in from the prairies. The attendance at this house fell off to almost nothing in the summer. A cooling system was installed, using artesian water from the basin mentioned. The house not having been built to admit of a highly efficient plant being installed, maximum results could not be obtained, but the conditions are so improved that the manager claims there is hardly any noticeable difference in the attendance, summer or winter.

The State Theatre in Minneapolis is very well known to all theatre owners in the middle west as being about the first theatre wherein a real effort was made to install an up-to-date cooling plant. Cold water is obtained from the same basin above referred to at a depth of about 800 ft. The temperature of the water is 49°. The satisfaction obtained from this installation was so marked that many owners, managers, architects and engineers have visited it from all parts of the country. It is our belief that this plant has had a greater influence on the attitude of theatre owners toward cooling plants than anything that had been done up to that time.

Photograph of the design of the theatre which Rowland & Clark will build in the East Liberty section of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Cold water not being obtainable in most places it is necessary to cool it artificially by a refrigerating plant. This adds greatly to the cost. In fact, it becomes the most expensive unit of the entire system.

Many other instances could be cited than the two referred to, but both being pioneers in that line and still giving a good account of themselves, it seems hardly necessary to mention that about fourteen or more other houses have been since equipped with cooling plants using refrigeration to cool the water.

We hope that out of this discussion you will have been convinced of the coming and certain necessity for cooling theatres that the problem must receive special treatment by somebody who is conversant with proper relative atmospheric conditions and how to obtain them so that the results will be entirely satisfactory; that the cost, though considerable, is not prohibitive, and in fact that it costs less than many other things that go into theatres from which less returns can be measured on the investment.

In closing, we want to suggest that good, substantial, efficient, dependable apparatus is the cheapest in the end.

Our catalogue lists a complete line of fine seating for modern theatres, from elaborate upholstered models to inexpensive but substantial veneer chairs.

Propose Modification of the Hartford Building Code

Recommendation that the city's building code be made less stringent as regards motion picture theatre construction will be made to the Common Council of Hartford, Conn., by the City Building Commission. A 20 per cent reduction of all fees for new construction involving more than $1,000 will also be made by Supervisor Mason.

The Hartford code, which in many respects is even more exacting than that of New York City, provides among other requisites that picture theatres have a passage way to the street both from the front and the rear. In New York only one passage is required. The action of the Commission in recommending the changes is the result of appeals from several local men who plan to build a theatre on State St.

Ground Broken for 2000 Seat House at Cambridge, Mass.

Harvard Square, Cambridge, Mass., will soon have a modern motion picture house. Ground will be broken next week at 1434 Massachusetts avenue for the foundations of the University Theatre, which is to have a seating capacity of two thousand. Charles E. Hatfield, county treasurer of Middlesex county and former mayor of Newton, Mass. is president and treasurer of the University Theatre, Inc., which will own the house. The main auditorium will be located in the rear of the present College House and will have an entrance through the College House. Land in the rear has been purchased by the company while a long lease has been taken for the entrance site.

Marr & Colton Organ for California Theatre

The Marr & Colton Company of Warsaw, N. Y., was recently awarded the contract for the New Tempest Theatre at Los Angeles, California. This theatre is going to be opened late in the year.

C. W. Hodgdon Reopening Princess Theatre, Wakefield

Charles W. Hodgdon is reopening the Princess theatre in Wakefield, Mass. after making extensive improvements in the house. On Saturdays and holidays three acts of B. F. Keith vaudeville will be added to the regular picture program. The house is reseated with air cushion seats, new stage and border lights have been installed, a new property house has been erected adjoining the rear of the stage and a spacious parking space for autos has been acquired and is being paved for patrons. I. M. Berg continues as house manager of the Princess and Wakefield theatres.

Plans Filed for New Buffalo Theatre

Plans for the new motion picture theatre to be built at 1588-1598 Genesee street, including seven stores and offices, have been filed with the bureau of buildings in Buffalo. The new house will be built by Barney Vohwinkel, 2886 Main street, who has operated the Oriole theatre near the site for many years. When completed the house will be leased by the Shea Amusement company. According to Mr. Vohwinkel the theatre and stores will cost $350,000. The seating capacity will be 1710. The frontage on Genesee street will be 168 feet. The house will have a depth of 132 feet.

New Theatre Planned for Malden, Mass.

Ramsdell Brothers of the Malden Orpheum Theatre of Malden, Mass., have commenced the construction of a second theatre to be known as the Middlesex Theatre, on Dartmouth and Pleasant streets, Malden. Associated with the Ramsdell Brothers in the new enterprise is Fred Green, who conducts the Mystic Theatre in Malden. It is the plan at present to use the new playhouse for vaudeville and moving picture purposes and to use the existing playhouses in Malden in which they are interested exclusively for motion pictures.

Plan Addition for New States Theatre, East Grand Forks

McDonald Bros., owners of the New States Theatre in East Grand Forks, Minn., are spending $15,000 on an addition to their present theatre building which will be used as a dance hall. When complete, it will be one of the largest dance halls in the Northwest and will be well patronized by the number of students attending college in Grand Forks, North Dakota, just across the river.

Plans Prepared for Theatre at Waterbury, Conn.

Waterbury, Conn., is to have a new theatre. Alfonso E. Sirica has had plans prepared by Architect Joseph DeLanretis for a brick and steel structure at 101 Sherry street, the main auditorium of which will be 45 by 108 feet with spacious lobby.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Black Cyclone"—Pathe, Eastman, Rochester

Herald: "If anyone should come away from the Eastman Theatre this week and feel that he hasn't gotten his money's worth of entertainment there must be something wrong with his digestion. On the screen bill the feature is provided by Rex, the wild horse, in 'Black Cyclone,' a combination of equine and human romance. 'Black Cyclone' is something different in the way of screen entertainment. Its principal character is Rex, a black horse, who shows a degree of understanding which almost passes belief."

Democrat and Chronicle: "Supplanting human beings as stars, the sleek black horse, supported by his companions, Lady and The Killer, thrilled Eastman Theatre audiences with the opening performances of this week's program, 'Black Cyclone.'"

"Merry Widow"—M-G-M., Embassy, New York

Mirror: "The most notable event of the current cinema year occurred last night at the new Embassy Theatre, when social and celluloid lights turned out en masse to view the premiere of Erich von Stroheim's 'The Merry Widow.' 'The Merry Widow' is a gem. This production unfolds with beautiful precision, artful subtlety and magnificent sets. Mae Murray and Jack Gilbert cover themselves with glory as hero and heroine of this rich romance."

Herald-Tribune: "Erich von Stroheim's pictures are peerless pictures. Perhaps another director could have made as interesting and alluring a version of 'The Mery Widow' as the one Miss Gould presented last night, but we doubt it. It seems to be the first musical play that has been transferred to the screen successfully. If one touched on all the fine points of 'The Merry Widow' one would write columns about it."

American: "What a pictnre! There are touches that are so original and so brilliant we feel an impatience that von Stroheim has wasted his time without giving us more of this type of entertainment. Miss Murray is enchanting. She is not only beautiful but she gives a fine, sincere performance that is not to be named in the same breath with her other film work. The whole thing is done with a deftness that commands our admiration."

World: "I don't think that I have ever seen more delightful photographic effects than last night in the Embassy. They have spared no time nor expense, it would seem, in constructing realistic settings into which to cast this grand old music play. No young man in the films today would have stood up so bravely and so snappily and so romantically as did John Gilbert to the part of the soldier Prince. And who could have been expected to dance into the camera as Miss Murray would dance?"

Telegraph: "The first night audience applauded to the echo. When the orchestra glided into the 'Merry Widow Waltz' the enthusiasm reached its height; and there was no doubt that 'The Merry Widow' as conceived by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has found a home on Broadway as long as it cares to stay. Directed by Erich von Stroheim, starring Mae Murray and Jack Gilbert, it is a predestined success."

Times: "The picture is one of strong passion. The Widow is, of course, impersonated by Mae Murray, who demonstrates true acting ability in this effort. Both Mr. Gilbert and Roy D'Arcy as the two Princes, acquit themselves with distinction, especially Mr. D'Arcy, who is seen in the role of the Crown Prince. And we must mention the skillful performance rendered by Tully Marshall."

Sun: "A captivating picture franght with the exquisite beauty of a new Mae Murray and having further the charm of John Gilbert's restrained and intelligent, yet full blooded and robust acting. It is a masterpiece of direction. It is a picture with an appeal to the mind; a thing done with sophistication, poise and intelligence. The picture is magnificently photographed."

Journal: "If I could reproduce here a bar from the waltz of 'The Merry Widow' it would describe better than words the lilting romance and the provocative charm of the photoplay which opened at the new Embassy Theatre last night. It's the kind of love story of which you imagine yourself the hero or heroine when you shut your eyes and dance to an alluring melody. Had I a hat on I'd take it off to Erich von Stroheim for the delightful picture he made of 'The Merry Widow.'"

Graphic: "The opening of the Embassy Theatre last night was both a social and a cinema triumph. The 'Merry Widow' is von Stroheim at his best. In point of artistry, directing, acting and photography nothing better has ever been seen on Broadway."

"Unholy Three," M-G-M., Allen, Cleveland

News: "When the present season draws to a close there will not be many pictures ranked ahead of 'The Unholy Three.' It seems to be one of those productions that contain every requisite of first class screen entertainment. First of all the story is unusualness itelf. Second, the cast has been so carefully chosen that the players seem to live their parts. Third, it has been produced in a careful and true to life manner. Lastly, the principal part has been placed in the hands of Lon Chaney. Chaney has never done better work in his whole career than he does in 'The Unholy Three."

Plain Dealer: "We have with us this week a greater picture than 'The Miracle Man.' It is 'The Unholy Three,' with Lon Chaney and Mae Busch. More stark in its realism and lacking the semi-religious flavor and the near heart-agonies of the other, Chaney's new one is better than the one which served to introdnce him because it is more artistically created, because its players are better actors and because, finally, pictures have really advanced in their methods of making."

"Coast of Folly" — Paramount, Rivoli, N. Y.

Times: "One is impressed by the lofty aspirations of the popular actress. She virtually fills three roles. Miss Swanson is singularly well made up as the Countess. She looks old, but always Miss Swanson. These scenes are amazingly well pictured and quite a credit to Miss Swanson."

The Mirror: "Gloria Swanson is a revelation. Gloria portrays three different roles. As the Victorian gal, dolled in flowing skirts, pompadour hair and coy manners, she shows promise of being the Mommer she later becomes. As Mommer, she looks like she may be twenty years from now. She gives a splendid account of herself in this part. Her walk is a marvel, her pecky affectations very good, and her makeup a work of art. As the modern flapper she manages to act with youthful buoyancy."

Telegraph: "Bravo, Gloria Swanson!"

American: "No one, after seeing Gloria Swanson in the hard make-up of a frowsy, middle-aged woman fighting for youth in 'The Coast of Folly' can accuse her of being vain."

Daily News: "To say that the film is all Gloria and a yard wide is putting it mildly. Gloria Swanson has never had the chance to show her versatility as she does in this high-voltage drama of life as it is lived on the coast of folly (not Hollywood, but Florida). She is the pompadour girl of twenty years ago. She is a dashing debutante, the playgirl of the eastern world. She is the kittenish old woman with ratty hair and ruddied cheeks. And she gives an imitation of Mary Pickford!"

Journal: "The photoplay, which deals with an unjust society scandal, is entertaining, and has several amusing touches."

Telegram: "Although we have ever been a Gloria Swanson fan it was somewhat of a revelation to discover that Madame La Marquise is capable of acting the role of an elderly Countess—French, of course—as pleasingly as she does in her new film, an adaptation by James Creelman of Coningsby Dawson's successful novel.

Sun: "In her impersonation of the elderly countess—who saves the young Gloria from scandal—Miss Swanson gives perhaps the most interesting study that she has yet revealed to the camera. The 'Coast of Folly' is good box office entertainment."

Evening World: "This feature is all Swanson. In fact, this story is overshadowed by the star's characterizations and in all three she is admirable."

"The Gold Rush"—United Artists, Victory, Denver

Post: "'The Gold Rush' is with us, and a box-office record which had stood at the Victory theatre for five years has departed. 'The Gold Rush' is Charlie Chaplin; typically Charlie Chaplin; more elaborate and possibly funnier than ever before. It can be said without fear of contradiction, this is his greatest effort."

"Drusilla With A Million"—F. B. O., Forum, L. A.

Times: "Heart interest has at last been rediscovered for the screen, and as a consequence, audiences may as well be forewarned to be sure and take extra pocket handkerchiefs with them when they go to see 'Drusilla With A Million.' It is the best feature of the tearful type, destined to make everybody happy, that has been shown on the screen, seemingly in ages, and I imagine that owing to this fact alone there will be an unusual pilgrimage to the Forum Theatre where it is on view this week."

Record: "The question 'Does a million dollars mean anything to you?' brings forth some of the most wholesome comedy and greatest heartthrobs of the season . . . Priscilla Bonner gives a supreme performance. This little lady is destined to travel far along the road of perfect screen portrayals. Her abundant ability shows in her every appearance on the screen. Mary Carr repeats her triumph in 'Over the Hill.' Personally, I believe that she surpasses her efforts in the latter film. She has an appealing manner that touches your heart strings."

Express: "When a picture takes such hold of the emotions of an audience that it bursts into applause at the turn of affairs which confound the forces arrayed against the distressed heroine, the critics may as well sheathe their arrows. Mary Carr is 'Drusilla' and so delightful is her portrayal, so tender, so humorous, so pathetic by turn that it is one of the histrionic gems of the year."

News: "One of the most dramatic situations that has ever been filmed is incorporated into the story of 'Drusilla With A Million' this week's Forum offering. Scenes are so intensely dramatic, in which the suspense is prolonged so effectively that one suspects the director of a flash of real genius."

"Soup to Nuts" — Educational, Forum, L. A.

Examiner: "The surrounding program at the Forum is brilliant, 'Soup to Nuts,' a Christie Comedy featuring Neal Burns, not only brings spontaneous laughter with its action, but its subtitles run apace."

Express: "A Christie Comedy on the Forum bill, 'Soup to Nuts,' featuring Neal Burns, is one of the funniest yet made under this brand and kept the audience in a high state of merriment."

The Motiograph De Luxe Title Brake

First to be adopted by the Motiograph De Luxe.

An absolute necessity for every modern theatre.

The uses it may be put to, are unlimited. It controls the projector speed without disturbing set of speed control. The action is instantaneous and positive, permitting short titles to be run at a speed that is readable.

For "stunt" work, it makes possible the perfect synchronization of music and picture, as in marching scenes and titles in weeklies.

When used intermittently during a reel, the projector automatically returns to set speed when title brake is released.

Controlling button is located so it may be operated from either side of the projector.

This title brake is now furnished with every Motiograph De Luxe Equipment.

HAS YOUR PROJECTOR A "TITLE BRAKE"?

Ask the Motiograph Distributor about the modern conveniences installed on the Motiograph De Luxe to give perfect projection.

THE TOWER OF LIES

Norma Shearer Lon Chaney

Perhaps you heard rumors about this production.

The studio said: "Something marvelous."

We have kept it as a surprise—and what a surprise it is!

Victor Seastrom has made a picture that's going to be the talk of this broad land within a few weeks.

Of course, after "He Who Gets Slapped" we knew that we could expect a money-maker from Seastrom.

But this exceeded our wildest hopes.

Seastrom has put Life on the screen as no one has ever done it before.

He took Selma Lagerlof's world-prize novel "The Emperor of Portugallia" and made a world-prize screen epic out of it.

He probes the depths of the heart, finding there the joy of living and loving, the despair of Fortune's fickleness.

What moments of tenderness and beauty—with the magnificent Norma Shearer!

What moments of towering passion—with Chaney, the genius!

A box-office triumph indeed—with dramatic story-telling that never lets up a moment!

You've seen Chaney, you've seen Shearer, you know Seastrom's magic hand.

Combined they have made one of the greatest motion picture achievements of our day!

The Quality Fifty-Two from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Is The Talk Of The Industry

From Coast to Coast, A Sensation!

New York

"The Pony Express" is playing two Broadway first run theatres -the Rivoli & Rialto - the same week & breaking records at both!

$11,000 the opening day!

At 10:30 A.M. the day after the opening, lines over a block long at both houses waiting to get in!

Crowds & receipts mounting every day!

Now Get All the Facts On Incandescent Lamp Projection

A handbook on incandescent lamp projection, the most complete ever published, has been prepared by our engineers to give exhibitors unbiased information on this important subject.

The incandescent lamp has many advantages over the arc but it is not recommended for use in every theatre. The types and sizes of theatres that can adopt this method of projection are described in the handbook; comparisons are made between the cost of operating the incandescent lamp and different types of arc lights; detailed descriptions of each part of the optical system is given; complete operating instructions are included and many other important subjects are covered.

Whether or not you are considering installing incandescent lamp projection you will find this book interesting and valuable.

Your copy is ready. Just mail the attached coupon and it will be sent to you promptly without charge or obligation.

AN unsolicited tribute to "Golden Rule Laemmle" who won't know any thing about it until he sees the following pages which contain the most unusual tribute ever paid to showmanship by exhibitors in the motion picture industry.

MOTION PICTURES TODAY September 12 1925

To CARL LAEMMLE,
President, Universal Pictures Corporation,

GREETINGS:

We, the Undersigned, Exhibitors of Motion Pictures, desire to express in this public manner and before the entire motion picture industry, through the advertising columns of MOTION PICTURES TODAY, our cordial appreciation to you for your most brilliant and most human stroke of showmanship in originating and carrying out your Universal Complete Service Contract, which appears to us as fair, equitable, progressive and fully satisfactory.

As a benefit to the exhibitor, it has no equal and we are moved to print and personally pay for this expression of our most cordial thanks. One of our number describes you as "Golden Rule" Laemmle, and because we can think of no higher or finer tribute to a man either personally or in his business relations, we endorse this sentiment and wish for you a continuance of that splendid prosperity which should reward enterprise, great heartedness, business foresight and practical showmanship.

We sign ourselves,

Most sincerely yours,

Contributor's Note—That unusual advertisement was suggested by a man who felt that Carl L. Laemmle was entitled to a frank and candid expression of thanks. We offered to print it gratuitously but he insisted that what he desired was an advertising and not a free expression and that other exhibitors felt as he did. Viewed right without advancing Mr. Laemmle or the Universal company that evil certain movements was fostered by MOTION PICTURES TODAY and each name printed herein represents a cash in advance payment as a cost covering charge. It was not entered into for profit. Therefore it stands as a unique and a pertinent expression of a busy but not unappreciative industry.

MOTION PICTURES TODAY

The exhibitors who have tendered this unique expression of appreciation to Carl Laemmle are a very small part of the many who have signed his Complete Service Contract and are reaping its benefits. To date there are 2525 of them with more coming every day. These exhibitors from every section of the country are loud in their praise and sincere in their thanks because Universal's Complete Service Contract will keep their theatres running in season and out. It will make money for them every week in the year.

Look at this from a purely business angle. Isn't it convincing evidence to the live-and-let-live policy inaugurated by Carl Laemmle with this contract? These exhibitors have tried and tested it and have found it to be just what Mr. Laemmle said it was—a Godsend to exhibitors.

That's the reason we reproduce this testimonial here. We want you to know from other exhibitors just what a wonderful business proposition it is. We want you to call in your Universal salesman and get your share of this prosperity.

in Camille of the Barbary Coast

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Camille of the Barbary Coast
(Dierker-Associated Exhibitors—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE'S a lot of good common sense developed in this picture—which treats of the redemption theme. What is so? Here could really happen and it is treated logically all the way without any recourse to piece-fitting to give it a punch. The director skates over thin ice in establishing the morals of the dance-hall denizens. But he gets away with it nicely. He has cast the picture well—Mae Busch, Owen Moore and Burr McIntosh being excellent types for portraying the girl, the youth and the hard-hearted father, respectively.

The idea is not new—and the characters have been used in a score of similar plots. But where it differs from the general run of such stories is the emphasis placed upon the humanities. The author shows us a well-to-do youth who is refused aid by his father when he commits embezzlement. The young man takes his medicine and goes to jail. He becomes embittered and disheartened. After being released with the customary ten spot he drifts to the Barbary Coast (the action of the story has Frisco for a background) and picks up a flirtation with a dance-hall girl.

That's all there is to the plot—but it is told with no lagging whatsoever. To balance it the director introduces a lot of honky-tonk incident and atmosphere. The detail of the dance-hall is realistic—and while it has a sordid flavor there is no denying that it rings true to life. The manner in which the proprietor and his bouncers run the place—and the way the various hangers-on conduct themselves shows real grasp on the atmosphere of the under-world.

It is acted with genuine feeling. There isn't any humor, but plenty of heart interest and pathos.

THEME. Romantic drama of youth cast out by his father because of a theft and who is encouraged and redeemed by a girl of easy virtue. Reconciliation follows.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The heart interest touches when youth wins sympathy of girl. The scene when he meets his father. The final reconciliation. The honky tonk atmosphere. The sincere acting by Mae Busch, Owen Moore and Burr McIntosh.

DIRECTION. Keeps plot even and builds it logically. Provides good atmosphere for different scenes. Refrains from adding melodrama. Brings out the sympathy for the central characters.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can bill as a truthful little story of two despondent people—who meet and have a romance. Play up the redemption theme. Use teaser statements such as "His father scorned him, but a girl had faith in him."

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for all average houses. The heart interest and romance should appeal to the every-day picture goer.

SUMMARY. This picture is developed with a lot of common sense. To make a story out of it the fathe is painted rather harshly, but the climax brings on a happy ending. Treats of redemption and the power of romance to work good. Is staged with first rate atmosphere and acted with sincerity.

THE PLAYERS

Mae Busch, Owen Moore, Fritzie Brunette, Burr McIntosh, Harry T. Morey, Tammany Young, Dorothy King, William Robert Daley, Dagmar Godowsky.

By Forest Halsey. Directed by Hugh Dierker.

SYNOPSIS. Youth is caught in a theft and his father refuses to save him. After serving a prison term the young man drifts into a notorious cafe and develops romance with girl. Her sympathy helps him to get on his feet. They get married and refuse to seek assistance from the father. Eventually his heart is softened and a reconciliation follows.

As a Whole.. MUCH GOOD ACTING AND SOME VERY EFFECTIVE DIRECTION, BUT STORY NEEDS SOME KIND OF SPEEDING UP. CUTTING MIGHT DO IT.

Cast .... Mae Busch excellent as a dance hall girl who is the means of making a man" of hero, played particularly well by Matt Moore Tammany Young contributes some comedy business that gets over first rate. Burr McIntosh is one of those unrelenting parents and others are Harry Morey, Dorothy King, William Robert Daley.

Type of Story... Drama There is a familiar ring about Forrest Halsey's "Camille of the Barbary Coast." It has to do with a dance hall girl who isn't all bad and of her regeneration of a wealthy down-and-outer. But there is such a lot of good atmosphere and good acting that it does make for pretty interesting material at that. It is slow in getting started and even when they do get hero and heroine teamed up it doesn't step along as lively as it might. This could probably be improved with some cutting, especially the over-long close-ups of Mae Busch. They are mostly all far too long. Hugh Dierker has surrounded the characters with some great atmosphere. The dance hall and its patronizing element is typical and Tammany Young's comedy contributions are good. He makes some easy change by escorting "ladies" into the dance hall when they come unaccompanied by a "gent."

Box Office Angle ... Pretty effective box office material and with a heart interest punch climax that will make it pleasingly "sad" for a good many.

Exploitation.... Good cast and names to work with. Talk about the good work of Mae Busch and Matt Moore. Regarding the story, let them know it deals with a rich youth who was "down" and of a dance hall girl who brought him "up." Has first rate angles for exploitation and a trailer including Tammany Young's comedy slant should get them interested.

Direction.....Hugh Dierker; good, but a bit slow on development.

"Camille of the Barbary Coast"

Mae Busch and Owen Moore Score in Pleasing and Dramatic Story of the Seamy Side of Life

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Many a picture has for its climax a court scene with the hero on trial, but in the Associated Exhibitors production "Camille of the Barbary Coast" the curtain rises on the trial and opens the picture and provides a punch that makes the spectator sit up and take notice.

A few flashbacks quickly cover the events leading up to this situation; the hero's prison term ends quickly and then in the sordid and drab surroundings of San Francisco's centre of underworld and half-world, The Barbary Coast, there begins an appealing story of regeneration based on human kindness and awakened self-respect.

The woman is a disillusioned frequenter of a questionable dance hall, a sort of Camille type hence the title. Something about the stranger awakens her better nature; she offers to aid him and this rekindles ambition. Together they fight their way back up the ladder.

Mae Busch gives one of the best characterizations of her career bringing unusual sincerity and intense human appeal to the title role and Owen Moore is a good type for the man. The other roles are all in capable hands with Tammany Young providing some out of the ordinary comedy.

Mr. Dierker has used to advantage considerable footage in establishing the proper atmosphere for the story by developing various types around the dance-hall and made this section interesting besides enhancing the dramatic value.

The final reconciliation with the father is not entirely convincing and is more a concession to a happy ending, but the story as a whole is an excellent characterization of a girl of the underworld, and with its unusually intense sympathetic note should provide pleasing entertainment for the majority.

As a Whole — SELF-SACRIFICE THEME AND SMALL TOWN ATMOSPHERE WILL GET THIS OVER NICELY IN CERTAIN COMMUNITIES. NOT JUST RIGHT FOR CITY TRADE.

Star — Has a great hero role that gives him a series of sacrifices that he executes very effectively although you probably won't always feel that they are justified.

Cast — Edna Murphy suitable as Mary, the herome, and butt of small town gossip. Others Douglas Gilmore, Marcia Harris, Flora Finch, Gordon Begg, Harlan Knight, Blanche Davenport

Type of Story — War drama; adapted from a story of the same name by T. Howard Kelly. The war serves again as a basis for a drama of sacrifice and romance. Kelly has included in his story most every angle that is known as good audience "dope" the kind that makes for the right sort of entertainment and reaches the greatest majority—the people living outside the metropolitan districts. For them "His Buddy's Wife" holds a big appeal. It has that ever popular small town atmosphere with the gossips "doing their stuff" to perfection. It has romance, it has heart interest and mother love; it has sacrifice. The only drawback is an anti-climax that brings about a half-happy ending. The girl is reunited with her husband she thought dead and hero, who loves her, goes on his way alone. If they had brought out that the girl preferred her husband to hero the final ending would be more acceptable.

Story — Jimmy and Bill are buddies in France. The latter is killed and Jimmy keeps his promise to look after Bill's wife Mary. His protection is misunderstood and the gossips get busy. At the height of the scandal Bill returns from the dead. The scandal blows over and Mary and Jim plan to marry. Bill, who had been hiding in town, appears and Jimmy once more makes a sacrifice by giving back the girl he loves to her husband.

Box Office Angle — Good box office picture for many houses. All you have to do is be sure you have the right crowd for it. City people may not take to the rather exaggerated small town atmosphere.

Exploitation — Talk about the two buddies that went away to war together; of the one that came back and the situation that arose when he was about to marry the wife of his buddy and his buddy came back from the dead.

Direction — Tom Terriss; usually good; small town gossip angle a bit overdone.

Author — T. Howard Kelly
Scenario — Tom Terriss
Cameraman — Henry Cronjager
Photography — All right
Locale — New England town
Length — 5,200 feet
Release Date — Oct 4

FINE B. O. FILM

"HIS BUDDY'S WIFE." Associated Exhibitors' Photoplay. Stars Glenn Hunter. Director Tom Terriss. Length, 7 Reels.—A crackerjack audience picture, this starring vehicle for Glenn Hunter should exert wide appeal. There is nothing new in the way of a story, but it is the type of photoplay that the fans delight in; there is pathos action and sentiment, with a number of vivid war sequences thrown in for good measure. The atmosphere is true to life and colorful, the plot is nicely worked out so that right up to the end, it keeps you guessing as to the final outcome. There is nothing here that has not been done legions of times, but since the fans seem to like them this way this is a point in its favor rather than otherwise.

The narrative may be described as Enoch Arden brought up to date. Two chums at the outbreak of the war are buddies in No Man's Land. They both love the same girl, but Bill was lucky enough to marry her before embarking for France. Through all the grim tragedy of war with its stark realities and sordidness, they both cherish the memory of this sweet girl. When Bill is called on to perform a hazardous mission, he leaves his wife's picture with his best pal, telling him in the event of his death, to go back and take care of the girl. Bill is swept down in the melee of battle, and his pal faithful to his trust goes back to the girl. Complications arise, and to silence the wagging tongues of idle gossips, he marries Bill's wife.

When all is going well, the ghost from the dead appears in the flesh and Bill's pal, with a nobility prompted partly by unselfishness and partly by love, leaves the two lovers together.

Glenn Hunter as the youth, is well cast and Edna Murphy, as the wife, is daintily wistful and winsome. Others deserving of a word of mention are Flora Finch and Gordon Begg. The piece was adapted by Tom Terriss from a story in Smart Set by T. Howard Kelley, and capably directed by Mr. Terriss.

"His Buddy's Wife"

Glenn Hunter Featured in Appealing Sentimental Story of Youthful Romance and Self-Sacrifice

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Against backgrounds of the World War and a small New England village there is unfolded a touching and tender romance of youth in the Associated Exhibitors production "His Buddy's Wife" with Glenn Hunter in the leading role.

Using a magazine story by T. Howard Kelley as the basis and preparing his own adaptation, Director Tom Terriss has turned out a picture that is filled with charm and beautiful sentiment. He has left no angle untouched that would add to the building up of sympathy or the bringing out of the pathos of the two leading roles, for sadness and sacrifice are the keynotes of this little story which is intense in its heart interest.

Glenn Hunter was an ideal selection for the role of the fellow who felt his first thrill of love, when in the trenches he saw a picture of his buddy's wife and who, true to his promise when his buddy failed to return from a raid, went to the village and devoted his life to the girl. His sincerity and splendid handling of the emotional angle makes the character very real and causes a tug at the heart. Edna Murphy gives a good performance as the girl who, while deeply grateful to the boy, finally came to his rescue when he was threatened with jail for defending her name and bravely declared her intention of marrying him although her real love was for her missing husband.

Fifty-Fifty

(Berger Prod.-Associated Exhibitors—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

A PICTURIZATION of the same story in which Norma Talmadge appeared way back in the old Triangle days and which has now been given a modern tinge. The picture also serves to bring Louise Glaum back to the silver sheet. It opens with a camera tour of the French capital, showing us views of the points of interest in the upper and lower world.

The tale, as will be recalled by some of the old timers, has as its theme, "what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander." An American millionaire visiting in Paris meets, and later weds a mannequin-dancer, but tiring of her "steps out" with a beautiful divorcee. The wife decides to do the same thing, and after the husband's jealousy has been aroused and he learns that the "tramping" of his wife and "the other man" was just a trick of his new flame, there is a reconciliation.

Hope Hampton has the leading feminine role and during the action of the story displays a great array of latest styles for nuptials direct from the fashion centers of Europe. Those scenes and gowns will be a good selling point with which to interest women patrons. Opposite Miss Hampton is Lionel Barrymore who gives a clever characterization of the role of Harmon, millionaire. Miss Glaum is adequate as the vamp, while Arthur Donaldson and J. Moy Bennett inject the comedy element.

There are some interesting scenes in the cafes of the Parisian underworld which have been filled with realistic color. There are shots of mannequins displaying gowns in a Paris atelier that are atmospheric and give a style show an opportunity for some fine musical accompaniment. There are some dances which give opportunity for some fine musical accompaniment.

THEME. A society drama in which a wife finding her husband falling for the other woman gets him back on his feet by stepping out with another man.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scene of Paris above and below the boulevards. The scenes in the fashion emporium. The Apache dances in Montmartre. The framing of the wife and "the other man." The gowns and jewels worn by Miss Hampton. The appearance of Louise Glaum.

DIRECTION. Has succeeded in injecting a Parisian atmosphere in this one which also contains enough action to hold the interest as well as a wealth of novelty.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the names of the stars and emphasize the return to the screen of Louise Glaum. Put on a style show. Stage an apache dance as a prologue. Use stills of Miss Hampton for fashion ads.

DRAWING POWER. Should do business in most houses with a little exploitation. Should go good in the towns where its Parisian atmosphere will arouse interest.

SUMMARY. A good program picture which, because of its large number of exploitation angles, should be developed into a good box office feature. There is a good cast, an interesting, if not overly original plot

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Ginette	Hope Hampton
Frederick Harmon	Lionel Barrymore
Nina Olmstead	Louise Glaum
Charles O Malley	J Moy Bennett
Grand Duke Popovitch	Arthur Donaldson
Jean	Jean D'Arl Val

Frederick Harmon accompanies Charles O Malley on the Grand Duke's personally conducted tour of the Parisian underworld. Here he rescues Ginette from two Apaches who quarrel over her and takes her home. Returning to the cabaret, he finds it all a fake for the exploitation of thrill seeking Americans. Even the Grand Duke is working on a commission basis. Harmon marries Ginette, and proceeds to neglect her for Nina Olmsted, a designing vamp. Ginette flirts with Jean, now a dancer in an American resort. Nina attempts to frame them so that she may marry Harmon, but her plot goes awry and in the end Ginette and Harmon are reunited with a greater mutual understanding.

MOTION PICTURE REVIEW

THIS one will bring the old-timers memories of the same picture done by Norma Talmadge some years ago. It was a good picture then, and it is a good one now. It has been brought up to the minute and should prove a satisfactory box-office attraction for the average house.

There is plenty of excitement, lots of interesting background, plenty of the local color of Paris, fashion shows and love scenes for the women, and a couple of good fights for the men.

The film opens with a sort of Parisian travelogue showing the various arcs, towers, cathedrals that embroider the city on the Seine. Later there are Apache resorts, wild dances and villainous characters galore. That they are all "atmosphere" for resort proprietors does not lessen their realism.

There are some fine fashion show shots in the sequence where Harmon accompanies Nina on a shopping tour, and there is some clever business during the sequence where Ginnette and Jean are placed in a decidedly compromising position by Nina, with the aid of the Grand Duke, a firm of shyster lawyers and a photographer.

There is not a little of the comedy element in the film, most of it being supplied by the American cabaret proprietor, Charles O'Malley, and the old fraud of a Grand Duke, who seeks to eke out an existence through expedients that we hope he would have passed up under the regime of the Romanoffs.

It is a pleasure to welcome Louise Glaum back to the screen in one of the vamp roles in which she excels. She is as beautiful as ever, and has not lost the fine histrionic touch which gained her prominence in other days. As Nina Olmstead she gives one of the best portrayals in the production.

Hope Hamnton is a blonde Ginette, who proves that she knows not only how to win a husband, but also how to hold one. Lionel Barrymore is convincing as an American millionaire who is somewhat susceptible to the charms of femininity. The remainder of the cast is wholly adequate, Arthur Donaldson being especially good as the pompous and rascally Grand Duke.

There are a dozen exploitation angles to "Fifty-Fifty" including a fashion show, the apache element, the title, and the cast. Feature Miss Glaum's name together with those of Hope Hampton and Lionel Barrymore. She has many friends who will be glad to see her again.

FILM DAILY

"Fifty-Fifty"

Prod., Diamant Berger
Dist.: Associated Exhibitors

As a Whole...PARISIAN ATMOSPHERE AND SOCIETY WILL MAKE THIS ATTRACTIVE FOR MANY. ATTRACTIVE SOME GOOD HOUSES. HAS CARDS IN THE CAST. DRAWING

Cast...Lionel Barrymore is well suited as the American who falls in love with a Parisian dancer. Not given many opportunities for dramatic acting but handles the part easily. Hope Hampton vivacious as the dancer-wife who plays her husband's game in order to win back his love. Louise Glaum, long absent from the screen, returns in her old forte—that of vamp and other woman.

Type of Story...Domestic drama

"Fifty-fifty" refers to the libertines taken by the husband in the case and his wife who decides that the best way to cure him of his infatuation for the "other woman" is to have an affair herself. Then it's "Fifty-fifty." The idea, though not new, works out in pretty interesting fashion with a lot of Parisian night life atmosphere and Apache business affording effective trimmings for the story. This sort of thing appeals to a large majority of entertainment and to them other bits of Apache sequence and the fashion revue scenes in the Montmartre restaurant are occasional evidence of careless cutting which it would be well to remedy.

Story...Harmon, an American traveling in France, meets Ginette, a model by day and a dancer by night. He marries her and brings her to America. He is followed by a vamp, Nina. He is followed by Harmon leaving discovers the cause and when she dancing partner, Nina frames Ginnette and Jean in the hope of bringing about a separation between Ginnette and Harmon. Her plan fails and the two are reconciled.

Box Office Angle...Good type of entertainment for many houses. You know whether or not your crowd is right for this particular type of entertainment. Should go well in certain theaters.

Exploitation...Run a trailer showing some of the Apache sequence and also the fashion revue. This latter readily suggests a fashion show for exploitation if you care to go in for such extensive advertising. Use the names of Lionel Barrymore and Hope Hampton and tell them that Louise Glaum returns to the screen in "Fifty-Fifty." Title will work well with catchlines in it.

Direction...Henri Diamant Berger; usually quite all right.

"Never Weaken"

Reissued Harold Lloyd Three-Reeler Chock Full of Laugh-Provoking Gags and Thrill Stuff

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Included in Associated Exhibitors' program for the first four months of the new season is a Harold Lloyd reissue "Never Weaken." This comedy, which has been re-edited, was one of the first Lloyd pictures to exceed two reels, in fact in its present form it is only 2339 feet but every foot is filled with laughs or thrills or both.

The early part of the picture is devoted to amusing scenes showing Harold carrying on a romance with Mildred Davis, who is now Mrs. Harold Lloyd in real life. Seeing her in the arms of another he determines to commit suicide and the various schemes which he tries and discards as unsatisfactory introduce a fine collection of laugh-getting gags with a lot of uproarious and quite a little subtle comedy.

After he has mistaken the bursting of an electric globe for the report of a pistol he has rigged up, a steel girder lifts his chair out of the window and up to the top of a skyscraper. The situation where he removed a bandage from his eyes and sees the figure of an angel on the corner of a building and hears the angel's chorus being played on a harp by a girl inside one of the offices, and thinks he is in heaven, is one of the best comedy situations ever filmed.

A lot of thrill comedy follows with Harold scrambling over the steel framework continually meeting with mishaps and having a lot of near falls. This picture is just as amusing today as when it was first issued and foot for foot should be able to hold its own with the majority of his later releases.

MOTION PICTURES TODAY

GOOD COMEDY

"NEVER WEAKEN." Associated Exhibitor. Photoplay. Star, Harold Lloyd. Author and Director, Sam Taylor. Length 3 Reels.—This re-issue of one of Harold Lloyd's earlier efforts is mildly entertaining. Nothing in which this clever comedian appears could possibly be dull, but the gags are not as humerous, or as laugh-provoking, as in some of his other comedies.

There are thrills aplenty, however, in which Harold balances himself perilously on the iron girders, being suspended in mid-air high up in a building under construction.

The story is slight, and concerns Lloyd's efforts to boost the business of a friend of his who is a chiropractor. He meets with considerable success, but arouses the wrath of a hostile policeman who persists in turning up at the wrong time. Perhaps the most amusing stunt in the picture is where Harold, contemplating suicide, is blindfolded when he mistakes the sound of a breaking electric bulb for the report of a revolver, and is subsequently lifted out of the window by a moving girder on a huge chain. He hears a harp played, and he takes his ascent to be a journey to the heavenly regions.

Any Lloyd comedy is a good buy for any house, and this one is no exception to the rule. He is one of the best comedians on the screen, for he knows the secret of extracting laughs from reluctant spectators. Mildred Davis plays opposite the star.

"Now or Never," the first of the Popular Demand Series, was a clean-up everywhere

Knocked a score of house records galley west.

Salvaged lots of weeks that exhibitors had charged off in advance as bloomers.

All you have to do is to advertise this one—

For there's only one Harold Lloyd, and "Never Weaken" is a pip.

Detroit Free Press: " Heaps of fun for the audience. Filled with laughs."

The women rave about this picture and here's one of the reasons why-

As Constance Talmadge appears throughout this big money maker.

Here we see Constance as the home loving wife who was never known to stay out late, go to cabarets or have bobbed hair. Her husband gets tired of such old fashioned ways and so she packs up and leaves.

The fun starts right here. At the railroad station she meets her twin sister, a famous musical comedy star in Paris. After hearing the story she outlines a plan that will have hubby dear right on his knees.

Hubby, in Paris goes to see the show in which the sister stars. He falls for her hard and with his pal takes her to dinner. But- and this is what the audience knows that he does not- it is his own wife he is entertaining and not the actress.

You can imagine the fun. They run away together and Constance has no mercy on him. Suddenly he begins to worry. He finds he really does love his wife and tries to find a way out the actress knowing this never lets up on the vamp stuff

In the midst of his anguish a knock comes on the door. Caught disgraced what should he do. He opens it and there stands his best friend and his wife. His punishment had been most complete and so the truth was told with a scene that forms a wonderful climax to a truly wonderful picture.

There is nothing bigger than a First National Picture

Special Attractions

We don't want to be unfair to another editorial. But we strongly contend for the general principle that it is dangerous to the box-office at large to advocate a supply of average pictures for it.

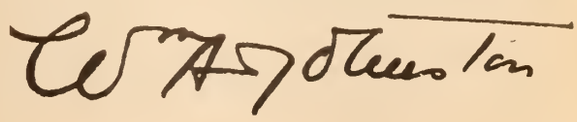
In the creative world, whether you write stories, or make books, paintings, or pictures, it is difficult to keep on hitting the high spots. They are reached out of the ruck of clever and sincere endeavor. But quantity production always tends to breed mediocre stuff. It makes hack writers and hack producers of pictures. Maybe an amazing lot of people will stand for it and pay for it. But they would pay better for better material. The average movie-goers are sharply critical these days. They don't want average pictures. Ask the exhibitor.

Before Chaplin's "Gold Rush" came along, every exhibitor I talked with urged that it be hurried to the theatres. Picture houses, they said, were starving for it. People keep going to the movies, but the things they hanker for don't come along as fast as they hope; and then the theatres everywhere suddenly report apathy. And it gets serious.

Last Spring William Fox announced that he was through with program pictures. He would make no more of them. The Fox Announcement of this season's product created a lot of attention. Why? Because it was tuned up to special attractions. Tom Mix pictures, by the way, are of course special attractions. A star of such appeal, aided and abetted always by the best stories he can get—that is always essential—is a special attraction. And, all in all, I do not define a special attraction, or a greater movie, or whatever you call it, as one of lavish production and high cost. F. B. O. turns out some specials each year at very moderate cost. Nor do I merely mean the outstanding picture sure to result from the large output of a finely equipped producing organization. I mean the picture that a good showman has taken time enough to originate and then has concentrated upon its production.

The fact of the matter is that every producing company ranks in the exhibitor mind today as to the specials they turn out.

The thing that works against good pictures is their wholesale production. It always has. It always will.



The exhibitors of this country and Great Britain object to block booking. Well, block booking—and the public objects primarily—is a necessary outcome of block production.

As one who has written for a living, I know well enough that you can't hit the peaks all the time. But you certainly can't if you set a pace of quantity production; and you can come mighty near it if you have the creative ability and do a few things and do them well. That is equally true of picture making.

There still exists a belief that a man who wants to make money—and he may be a commercial genius, too—can also make pictures the public wants. Well, he can't. And again you can't make them by imitation. A man may look at the models in a Fifth Avenue shop—study them, and then produce wonderful imitations for a lower price. That goes with gowns, but not at all with pictures. And money alone won't make them. Nor can we rely upon accident.

Well, what does make them? Concentration upon fewer pictures by men who can create for the show world. That's the one answer we know of.

And we repeat: the exhibitors of this country want this kind of attraction, and Europe wants them. And the business needs them. By the end of this year, it is said, 5,000,000 out of the 25,000,000 families of the country will own radio sets. That's one thing to consider; and another is that the legitimate stage business lost its hold when it went into the quantity production of road shows.

Senator Walker's Great Victory

SENATOR JAMES J. WALKER, outstanding friend of the industry, has won a smashing victory in the Democratic primaries for the nomination for Mayor of New York City. His plurality at the polls on September 15 was 100,000; a decisive tribute to an honest, faithful, brilliant public servant.

In the forefront of his battle was another staunch friend of the motion pictures—Governor Alfred E. Smith. So the victory has double significance for film folk everywhere.

The Motion Picture Division of the campaign played an important part; and it will continue its activities in the no less important campaign leading up to the election in November.

And all this is done without thought of partisanship. It is a simple acknowledgment of friendship toward the great friendship that Jimmy Walker has always borne the motion picture. It is an emphatic demonstration of appreciation by the exhibitors of Greater New York and the industry generally.

Motion Picture News, first among the trade papers to hail Jimmy Walker's candidacy several weeks ago, joins with his thousands of friends throughout the country, in rejoicing at his great success in the primaries. There will be still further cause for rejoicing when he becomes—as he surely will—the Chief Magistrate of the world's greatest city.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Little Mary Pickford paints her famous aunt as she appears in "Little Annie Rooney" (United Artists), where she returns to her original type of role.

LIL'S IN TOWN

THERE'LL be genuine atmosphere in "Fifth Avenue," for A. H. Sebastian and members of his producing unit have arrived in New York to film scenes on the world famous thoroughfare, and expect to finish "shooting" there within the next ten days.

In the Sebastian party are Marguerite de La Motte and Allan Forrest, principals, director Robert G. Vignola, Sally Long, Josephine Norman, Maurice Sebastian, producer's assistant, Phillip Carle, assistant director and cameraman J. C. Van Trees and Lillian R. Gale.

Miss Gale, formerly a member of MOTION PICTURE NEWS editorial staff, forsook the journalistic grind several years ago and sought the congenial atmosphere of Hollywood, where she has since distinguished herself in picture roles. It was no new experience for her, however, as prior to taking up newspaper work, she had yielded to the camera's compelling lure. And having been lured back again she expects to stay lured, for according to Lillian—it's the only life. Between attending to her professional duties and receiving calls from a multitude of friends who haven't seen her in a dog's age, for this is a long-delayed visit to the big town, she is having a strenuous time, and will probably find Hollywood real restful, when the company returns there to complete production, after the Gotham scenes have been filmed.

THE NEW FEATURES

PARAMOUNT'S long heralded production, "The Pony Express," occupies both the Rialto and Rivoli Theatres this week, playing to crowded houses and amply fulfilling the promises made in its behalf by advance advertising. James Cruze has every reason to feel proud over his latest directorial accomplishment. It's a fine spectacle depicting a particularly vivid phase of American history of equal value as an educational and entertaining factor.

Mr. Cruze's name is naturally enough inseparably associated with the making of "The Covered Wagon," a fact which led most of the picture critics to draw comparisons between that screen masterpiece and his latest contribution to the silent drama, giving a majority vote in favor of the former. Personally, we agree with this verdict, yet "The Pony Express" stands out in bold relief from the general ruck of films as a feature of superlative merit.

It's no small task to smoothly weave melodramatic and sentimental lure into a historical tapestry, but this has been neatly done in the present instance, a very necessary box office slant, for the fans must have their romance at any cost. A curious angle in the picture is the disposal of the murderous Mr. Slade, who instead of being punished after the traditional style of screen villains, wins promotion, and no doubt the increased respect of his ruffianly following. While it is historically true that Slade achieved temporary success, it is a matter of record that he was later hanged by the outraged members of a community who finally wearied of his crime revels. Somehow, we fancy the average movie patron would have been better pleased had the picture given at least a hint of his abrupt finish. This could have been accomplished without swerving an inch from the exact historical trail and satisfied the spectators who yearned to see a cold-blooded monster meet with his just deserts.

This is not, as you might imagine, a trick double exposure shot; it's Marie Prevost, Warner Bros. star, with her sister, Peggy, a dancer of no little ability.

Dorothy Crooker, who represents the Christie studios in "Screen and Beauties of 1925," a vaudeville act, does the split, supported by Jimmie Adams and Bobby Vernon, both starring in comedies for Educational release.

Barthelmess scores a distinct hit in the hero role of one of Uncle Sam's jolly sailor lads. It is an admirable characterization of the careless, free-and-easy gob who is at home in any port. Dorothy Mackail sharing honors with the star by her pleasing performance as Connie Martin, the little dressmaker who fears she is drifting on the rocks of eternal spinsterhood, but steers clear and has Dick take her in tow after all. The picture is strong in human interest and heart appeal, varied by a flow of bright comedy calculated to keep any audience in good humor.

"Souls For Sables," a Tiffany production, holds forth at the Colony, and registers as acceptable entertainment. It is a dramatic story of a young wife who longs for luxuries and almost wrecks her domestic happiness in an attempt to obtain them by questionable methods. The action is handicapped by excess footage in the opening reel, but handsome settings, elaborate gowns and excellent acting by an adequate cast, headed by Claire Windsor and Eugene O'Brien, are big helps in boosting the picture

The Warner Theatre presents "His Majesty Bunker Bean," a Warner Brothers offering. They had material obtained from Harry Leon Wilson's novel and stage play which could have been wrought into a delightful comedy, but director Harry Beaumont elected to make it merely slapstick. The result is a film which misses altogether the subtle humor and delicate shades of pathos originally woven by the author into one of the most appealing of modern fiction tales. Matt Moore, far too mature for the leading role of youthful Bunker, conforms to his director's slapstick ideas, also investing the luckless hero with a feverishly effeminate personality which succeeds in thoroughly eliminating any sympathetic interest the spectators might have felt in the career of the young gent who imagined himself the reincarnation of an Egyptian king.

VERSATILE ALMA

WHEN Alma Rubens made her appearance in Fox's "The Winding Stair," and her lithe figure bent and swayed in the sinuous measure of a wild African dance, all Hollywood marveled over the grace and ease of her performance. What Hollywood didn't know was that prior to her entry into movie land she distinguished herself both as singer and dancer in a San Francisco musical comedy company, and this engagement led to her becoming leading lady for Douglas Fairbanks in "The Half Breed."

Later she played leading roles in English, French and German productions, and when traveling in the Orient perfected herself in the dances peculiar to the Far East, her training in this respect resulting in the surprise she gave the movie colony. Last season William Fox signed Miss Rubens to a contract, and she scored heavily as Lady Hermione in "Gerald Cranston's Lady," as well as in the feminine lead of "She Wolves." Her forthcoming characterization of Lady Isable in "East Lynne", and dancing interlude in "The Winding Stair" should win her fame as one of the most versatile of screen actresses.

CONCERNING FAY LAMPHIER

ON September 12, Fay Lamphier, winner of the 1925 Beauty Pageant at Atlantic City, received the coveted title of "Miss America" from the judges with which goes the designation of "the most beautiful girl in the United States." And that isn't all, for she is signed up to appear in Paramount pictures under a long term contract, her first starring role being in "The American Venus."

Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation enthusiastically predicts that within a year Fay Lamphier will be as well known to the public as Betty Bronson and Esther Ralston, both of whom quite recently emerged from obscurity into filmland fame. Mr. Lasky was at Atlantic City just prior to the windup of the beauty tournament, saw Fay Lamphier, entered as Miss California, on the Boardwalk, and then and there voiced an emphatic agreement with Roy Hunt, head cameraman of the Frank Tuttle outfit, who pointed her out as "the prettiest girl of the whole batch!"

At that time no selection had been made or prizes awarded. Paramount's committee consisted of three men, Frank Tuttle, director of "The American Venus," Larry Hitt, art director, and Armand T. Nichols, director general of the pageant. Their task was to name from among sixty-four entries the girl who was to fill the title role in the picture, and win Miss Helene Sardeau's American Venus trophy. A separate committe of fifteen judges on the grandstand cast approving eyes on the beauty brigade and that afternoon dropped their ballots for the Miss America award. Debating in a hotel room three other judges finally agreed upon Miss Lamphier. That night on the Million Dollar pier thousands sat eagerly awaiting the result.

"It was a sight not easily forgoten," said Mr. Lasky, "and it pleased me beyond measure when Miss Olive Anne Alcorn, styled 'th world's most beautifully formed girl,' presented the American Venus trophy to the latter. There was real drama and suspense as the director of judges, Mr. Louis St. John, read out the names, and it was finally made clear that the same girl selected by our committee for the picture lead had won the grand award.

"This double selection of Fay Lamphier proves conclusively to me that the feminine fad of boyish bob and boyish figure is passing. For Miss Lamphier is a perfect example of girlish beauty such as men worshipped in the past. Her hair is long, golden and curly. She scales 138 pounds, a real American Venus, not so plump as the Venus de Milo, but with grace in every line. A year from now I am willing to confirm the prediction I now make—that Miss Lamphier will set a new beauty style and the vogue in attractive young women will be the wholesome, distinctively feminine type she represents.

On the screen she will appear as Miss Alabama, in competition with Miss Centreville, played by Esther Ralston. Olive Anne Alcorn portrays Miss Greentown and Louise Brooks of the Ziegfield Follies, fills the Miss Bayport role. Local competitions will be held in each city where a Paramount Exchange is located, for the award of a reproduction of the American Venus trophy, the winning girl in each case to be known as American Venus of Chicago, of Omaha, of Denver, and so on. Arrangements will be made for the holding of an American Venus Ball in all large cities, part of the proceeds to go to charity."

Ken Maynard stopped work at Lake Arrowhaed the other day long enough to take part in his marriage ceremony. The bride was Miss Leeper, a society girl of South Bend, Ind. Among those witnessing the ceremony were Stuart Holmes, Monty Banks, Paul Powell and Virginia Lee Corbin.

OPEN CLEVELAND HOUSE

ON Saturday evening, September 5, Warner Brothers opened another theatre, this time the Circle, at 102nd Street and Euclid Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. The house was formerly operated under management of Martin Printz. Some months ago it closed for extensive allerations, including the installation of a new balcony, raising the seating capacity to 2,000, and the redecorating and refurnishing of the theatre from back to front. The opening was attended by huge crowds and proved an unqualified success. It was personally supervised by George H. Dumond, head of the Warner theatre division. Mr. Printz continues as executive manager, with the general policy dictated by Warner Brothers through Mr. Dumond, who will take flying trips to Cleveland frequently.

Paramount participated in the Atlantic City Beauty Pageant this year, and will make a picture, "The American Venus," around it. At the left is seen Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president, on the famous boardwalk, and at the right, Fay Lamphier, Miss San Francisco, who won the pageant and the title role in "The American Venus," snapped with Ernest Torrence, made up as Father Neptune.

TO MEET MISS BRENT

NAT ROTHESTEIN, F. B. O. director of publicity and advertising, arranged a luncheon at the Biltmore on September 10th, whereby members of the New York dailies, fan magazines and trade papers were enabled to make the acquaintance of Evelyn Brent, well enough known on the screen hereabouts, but not so familiar in person.

Major Thomson, F. B. O. president, and Mr. Herbert B. Yates occupied posts of honor on either side of the star. There were no speeches, or business discussions, such things being utterly forbidden, as announced officially beforehand, and the promise was sacredly kept. However, it did leak out that Miss Brent will return to the Coast next week to begin work on a new crook drama, "Light Fingers," and Nat Rothestein wouldn't deny that she had signed a new contract to make pictures for the organization during the current year.

Among those present were: Louella O. Parsons, of the N. Y. American; Irene Thirer, of the Daily News; Regina Cannon, of the Evening Graphic; Ethel Rosemon, of Moving Pictures Stories; Dorothy C. Jordon, of the N. Y. World; Mary Jane Warren, of Motion Pictures Today; Clio Lor, of Women's Wear; Rose Pelswick, of the Evening Journal; Helen Klumph, of the Morning Telegraph; Dorothy Herzog, of the Daily Mirror; Major Thomson, of F. B. O.; Herbert J. Yates, Mr. Litell of Zit's; J. A. Milligan and George Bradley, of the Morning Telegraph; Arthur James, of Motion Pictures Today; Jay M. Schreck; John Spargo, of the Exhibitors Herald; M. W. Liebler, of the Evening Post; Kelcey Allen, of Women's Wear; John A. Archer, Tom Waller, C. Schottenfels, of Moving Picture World; George Gerhard, of the Evening World; Pete Milne, of the Trade Review; Chester J. Smith, of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS; Larry Reid and W. Adolphe Roberts, of the Brewster Publications; Maurice ("Red") Kann, of Film Daily; Julius Cohen, of Staats-Zeitung; Lee Marcus, Colvin W. Brown, Edna Williams, Al Boasberg, D. A. Poucher.

PEREZ HERE; SIMMONS EN ROUTE

PAUL E. PEREZ, for the past year director of advertising, publicity and exploitation for European in London, returned to the United States last week and is engaged at the Home Office of Universal, where he was an assistant to Paul Gulick before his departure for foreign shores.

While in Great Britain, Paul distinguished himself for his exploitation and advertising campaigns, particularly that which he put over in England, Scotland and Wales for "The Hunchback". An arrangement which he made with the Woolworth stores resulted in the first nation-wide tie-up in Great Britain.

He made himself widely popular in the trade, and with Horace Judge was active in the formation of the British Motion Picture Advertisers association, known there as the "Bumpas". A luncheon was given him on his departure, at which he was presented with a silver-headed stick. The trade press also paid high tribute to his ability and personal qualities.

Also, Michael L. Simmons, for the past six months handling exploitation in association with Perez for European, sailed this week on the Mauretania and will arrive in New York any day, after serving for a time as acting director of exploitation. He has organized a service which will continue to function along American lines

Simmons' association with European was a sequel to six months of travel through Italy, Austria, Germany and France, where he studied local conditions and showmanship. He writes that he plans an independent press and publicity service for exhibitors on his return.

SAM GOLDWYN'S FIND

LOIS MORAN, the sixteen year old girl, who fills the role of Laurel in "Stella Dallas," the United Artists release sponsored by Samuel Goldwyn, was discovered and brought into screen prominence by the latter while visiting Paris last winter. On the stage she made a successful appearance in Marc Connelly's "The Wisdom Tooth," at Baltimore and Atlantic City, and will play the leading feminine role in that production on Broadway this Fall. Which doesn't mean that she will discard the movies, for after the play has finished its New York run, she will return to the Goldwyn fold.

Norma Shearer, who recently completed work in "The Tower of Lies" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, snapped in a bit of snappy action on the tennis court.

Henry B. Walthall, the Little Colonel, who is now contributing one of his inimitable characterizations to "The Plastic Age," a Preferred Picture.

Fannie Hurst, noted author, who won Liberty's $50,000 contest with "The Moving Finger," which she has helped adapt at the Paramount West Coast studio.

Paramount-Balaban and Katz Deal Reported Closed

F. P.-L. To Create Separate Theatre Corporation?

THE long-expected deal between Famous Players Lasky and Balaban & Katz was this week reported practically closed. At the same time, it became known that the Famous Players theatre activities would be entirely separated, according to present plans, from the parent company. This, it appears, will happen whether the B. & K. deal is consummated or not.

Adolph Zukor

The chances that the deal will fall through are considered very slim. Official announcement will no doubt be made shortly. Meanwhile, no statement could be obtained from the principals.

The merger with B. & K.—if "merger" is the word—means that the vast theatre holdings of that concern will come into the Paramount fold, under a joint management plan. That is to say, the separate corporation will be formed, according to the present outlook, and Sam Katz will become the directing head of all the Famous Players and Balaban & Katz houses, in association with Harold B. Franklin, present head of the Paramount theatre department.

Sam Katz

The formation of the separate Famous Players theatre corporation, in itself an unprecedented step by a film producer-distributor was rumored months ago; and it was believed then that its actual consummation hinged upon the signing of the papers with Balaban & Katz.

At the same time, it was strongly evident then that the creation of this corporation was inevitable sooner or later, in the natural course of circumstances.

The future theatre operations of Famous Players, then, would be conducted under a separate corporate identity, but the stock of the company would be owned outright by Paramount, if present indications are correct. This would mean, no doubt, that the theatre activities would be run from a different headquarters entirely separate from the Paramount executive offices.

Indications that the Famous Players B. &. K. deal was nearing the signature mark were contained in the following dispatch from Chicago to The Wall Street Journal:

"Barney Balaban, vice-president of Balaban & Katz, says prospects for closing a transaction with Famous Players-Lasky are bright. Mr. Balaban was in New York last week and returned for consultation with other principals in the company. He is leaving for New York again."

Sam Katz was in New York this week and could not be reached for a statement. Neither was any comment available at Paramount.

The virtual merger of Balaban & Katz with the Famous Players theatres would give the latter upwards of six hundred houses, by far the greater portion of which are strategic exhibition points, and would make it by all odds the giant corporation of the industry.

It will be recalled that, according to a statement made by Emil Shauer, head of the Paramount foreign department several months ago, and never denied, Famous Players owned or controlled at that time 358 theatres in America. The latest figures on the B. & K. holdings place their total at 100, but this does not include theatres under construction.

Since the statement by Mr. Shauer, Famous Players has acquired a number of theatres. It is of course well known that, included in the Balaban & Katz chain, are the important Kunsky and A. H. Blank circuits; and there is a further ramification in the fact that First National, in which Mr. Katz is a dominant figure, recently brought the West Coast Theatres, Inc., comprising over 100 houses, under its virtual control as a corporation.

In the opinion of close observers, these latest developments may be taken to mean that Famous Players is gradually bringing about the creation of a theatre chain, which will not only be the biggest numerically, but will also have far-reaching effects on the distribution problem, an angle which is sometimes overlooked when theatre acquisitions are discussed.

In other words, the acquisition of a great number of theatres would reduce both the cost and the problem of distribution.

It is a safe observation that the B. & K. deal and the creation of the separate theatre concern, considered together, will write new history in the industry. What the ultimate result will be, no one can foretell.

Reports were widely current, but could not be confirmed, that Sam Katz, as associate chief of the new theatre corporation, would receive a salary of $100,000 annually, besides other financial considerations.

Earl Crabb to Manage New Paramount Boston House

Earl L. Crabb, for nineteen months district manager for Southern Enterprises of Texas, left Dallas, his headquarters, September 7 for Boston where he will become managing director of the New Paramount house which will possibly be named The Plymouth. John J. Friedl, for nineteen months, managing director of the Palace Theatre in Dallas has been named by Harold Franklin to succeed Mr. Crabb as Texas district manager for Southern Enterprises. His successor as managing director of the Palace has not been named. Mr. Friedl is one of the youngest district managers with Famous Players being but 27 years old. He joined Paramount six years ago as an exploiteer on Claud Saunders' staff.

Pearl Keating is Signed as Scenario Chief

Metropolitan Pictures, Inc., has engaged Pearl Keating to head its eastern scenario department. She will make her headquarters in New York at the home office of Producers Distributing Corporation. In addition to her work for Metropolitan she will purchase material for the Christie Comedies, under personal arrangements made by Charles Christie.

Miss Keating was for several years head of Warner Brothers scenario department. She has had wide experience in both the theatrical and motion picture fileds.

Beaudry Made Secretary of Arrow

Louis L. Beaudry was elected secretary of Arrow Pictures Corporation at a meeting of the board of directors held on Wednesday, September 9th, at which W. E. Shallenberger, president of the company presided.

Seider Discusses New Form Contract

Clarifies Certain Points Raised by Ohio Exhibitor in Letter to Motion Picture News

JOSEPH M. SEIDER, chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Contract and Arbitration Committee, in an exclusive statement to MOTION PICTURE NEWS this week clarified certain points in his proposed new contract. This was done in response to a letter written to the NEWS by G. M. Bertling, of the Favorite Theatre, Piqua, Ohio, which Mr. Seider was asked to comment upon. Mr. Bertling's letter follows:

"I was reading over your News of Sept. 12th and also was reading over Mr. Seiders new form of Contract. As an exhibitor I wish to say that Mr. Seider surely was making out the contract to suit the Distributor. I think now is about the time that the Exhibitor should be given a little thought on this contract matter. Where has the Exhibitor got a half a chance on his contract or the present contract? What does the Exhibitor have to do when he buys pictures? When a salesman comes to him and tries to sell him pictures he has to buy the whole product or nothing. If there are a half dozen pictures that is O. K. for his house and there are half a dozen that is not, what does the Exhibitor get. He either buys them all or he don't get any. What has become of the contract that has the Cancelation clause in it? Why it was put on the shelf because it did not suit the Distributor.

"There isn't a contract in force now that gives the Exhibitor a fair chance, and I don't think that there is anyone that can show me a contract that does. What are the Film Boards for? Just to suit a few of the Distributors. Arbitration boards, what do they do for the Exhibitor? Nothing. I think that the M. P. T. O. A. should think of the Exhibitor and give him a chance to have a little to say as to how he should buy his service and also stop this BLOCK BOOKING. How many exchanges can you do business with if you don't buy the whole product? There isn't any. I do business with about ten or twelve exchanges and there isn't any that you can get along with unless you buy all of their product.

"The M. P. T. O. A. may mean alright but the way I get their new form of contract is not suiting me and a lot of other exhibitors. I think that the time has come when the Exhibitor should have a little to say and we all know that we are paying enough for our service that we ought to be able to have a little to say pretty soon.

"I also noted where Mr. Seider has it fixed where the Exhibitor is to pay for the shipment both ways of film. Does that look like the Exhibitor is getting anything? I think that it is time for us to get busy and have a contract where we can buy as many pictures as we want to without buying the exchange out and also the exchange to pay one way on the shipment and also give us the Cancelation Clause. If we buy ten pictures and lose money on them we haven't got a chance. I may be wrong on the way I am taking Mr. Seider's new form of contract, but it don't look good to me. I may not just understand the contract, but if you can show me where the EXHIBITOR has a chance in it, why I am going to be the first Exhibitor to O. K. Mr. Seider's contract."

Mr. Seider's comment follows:

"Mr. G. M. Bertling, Manager, Favorite Theatre, Piqua, Ohio, is correct when he says that he may not just understand our proposed contract. Otherwise, there could not be any explanation for his assumption that it has been written solely from the viewpoint of the Distributor.

"It is an absolutely mutually fair contract. Practically all the old clauses that have been so objectionable to the theatre owners have been eliminated. Provisions have been added to clarify the rights of the parties under the contract and to eliminate most of the difficulties the theatre owner has encountered under the old contract and, yet, the new contract is shorter and in plain language.

"Many theatre owners are complaining against the 'block booking sales policy' used by many distributors. However, the new contract is not a medium through which this condition can be remedied. In the territories where the distributors meet sales resistance, they sell on an individual picture basis.

"The cancellation clause, referred to by Mr. Bertling, was an optional clause in the old contract and the clause, suggested for this contract, was as follows:

"'If this contract designates certain photoplays by title, it shall be non-cancellable as to such photoplays. If it embraces a series of photoplays, not designated by title, it may be cancelled, as to such series by either party after two photoplays of such series have been played and paid for, by notice in writing to the other party within ten days after playing the second of said photoplays, such cancellation to take effect after ——— additional photoplays shall have been played and paid for."

"The Independent Motion Picture Association's Contract Committee objected to this clause being a part of the contract and requested that it be made an optional clause and that its incorporation in the contract should be left to negotiations between the parties at the time the contract is signed.

"That this clause was not written on our proposed draft of the contract, is not the fault of the Distributors, but entirely my fault in having overlooked its incorporation in the contract.

"We have not fixed it where the Exhibitor is to pay for the shipment of film both ways. It is a condition in the old contract, the practice has been in effect for the past eight years and no objections to it have been made to us.

"In answer to Mr. Bertling's statement, 'If we buy ten pictures and lose money in them, we haven't got a chance,' we can only say that if the money is lost through no fault of the exhibitor and through the fault of the distributor or through the misrepresentations of the distributor, then the exhibitor has a chance, because there is a definite provision made in the proposed contract giving the right to the arbitration board to determine the matter and the power to award a refund or damages to the exhibitor.

"Mr. Bertling is opposed to the present arbitration system and Film Boards of Trade. We also are opposed to the present arbitration system and the Film Boards of Trade and their methods. In our contract we have offered a solution to this vexatious problem."

Missouri Exhibitors War on Sunday Ordinances

WITH the arrival of fall it appears that Missouri exhibitors are to be presented a new series of annual "problems" to work. O. W. McCutcheon, Sikseton, Mo., exhibitor who was arrested last week for operating his theatre on Sunday, is out on bond. Mr. McCutcheon has appealed the case and will test the validity of the law, as there is no state Sunday closing law.

Then there is the battle in Moberly, Mo., a town of 25,000, which comes to a decision in the next few days, the mayor having vetoed an ordinance permitting Sunday shows. William Gotter of the Fourth Street theatre, leader in the fight against a group of ministers, feels confident the exhibitors will win out. However, the big issue to be settled, as far as Sunday shows are concerned, is whether or not city ordinance can prohibit Sunday shows when the statutes of the state do not. The Sikseton case may throw a light upon this.

$10,000 Fire Destroys Colorado House

The Rialto Theatre, Delta, Colorado, was almost completely destroyed by fire Saturday night, September 5th. The extent of the damage will reach an approximate total of $10,000. The cause of the fire is unknown although it occurred immediately after the last show. About ten people were in the house at the time. All safely retired from the building.

Part of the estimated damage resulted from the destruction of a print of "The Ten Commandments" and several reels and short subjects which were in the booth at the time the fire started. The Rialto Theatre was a 500 seat house, the largest and best theatre in Delta. The theatre is one of a chain owned and operated by Western Enterprises. Rick Ricketson, one of the managers of the company, announced plans have been completed for a new 1,100 seat theatre to replace the Rialto, to be the finest on the Western Slope.

Ohio Exhibitor Succumbs to Appendicitis

George Moore, for the past twelve years an exhibitor of Bellevue and Bucyrus, Ohio, passed away suddenly last week, a victim of peritonitis following appendicitis. Moore was well and favorably known by exhibitors and exchangemen around the Cleveland territory. He was on the executive board of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio. His wife and two children survive him. Funeral services were held at Bellevue last Saturday.

Typical German Efficiency Seen in Studio Organization

No. 8: Equipment and Methods of Highest Precision

By L. C. MOEN

PERHAPS nothing in Europe is more interesting to the American visitor than the German film studios. Most of the theatres must suffer by comparison with our best, distribution is a comparatively simple matter—but in the application of sensible system and efficiency to production routine, the Germans need take second rank to no one.

It is not so much in outward appearance that the difference is noticeable. To the casual eye, a studio is a studio, and save for the glass roofs still present abroad, the external face of things is not much different, and is steadily growing less so.

It is rather in the administration of affairs and the handling of details that a distinct national flavor appears. Organization is the keynote of German production, and there is little glorification of the individual. Entertainment value aside, technical excellence has probably reached its highest point in the Berlin ateliers. Throughout Europe, the Germans are looked to for the salvation of Art—with a capital A—in picture making, but I did not find that the Germans themselves favored this view especially. They feel, I believe, that this opinion is rather prejudicial to their commercial success. As a matter of fact, the period that produced "Dr. Caligari," "The Golem," and the like, is at an end, and "box-office values" are as great a concern today in Berlin as in Hollywood. Inevitably, however, their pictures will always be different. The national temperament, the type of men engaged in the work, the taste of the public which must be pleased, insure a certain originality and artistry not present in the production of any other country, save perhaps Sweden.

The studio at Neubabelsberg may be taken as typical. Babelsberg is a suburb of Berlin, and can be reached by train or automobile about as easily as Long Island from New York City. Formerly the property of the Decla-Bioscop, it passed into the hands of the Ufa when the companies merged. The Ufa studio at Templehof was retained, however, and there many of the interiors are shot. Templehof is another suburb, not far away.

The Babelsberg plant can be best compared to Universal City, since it is in actuality a film city, complete in every detail. Getting past the gate (fully as difficult as in an American studio), you come upon the "main street" of the Babelsberg studios. Long rows of buildings line both sides of this street. At the left is the pleasant studio canteen, where food and drink may be had by the studio force, from the highest to the lowest—but not all in the same dining room! The class system holds in picture making as elsewhere in Europe.

At the right is the administration building, with offices for the directors and their aides, together with cutting and projection rooms for each. Dressing rooms for the principals are also here. All the dressing rooms I saw, even those for the Komparserie (or extras), were clean and comfortable in the extreme.

Passing on down the street, you see in turn, the fire station, with several men on constant duty, a fully equipped hospital, a splendid power station which is being enlarged, large storage sheds for props and material, the "mud room" where plaster work is done, the carpenter shops, machine shops, and the like.

In one of these sheds I had the pleasure of inspecting the dragon which plays so important a part in "Siegfried." Large it was, but much simpler than might have been expected. No machinery in it save a few automobile springs to lend motion to the head.

Miniature Methods

In one of the buildings I saw a group of miniatures which deserve a word of mention. Instead of the "glass shots" which we are now using frequently, the Germans are adhering to solidly built miniatures, constructed with amazing ingenuity by a man who, a few years ago, was a day laborer about the studio.

I saw, for instance, the Hotel Atlantic setting for "Der Letzte Mann" (here "The Last Laugh"). This exterior was built up to a height of one story. Here we would have painted the upper stories on glass, but the Germans built them solidly in miniature, and suspended this near the camera.

Another thing which is being done with the greatest of engineering skill is the use of miniature sets in the foreground, in combination with full size settings. I saw, for example, a miniature lake, perhaps ten feet across, with tiny natural surroundings and little boats. Far beyond this was a castle, built full size. The miniature setting, being so much nearer the camera, comes up to the same scale as the enormous castle. Little "toy" automobiles and trains run directly before the camera appear in combination with living actors and full sized sets. The scientific and engineering skill of the Germans shows up to particular advantage in this sort of thing. Another development is what they call "perspectivic" construction, in which an intentional distortion of perspective is introduced, giving effect of enormous space and size within a limited area.

Some remarkable cameras have been developed for this special trick work, including one that will do double-exposure and even triple-exposure effects at one operation. In photographing a ghost or vision scene, for instance, it is not necessary to run the film through the camera twice, with elaborate timing methods. It can all be done at one time, the ghost being at one side of the camera and the scene in front. With this camera, through its ingenious arrangement of prisms and its utilization of both faces of the negative film at once, one might conceivably shoot a group of actors on a miniature set one-tenth their size, with a ghost appearing in their midst—all at one operation! The possibilities, needless to say, are endless.

German Set Building

Especially interesting, however, is the construction of exterior sets on the lot. Their plans, to begin with, are somewhat more detailed than ours usually are, for the reason that the script is built more carefully in advance. The architects are not forced to hurriedly lay out the sets at the last moment, but rather develop them concurrently with the progress of the continuity. These plans, in fact, form a part of the working script.

Because of the high cost of lumber in central Europe, oa system of fabricated assembly is used, not unlike the "Mecanno" toy building sets for children here. Strips of lumber are cut to standard lengths, with bolt holes bored at a uniform distance apart. The architects' drawing specify these lengths, and the strips are simply bolted together to form the desired framework.

An unusual feature is the fact that all of these buildings are constructed on "stilts," some distance off the ground. Earth is then filled in under the building, which can be sodded with grass, or landscape gardened in any fashion desired. If trees are needed, they are set in. This is naturally more flexible than if the set were built on flat ground.

Over the assembled framework is fastened a layer of barcuta—a material which comes in rolls, consisting of narrow, lath-like strips, wired together—which can be shaped to fit anything. This takes plaster splendidly, and once the barcuta is on, the plasters go to work and finish the building. This is then painted, and it is worthy of mention

Labor Difficulties Continue

Many Cities Are Waging Hot Contests With Both Sides Standing Firm

LABOR troubles that continue to exist in a number of cities give promise of developing into hotly contested affairs, though, for the most part the exhibitors seem to be gaining the upper hand. A number of threatened strikes have been averted during the past week.

Labor matters have been satisfactorily adjusted at Ottawa, Ontario, with the following result: The members of the Projection Machine Operators Union obtained a small increase in pay over last year while the musicians continue as before without change in wages. In theatres where stage crews are employed a slight increase was also granted to the stage hands.

The strike of musicians, stage hands and operators is still in force in Niagara Falls, N. Y., with indications pointing to a long drawn out affair and eventual open shop condition. In Syracuse the motion picture operators have asked for a wage boost, but it is reported that exhibitors are prepared to "grind their own," if necessary rather than grant the requests.

Carl A. Porter, president of the Managers Association in Salt Lake City, reports that the recent demands of the operators for an increase in wages, was flatly refused at the meeting of this organization last week.

Managers of the Pantages, Paramount Empress, Victory, Gem, Kinema, American, Star. Cozy and Ises theatres were represented at the meeting.

The controversy between the Musicians' Union and the Allied Amusement Industries in San Francisco is at an end. Members of the union met in special session and voted to repeal their demands for a six months contract. The subject of wages and hours is already well on the way to settlement, it was stated.

No change has taken place in the situation in Des Moines, since the walkout of union musicians and stage men from the A. H. Blank theatres, the Capitol, Des Moines, Strand, Rialto, Garden, Palace and Majestic, on Wednesday Sept. 9.

A. H. Blank offices are still without official notice of the walkout of union musicians.

The Blank theatres are continuing to operate without orchestras or organists but it was intimated that unless an early settlement is reached arrangements will be made to furnish some type of music to accompany the picture presentations.

Mr. Blank, in New York on business for First National, sent word to Des Moines that the next move must be on the part of the union.

Blank left Des Moines after an agreement with the officers of the musicians association that the wage scale controversy would be arbitrated after five days and that the musicians would continue to work until the arbitration decision was handed down.

Despite the fact that officials of the musicians' association had publicly announced they were in favor of arbitration, a majority of the members voted at a meeting Tuesday afternoon to reject Blank's arbitration proposal and failed to report for duty.

Many of the operators are not in favor of striking for higher wages but are satisfied with the present wage scale.

Allvine A.M.P.A. President

Advertising Organization Selects Officers for the Coming Year

GLENDON ALLVINE was elected president of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., at the annual election of officers of the organization, held Thursday, September 10, at the Hofbrau Haus on Broadway.

Walter F. Eberhardt was elected vice president, S. Charles Einfeld treasurer and A. S. Rittenburg, secretary. The following were elected to serve on the board of directors with the officers: Charles Barrell, E. O. Brooks, Gordon White, Charles P. Cohen and A. L. Selig.

For the auditing commitee: Sam Palmer, Chairman, H. C. Bate and Hal Howe.

For Managing Editor the Bulletin: W. E. Mulligan.

For Business Manager the Bulletin: Ed. McNamee.

For trustees of Treasurer's Fund: Paul Gulick, three years; Victor Shapiro, two years; P. A. Parsons, one year.

For Councillor of the Chamber of Commerce: John C. Flinn.

E. O. Brooks was elected to serve on the finance committee with the president, secretary and Charles Burrell, the senior member of the Board of Directors.

A. M. Botsford, the retiring president, who presided in his best and wittiest style, made a very snappy report of "fifty-two weeks of progress." He read a communication from his successor, Glendon Allvine, who during the past year served in the capacity of treasurer.

The treasurer's report covering a year's custody of the funds of the A. M. P. A. showed the resources on hand to be the greatest in the history of the organization.

Another important bit of business transacted was the passing of a motion which calls for a future A. M. P. A. affair along the lines of functions given in the past by the W. A. M. P. A. S. with a view to raising funds to establish a permanent home for the A. M. P. A. This motion, introduced by Mr. Kopstein, was carried unanimously.

Charles Barrell, retiring vice president, made a brief presentation speech which carried with it the gift of a handsome cowbell which he insisted on calling a bull bell to be delivered to the incoming president, who in turn must hand it down to his successor and so on ad infinitum. On motion of P. A. Parsons, the outgoing president was tendered a vote of thanks for his efficient administration and "for the best speech of the year."

Typical German Efficiency Seen in Film Studies

that the effects of age and antiquity that are obtained when desired are little short of uncanny.

Wigs De Luxe

Another example of the infinite care which goes into picture making at Babelsberg is to be found in the wig-making department. This has charge of wigs, hair-dressing and make-up. Here wigs are being made in color—lavender, orange, green, and what not—that give lovely, soft photographic greys on the screen.

Particularly typical of the care employed, however, is the fact that this department has within its own four walls a camera, hard and soft lights, projection machine and screen, so that screen tests can be made and projected of every wig and every make-up. German players do not make themselves up, as here, but it is all done by this department. Even a star has nothing to say about his or her make-up; it must be what the cameraman and the producer decree.

Many other features might be described, but these will serve to give some idea of the technical marvels of Babelsberg. A zoo is being built up. Tracks and a tiny, narrow-gauge railway connect the various parts of the lot, drawn by a tractor. Everything that is needed is manufactured on the spot. Babelsberg is entirely self-contained; it depends on the outside world for nothing.

The absence of Cooper-Hewitts in great numbers is notireable. This is what results in the relatively hard, contrasty lighting of European pictures. At the same time an interesting new type of mercury lamp has been developed which can be held in the hand and placed wherever desired for the lighting of close-ups, and the like.

Despite the work and study which have gone into the development of methods and machines at Babelsberg, nothing is concealed from the visitor. The attitude taken is that when the executives visit American studios, they are shown everything, and reap many ideas which they can utilize—so that it is no more than fair that America should be given full opportunity to use any of the German technical developments which may be of value.

United Artists Joins All Film Boards of Trade

MANAGERS of all United Artists branch offices which are not now members of Film Boards of Trade in their territories have been instructed by the home office of the corporation to immediately apply for membership in the Boards.

Heretofore United Artists held membership in Film Boards in Boston, Butte, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dallas, Denver, Des Moines, Detroit, Kensas City, Minneapolis, New Haven, Omaha, Portland, Salt Lake City, Seattle, St. Louis and Washington.

The decision of officials of the corporation to become 100 per cent members of the Film Boards will bring affiliations of the company's Atlanta, Buffalo, Chicago, Los Angeles, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and San Francisco offices, with the Boards in those cities.

First National Signs Harry Langdon

Screen Comedian Affixes His Signature to Contract That Will Cover a Long Period of Years

HARRY LANGDON, famous screen comedian, for whose services the biggest companies in the film world have been bidding vigorously for months, has affixed his signature to a contract with First National Pictures, Inc.

While definite figures are not mentioned it is understood to be the biggest individual contract of the year, insuring an almost fabulous income for the star. First National, which launched Charlie Chaplin on his first great screen successes a number of years ago, plans, according to Richard A. Rowland, general manager to give Langdon opportunity to develop as the new Comedy King of the Movies.

With the signing of Langdon all rumors of contractional relationship with various film corporations which have been buzzing about the picture world are set at ease and from now on the comedian will sail under the First National banner.

John E. McCormick, general manager of production for First National on the West Coast, represented his organization in the transaction in Hollywood after a series of conferences between William H. Jenner, general business manager, and Jerry Geisler, attorney, representing Harry Langdon, covering many months.

Harry Langdon, who has been signed to a starring contract by First National.

Sol Lesser, vice president of First National, signed on behalf of that organization, Attorney Geisler of Woolwine and Geisler, represented Langdon and Blaire Evans, of Cruickshank, Brooks and Evans, represented the film company's interests.

The contract covering a period of years for full efature length comedies which will be made under the personal supervision of Langdon. The first series consists of four pictures and it is estimated they will consume sixteen months in the making.

Langdon has been sought after by practically every producing and distributing organization in the industry. Rumors were to the effect he had signed with this or that company, but nothing definite was settled until Sept. 16 when the principals, together with attorneys and managers, met in Hollywood and once and for all closed the subject with the signing of the agreements.

According to Jenner, Langdon expects to start on his first production for First National about November 15th, his contract with Mack Sennett expiring early in November. His first picture will be ready for release by the First National organization on or about April 15th, 1926.

Court Sustains Film Board Demurrer

Cleveland Body and Several Exchanges Upheld in Answer to Conspiracy in Restraint of Trade Charge

FEDERAL Judge E. C. Westenhaver of the Northern District of Ohio of the Eastern Division last week sustained the demurrer filed by Squires, Sanders and Dempsey, representing the Film Board of Trade of Cleveland, Pathe Film Exchange, Ohio Educational Exchange, Gold Seal Productions and Progress Pictures Company in answer to the petition of John Romwebber of the State Theatre, Akron, charging the Film Board of Trade of Cleveland and the several exchanges named, with conspiracy in restraint of trade.

Romwebber filed his petition in the Federal Court of the Cleveland district. Squires, Sanders and Dempsey, representing the defendants, based their demurrer on the ground that Romwebber's petition failed to establish a claim of recognition by the Federal Court. Judge Westenhaver simply endorsed the demurrer.

The demurrer was based first on the ground of failure to establish a diversity of citizenship between the plaintiff and the defendant. Diversity of citizenship is one of the requirements of a Federal Court action. Because the plaintiff is a citizen of Akron, and because the Film Board of Trade of Cleveland and the exchanges named in the Romwebber petition are corporations duly organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the state of Ohio, the petition failed to come under the jurisdiction of Federal Court of the Northern District of Ohio, the ruling held.

The second point of the demurrer which was sustained by Judge Westenhaver stated that, by the allegations of the plaintiff's petition, it is not shown that a Federal question is involved. The demurrer contended that action cannot be brought under the combination of conspiracy provision of the Sherman Law for the reason that the allegations of the petition are not sufficient to establish conspiracy.

The attorneys for the defendants went on, in their demurrer, to say that if the allegations of the plaintiff are true, he may have cause of action in the proper forum, but, for the reasons stated, the petition does not state a cause of action on the ground of diversity of citizenship, and his allegations are so indefinite that they do not bring him under the condition which conferred jurisdiction upon the Federal Court.

The rule of the law which was invoked in this demurrer is found in a number of cases of the Supreme Court of the United States and other Federal Courts, which is stated in the case of The Western Union Telegraph Company, vs. Ann Arbor Railroad Company which says:

"When a suit does not really and substantially involve a dispute or controversy as to the effect or construction of the Constitution or Laws of the United States upon the determination of which the result depends, it is not a suit under the Constitution and Laws, and it must appear on the records by a statement in legal and logical form, such as is required in good pleading, that the suit is one which does not really and substantially involve dispute or controversy as to the right which depends on the construction of the constitution or some law or treaty of the United States before jurisdiction can be maintained on this ground."

The suit of Romwebber against the Film Board of Trade of Cleveland and the exchanges named in the petition, was the first of a series of similar suits which were to follow as a protest against the method of operation of the Cleveland Board of Arbitration. Romwebber charged that, through conspiracy between the exchanges and the Film Board of Trade he was deprived of film service and that his business as an exhibitor was ruined.

Romwebber will file another petition immediately in which he will seek to meet the requirements for Federal recognition.

Errol to Start New Film Next Month

Leon Errol's second feature for First National will be started in production about October 1st at the studios in New York. The comedian is now working in the Sam Rork production "Clothes Make the Pirate," from Holman Day's novel of that title. His next work will be "The Lunatic at Large Again," an adaptation from the novel by J. Storer Clouston.

Vancouver Wins Summer Drive

First National Sales Contest Victors Announced; Atlanta in Second Place

THE Vancouver Branch is the winner of First National's "Summer Drive," a sales contest for play dates to mature between May 31st and August 29th. Atlanta was in second place at the close of the drive, which First National announces raised the national percentage of summer business for 1925 up to 115.50, taking 100 per cent for the volume of business for the summer months of 1924.

The Vancouver branch, W. H. Mitchell, manager, won first place with 160.88 per cent.; Atlanta, C. R. Beacham, manager, second with 153.01 per cent.; Philadelphia captured third place with 148.21 per cent. W. J. Heenan is manager of the Philadelphia branch.

The summer drive was instituted by E. A. Eschmann of First National last March when he appealed to his field force for a performance during the summer of 1925 that would eclipse the big record of summer business done during 1924.

The prizes awarded by First National's distribution department to the winners of the summer drive follows.

Vancouver—First Prize. Manager W. H. Mitchell, a trip to Hollywood with all expenses paid; Joseph Plottel, salesman; Albert Brooks, shipper, W. Etris, booker; Mary Macauley, biller; Miss M. E. Middleton, stenographer; J. S. Mulhall, cashier, and Mrs. L. L. Patterson, inspector, each one week's salary.

Atlanta—Second Prize. Manager C. R. Beacham, a platinum watch; salesman George C. Almon, Lewis W. Carter, P. A. Strachan and James M. Young their choice of cuff links or a cigarette case.

Philadelphia—Third Prize. Manager W. J. Heenan, a gold watch; Salesmen P. F. Duffy, A. F. Hickox, F. J. Leonard, F. A. Loftus, W. G. Mansell and W. H. Schwalbe their choice of cuff links or cigarette case.

Wyoming Exhibitors Organize

State Theatre Owners and Managers Association Formed at Casper Meeting

AT a meeting held last week in Casper, the Wyoming exhibitors formed a state oranization, which is to be known as the Wyoming Theatre Owners and Managers Association. It is probable that the new orgnization will affiliate with the M.P.T.O.A. later.

The meeting at which the organization was formed was attended by eighteen exhibitors of the State, who met in a two-day convention which culminated with the election of officers to serve for the coming year and various committees.

James Lynch, of Laramie, was elected president with John Bangs of Rawlins, vice-president and M. H. Todd, of Casper, secretary and treasurer. The executive board and trustees are composed of the following: Thomas Berta, Rock Springs, Fred Besold, Sheridan, Earl Nye, Cheyenne; E. J. Schulte, Casper; Thomas Love, Parco, and John Bangs, Rawlins.

The Casper meeting was attended by the following:

Thomas Berta, Rialto theatre, Rock Springs; Mrs. W. R. Logan, Rex, Basin; J. S. Ward, Princess, Douglas; Mrs. M. M. Young, Bison, Buffalo; John Bangs, Strand, Rawlins; P. J. Johnson, Strand, Rawlins; Mrs. LeMote, Acme, Riverton; Geo. Stewart, Bishop-Cass Co., Casper; M. H. Todd, Rialto, Casper; E. J. Schulte, Rialto, Casper; Fred Bezold, Lotus, Sheridan; Earl Nye, Princess and Atlas, Cheyenne; O. P. Fish, Grand, Lander; Florence Ward, Midwest, Midwest; Esther Ward, Edgerton, Edgerton; Chas. Reeder, Castle Creek, New Lavoye; James Lynch, Empress, Laramie; John Lynch, America, Laramie; Mr. Lee, Empress, Glenrock.

A. S. Kane To Produce Series

Pictures to Be Released by Universal; Deal Calls for Group of Six Features

ARTHUR S. KANE, well known in the industry as a production and distribution executive, will re-enter the production field as a contributor to the Universal release schedule, according to a report this week from the Coast, where Mr. Kane has been located for some months as a contact executive for the Universal company

Complete arrangements regarding Mr. Kane's production activities have not been worked out as yet, but a tentative deal has been concluded with Universal. It is probable that the pictures may be filmed at Universal City, though this has not been decided upon as yet. However, it is understood that Mr. Kane's production headquarters will be established on the Coast.

There will be about six pictures in the first group he will make for the Universal program.

Kane became associated with Universal several months ago to act as contact executive between the production and sales departments of the company. His most recent association before joining Universal was with Associated Exhibitors.

Zabin Transferred to Ad Department of Famous

James Barton Zabin, for the past two years assistant to Glendon Allvine at Famous Players, has been transferred to the theatre advertising department of that company. Zabin will assist Lem Stewart and Bill Johnson in the advertising work of the theatre division of Famous.

In and Out of Town

J. G. BACHMANN, general manager of distribution for Schulberg Productions, has returned from the West Coast after a series of conferences with Mr. Schulberg.

ARTHUR BECK is here from Los Angeles to confer with Dr. W. E. Shallenberger of Arrow.

A CARLOS has gone to the Coast to confer with Richard Talmadge and to plan future productions.

J. I. SCHNITZER, vice-president of F. B. O., has arrived at the Coast studios for his second protracted visit of the year.

HARRY BRAND is returning to Los Angeles to resume his post as director of studio publicity for Joseph M. Schenck.

E. H. GOLDSTEIN, treasurer of Universal, has gone to the Coast.

ROBERT LEIBER, President of First National, and Mrs. Lieber, Richard A. Rowland, First National general manager, and Mrs. Roland and M. L. Finkelstein, of Minneapolis, sailed on the Deutschland this week for a tour of the Continent.

W. J. MORGAN sales manager of Producers Distributing Corporation started an extensive sales tour this week, with an itinerary that embraces a visit to all of the company's branches except those in the far west.

Find No Violation by the Scenic Artists' Union

No evidence of violation of the Federal laws by The Scenic Artists, an organization composed of designers and creators of scenes and settings for theatrical productions who are members of a union holding a charter under the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers of America, has been developed by an investigation undertaken by agents of the Department of Justice, and the matter has been closed.

Representations were made to the department that the organization was violating the law in various ways, but investigation disclosed only the maintenance of a credit bureau by the union, such as was upheld recently by the Federal courts in the case of other organizations. No element of interstate commerce was found, and the department could not determine that the union's activities had any effect in restraining interstate commerce.

Lon Ramsdell Joins "U" Publicity Department

Lon Ramsdell, veteran publicity and exploitation man, has joined the Universal exploitation and publicity department. Ramsdell will exploit Universal pictures in the Pittsburgh territory, succeeding Jack Hays, who has resigned.

Ramsdell has had a wide experience in publicity work and picture theatre management, serving as manager for Loews' Victoria in New York for a year; B. F. Keith's Hippodrome in Baltimore for two years, and the Ramsdell Opera House in Frederick, Md. He has been associated with D. W. Griffith, First National and Warner Bros. in publicity work.

Urges Special Session to Act on Connecticut Tax

Governor May Issue Call; Feeling Against Bill Grows

WITH a growing public sentiment hostile to the tax to back them in their attack on the Durant Bill, exhibitors of Connecticut are pinning their faith on a special session of the Legislature, which Governor Trumbull has been urged to call, to afford them early relief from the measure which places a state impost of $10 per reel on motion picture film for exhibition there.

As the theatre situation in Connecticut becomes more chaotic in consequence of the removal of exchanges from New Haven and a cessation of booking contracts for the future, the feeling within the state against the tax bill grows apace and the motion picture men see signs of encouragement for their move to have a special session of the lawmakers assemble to hear the industry's case against the Durant Bill.

The move for a special session gained impetus when the M. P. T. O. sent a formal petition to the Governor requesting him to take this action. At a meeting of the state exhibitors' body to discuss ways and means to meet the present situation it was decided in favor of a special session of the Legislature.

The State Federation of Labor in convention last week passed a resolution asking for an extra session of the assembly. The resolution was introduced by Eugene Treiber, secretary of the State Federation and president of the New Haven Operators' local, who in introducing the resolution predicted that all theatres in the state will be closed within six months unless something is done to relieve the situation. A general close down he said would throw 300 operators out of employment.

The operators are waiting upon members of the legislature from their districts to learn if they voted for the Durant measure and if they favor the plan of the exhibitors to obtain a special session. Treiber reported that these solicitations were developing the fact that the majority of the legislators who voted for the bill were under the impression at the time that the distributors would pay the tax, and all who have been interviewed so far had expressed sympathy with the stand of the theatre men and were for a special session to take action on the tax.

President Joseph W. Walsh and other members of the M. P. T. O. have conferred with several Assemblymen, the majority of whom declared they will vote to kill the bill if they have the opportunity for action on it at another session.

The exhibitors will seek written requests of members of the Assembly for a special session, and the support of social, civic and political organizations, including the Kiwanis, Lions and Rotary Clubs, and Chambers of Commerce will be sought. Petitions will be circulated throughout the state by the exhibitors.

Criticism of the tax bill has been expressed in many quarters. Among those who have voiced their emphatic disapproval of the bill are the Rev. Oscar F. Maurer, pastor of the Center Congregational Church and a prominent figure in the civic life of New Haven, who is quoted as declaring that the state should avoid making a direct tax on the picture industry. With regard to the censorship phases of the bill, Rev. Maurer said that in his opinion the picture men had little to fear. "Motion Pictures have assumed a higher moral tone under the supervision of Will Hays," he said. The clergyman condemned the action of the distributors in removing their offices from the state, asserting that they would have won more sympathy had they paid the tax under protest and worked for the repeal of the law while continuing their exchanges in New Haven.

The removal of the exchanges has resulted in a delivery situation which is at least temporarily in a muddle. The situation has been somewhat relieved by the extension of service by the Rosen Film Delivery Service, which increased its trucks from three to seven and is working on a day and night schedule to get programs to the theatres on time for showing.

According to Lester Tobias of the Yale Film Exchange and regional director of the I. M. P. A., there is much speculation among exhibitors as to whether the distributors will re-establish exchanges in Connecticut after the situation is cleared up, many feeling, he says, that now that the distributors have moved out and found that they can deliver from outside sources at a lower over-head, it will be difficult to induce them to return.

Tobias declared that all differences between the independents and the national distributors over the Connecticut situation have been smoothed out and that now the greatest harmony exists between them in their concerted efforts to solve the situation. He said that the soliciting of new contracts for films in Connecticut had been definitely discontinued by all distributors both national and independent. He expressed the opinion that it would not be long before the whole problem in the state would be cleared up.

Theatre operation costs have mounted greatly as a result of the removal of the exchanges. The delays in film deliveries is causing the greatest difficulty to theatre managers and adds to the expense because several of the theatres are now holding extra reels on hand for use in the event that their programs do not arrive on time. J. F. Clancy, manager of Poli's theatre, estimates that the present situation if maintained for a year would increase the cost of operation of that house by at least $25,000. Other theatre men give figures proportionately high and affirm that present conditions cannot exist long without bringing ruin upon the entire picture theatre enterprise in Connecticut.

Albany and Buffalo Zones Adopt New By-Laws

At the meeting of the directors of the Albany and the Buffalo zones, held at the Hotel Onondaga in Syracuse last week, a set of by-laws was adopted under which each zone will be responsible for any expense incurred. William Dillon, of Ithaca, presided. Among those present were: Robert Wagner, of Little Falls; Ben Davis, of Gloversville; Louis Buettner, of Cohoes; Charles Hayman, of Niagara Falls; William Callahan, of Rochester, and Jules Michaels, of Buffalo. The by-laws provide, among other things, that zone directors shall meet at least quarterly. The Connecticut situation was discussed, but no definite action taken. It was decided to give all possible support to Senator James J. Walker, candidate for mayor of New York city, in view of the important work done by Mr. Walker in the past in the interests of the exhibitor.

Find Body in Wreckage of Gillis Theatre

The Gillis theatre of Kansas City, destroyed by an explosion June 25, yielded another body this week, which makes the fifth. It was found at the side of the balcony railing at the bottom of the debris. It was that of a youth about 20 years old. Nothing could be found about the body which might lead to identification. The inquest into the tragedy will be re-opened soon, according to authorities. Four bodies were removed from the ruins soon after the explosion and fire, the search being stopped shortly afterwards as all missing persons were believed accounted for.

Zambreno Buys Interest in Jossey Exchanges

Frank Zambreno, president of Progress Pictures Corporation, with offices in Chicago, Milwaukee and Indianapolis, has purchased an interest in two exchanges operated in Cleveland and Cincinnati by J. S. Jossey. Zambreno owns the Golden Arrow Franchise for Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana and may sign up the Arrow feature product for Ohio as well now that he has entered that territory.

Paramount Class Progressing

Students in Training School for Managers Undergoing Strenuous Course

STUDENTS in the Paramount Theatre Managers' Training School are being put through a rigid course of lectures and practical training in preparation for the positions they will be called upon to fill after the expiration of the six months term. The schedule of the second, third and fourth weeks of the term included activities that kept them busy throughout every day and many nights.

Rocky T. Newton, city manager of the Paramount Little Rock Theatres, explained the management of the small town theatre as differentiating from the New York first run house. The interrelation of production, distribution and exhibition was discussed with the students by the following Paramount executives: Norman Colyer, W. B. Cockell, Myke Lewis, Joseph Seidelman, Miss Maude Miller, B. G. J. Frawley, Edmund Raeburn and George M. Spidell.

Following a visit of the class to the Long Island studio, E. C. King and Earl Wingart explained the departmental organization of the studio. The class then visited each department and saw pictures in the making. The New York exchange was also visited and its workings were explained by Joseph Unger. Henry Salsbury pointed out the necessity of "audience reaction reports."

Trade paper editors explained how each department of these papers could be of service to the theatre manager. Those who addressed the class on these points were William A. Johnston, editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and J. S. Dickerson, associate editor of the same paper, and Martin J. Quigley, editor of Exhibitors' Herald.

Austin Keough lectured on "Legal Relationship Between Patrons and Theatre Managers." To apply the principles outlined in lectures by Theodore C. Young, Louis Cohen and Lacey Johnson on "The Theatre Site." The class was divided into five groups and sent to the following towns: Englewood, New Rochelle, Mount Vernon, Flushing and Yonkers.

Henry Anderson, manager of the Insurance Department, gave a series of lectures on "Theatre Insurance and Fire and Accident Prevention." He was assisted by C. E. Cherry, superintendent of the New York Claim Department of the Employers' Liability Assurance Corporation, Ltd. The class will spend an entire week at the Edison Lamp Works, where eleven lecturers, experts secured by the Edison Lamp Works, will cover every phase of theatre lighting. Special bulletings have been prepared for the class by the Edison Lamp Works and their institute has been equipped to meet the needs of the school with complete demonstration facilities.

"U" Trade Show Plan Extended

Success of Laemmle's Theatre Parties in Iowa Initiates Country-Wide Application

THE Carl Laemmle Universal Theatre Parties, inaugurated a few weeks ago in Iowa for the purpose of letting small town exhibitors view Universal features in advance of release, are to be employed nationally, Universal announced this week.

The first showing under the plan was held at Des Moines, and this was followed last week by a Theatre Party in the Omaha territory for the benefit of theatre owners of Northwest Iowa. The showing took place at the Empress theatre at Cherokee. The Cherokee Chamber of Commerce co-operated with Max Drefke, manager of the Empress, and Universal executives. Nearly 100 guests attended the screening, at which "The Teaser," "California Straight Ahead," and "The Goose Woman" were presented.

The second party to be conducted by the Omaha exchange took place at the Strand theatre, Pierce, Neb., last Monday, and the next is scheduled for Lexington, Nebr., where a Laemmle party will be staged at the Majestic theatre Monday, September 21.

The first of the Universal theatre parties given for Minnesota exhibitors was held at the State theatre, Alexandria, Minn., Thursday and was attended by 110 persons, including 25 exhibitors and their families. Weather was excellent for the event and some of the exhibitors came as far as 250 miles to look over the company's product.

Manager Bromley made a little talk at 10 a. m. after which "The Teaser" and "Siege" were shown. There was a luncheon at the Alexandria hotel at 12:30 where the visitors were welcomed by Paul Kinney, president of the Alexandria Commercial club.

Films of the crowd and some of the individuals were taken and then the exhibitors had a little surprise for Phil Dumas, Universal's Minneapolis manager. They presented him with a silver service. Thereafter the films "California Straight Ahead," "The City of Stars," a comedy, and "The Homemaker" were shown.

Ralph B. Williams, manager of Universal's Atlanta branch, entertained exhibitors at a trade showing at the Strand theatre, Tullahoma, Tenn., last Tuesday. The theatre was placed at the disposal of Mr. Williams by R. T. Hill, the owner.

Earle E. Griggs, Universal's publicity director, went to Tullahoma, Sunday and Monday for the purpose of arranging the details of the event. It is planned to make motion pictures of the exhibitors and their families who will be the guests of Universal at this unusual trade showing.

Yola D'Avril is Loaned to Universal Company

Yola D'Avril, new Educational-Christie beauty and former Parisian dancer, has been loaned to Universal where she is playing an important role in "The Midnight Sun" in support of Laura La Plante and Pat O'Malley.

Mrs. Anna A. Sessions, named assistant to First National's European Director General.

Colleges Interested in Kane Endowment

Yale University and the University of California are much interested in the offer of Robert T. Kane of an annual $5,000 endowment fund for the establishment of a chair of photo-play in one of the nine leading universities of the country.

Queries have come to Kane from both Yale and California asking more information regarding the fund. George Parmly Day, treasurer of Yale wrote for further particulars so that he may submit the matter to the Yale Corporation's committee on Educational policy, and subsequently to the members of the corporation for their consideration.

From the University of California came the following telegraphic communication:

"Am advised you are offering endowment fund to University of California for chair of cinema arts. Consider this much needed and wonderful step forward. Will you kindly telegraph me at my expense if this is authentic as I wish to communicate with you."

Dorothy Seastrom Signs With First National

DOROTHY SEASTROM, blonde beauty who made her screen debut in comedies and later appeared in a feature under the direction of C. B. De Mille, has been signed to a long term contract by First National, for whom she has played in two recent productions, Corinne Griffith's "Classified" and "We Moderns," the newest Colleen Moore vehicle.

"We are looking forward to excellent results from Miss Seastrom," said John McCormick, production chief for First National's West Coast Studios. "She is possessed of camera technique and has received a firm foundation through work already accomplished in motion pictures. Our organization, realizing her ability and beauty, will endeavor to develop in her every charm and talent necessary for the screen."

"U" Entering Canada Theatre Field

Pantages, Finkelstein & Ruben and Fitzpatrick-McElroy Among Circuits Which Add to Holdings

THE activities of circuits and producer-controlled chains in expanding their operations and holdings figure prominently in reports emanating from various parts of the country concerning recent developments in the theatre field.

Announcement that Universal has purchased three theatres in Canada is taken as an earnest of that company's intention of invading the Canadian field on a large scale. The company has taken long-term leases on the Lyceum, Starland and College theatres in Winnipeg, where rumors have it that this is the first step in a move by Universal to enter Canada as a large operator in the picture theatre field. The three theatres which Universal has leased are owned by A. R. McNichol. Charles A. Meade, manager of the Lyceum, will be in charge of all three houses.

Fitzpatrick-McElroy have acquired a lease on a theatre to be built at Richmond, Indiana. This will make the second Indiana deal of this organization, which has large theatre holdings in Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin, and which recently extended its operations into the Hoosier State by the acquisition of a house at Michigan City. As in the latter deal Harry Katz, brother of Sam Katz, of Balaban & Katz, is associated with Fitzpatrick-McElroy in the Richmond theatre lease. The new house is to be built by the Quaker City Realty Co.

These recent moves by Fitzpatrick-McElroy are considered to be the forerunner of a big chain of houses which the company will establish in Indiana. At the present writing the organization controls 45 theatres. During the past year this company has expanded rapidly and its continued extension has led to much discussion of what the future will bring forth in connection with its development as a steadily growing circuit.

Finkelstein & Ruben gained full control of the theatre situation at Brainerd, Minn., through the acquisition of the Lyceum there in a deal with Clinton-Meyers, former operators of the house. F. & R. has also taken over the Lyceum and Rex at Virginia. This latter move narrows competition in Virginia, recently the scene of a bitter price war, down to two factions, the other house in the city being operated by Roy McMinn, who owns the Royal. A report from Huron, S. D., states that Finkelstein & Ruben are negotiating for a theatre in that city, the report claiming that a representative of the company is seeking interests to erect a 1,000 seat house for lease to F. & R.

Alexander Pantages is said to be making a survey of Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Omaha and Des Moines with a view to building first-run theatres in those cities. It is said that Pantages is planning to enter the production field and with that view in mind will establish a chain of picture theatres throughout the country. In Minneapolis it was reported that he would go there soon to seek a site for a theatre.

Marked changes in the theatre situation of New Britain, Conn., took place when a half interest in the Capitol, Palace and Scenic theatres was purchased by Israel J. and Bernard E. Hoffman of Ansonia. The owners of the theatres, Contaras Bros. and Perokas, in turn have taken a half interest in the new theatre which the Hoffman Bros. intend to build in New Britain at an estimated cost of $500,000.

Admisson Tax Totaled $30,907,809 Last Year

COLLECTIONS from the admission tax during the fiscal year ended June 30, last, totaled $30,907,809, according to figures just issued by the Internal Revenue Bureau. This was a decrease of $46,804,714 from the collections of $77,712,253 reported in the fiscal year 1924, due to the exemption from tax of admissions of not over 50 cents, which became effective the beginning of the 1925 fiscal year.

New York City paid approximately one-fifth of the total admission taxes of the country, the figures show, the collections in the Third New York District totaling $6,113,904. The other districts reporting the heaviest collections of admission taxes were: First New York, $1,395,939; First Illinois, $3,018,337; First California, $998,120; Sixth California, $1,429,907; Maryland, $901,728; Massachusetts, $1,723,602; First Michigan, $1,064,133; Eighteenth Ohio, $920,890; and First Pennsylvania, $1,362,333.

Independents Make New Sales

Sax Announces Gotham Program is Sold 100%; Freedom Film Buys Arrow Product

INDEPENDENT distributors are rapidly closing territories on the programs they will offer this season. The product of several concerns has been sold solid to exchanges throughout the country. Among the most recent to close all territories is the Lumas Film Corporation, distributors of the Gotham pictures.

Sam Sax, of Lumas, announced this week that the first series of six Gotham Productions have been sold one hundred per cent. All territories on these pictures were closed with the signing last week by F. & R. Film Co., Minneapolis, for the product in that territory. The world's rights outside of the United States and Canada were taken over by the Apollo Trading Corp. The first Gotham six have been sold to 25 exchanges in this country.

The pictures in the first Gotham series are "Women and Gold," "Unmarried Wives," "The Night Ship," "Shattered Lives," "The Silent Pal," and "Black Lightning," the latter two featuring "Thunder," the dog.

The F. & R. Film Co. also signed with Lumas for the second group of Gotham Productions, which includes eighteen features. The new series of twelve was recently sold in the New England territory to Independent Films, Inc., of Boston. This group of pictures also figured in another deal last week. This was the purchase by Stoll Films, Ltd., of the British rights through Inter-Ocean Films. The Stoll company was represented by Herbert Case Hoagland, managing director of the organization.

W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow, announced that Freedom Film Corporation has acquired the Golden Arrow franchise for twenty-four features, for the Upper New York territory. The deal was concluded between Dr. Shallenberger and Richard Fox, president of Freedom. Mr. Fox is planning an extensive exploitation campaign to publicize the twenty-four Arrow features in his territory. The product will be handled from the offices of Freedom Film in Buffalo.

Wardour Films, Ltd., of London have the sales rights for the entire Ginsberg product of Royal and Banner Productions throughout the United Kingdom. This deal was made at the opening of the season by Jeffrey Bernerd, European representative of the Ginsberg Corporation.

Nathan Hirsh reported as among his recent territorial sales on the Gordon Clifford series that the Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas section had been acquired by Southern Enterprises, the Liber company had contracted for the Indiana territory, Fisher Films for Ohio and that Argentine American films had signed contracts for Argentine, Paraguay, and Uruguay.

Louis Weiss, managing director of Weiss Brothers Artclass Pictures Corporation announces that he has sold his series of six single reel specials entitled "Guess Who" to I. Maynard Schwartz' Short Film Exchange of Chicago to be distributed in the territory included in Northern Illinois and Indiana.

Warners at Production Peak

Indications Are That Forty Features Will Be Completed by First of Year

FROM present indications the forty features on the Warner schedule for the season will be completed by January 1st, in accordance with the promise of Jack Warner. Production at the coast studios is now at its peak. In addition to the pictures already finished and released or ready for release, twelve are now in the process of cutting, preparation or in actual work.

Lowell Sherman has completed "The Love Toy," his second picture for Warners, and left for New York to fulfill a stage engagement. The next to be completed will probably be John Barrymore's "The Sea Beast." Much of the action is being taken aboard a whaling vessel now cruising in the Pacific. It is expected the company will return in about three weeks. With the return of Barrymore he will start work in "Don Juan," his next Warner vehicle. The scenario is being prepared by Bess Meredyth and Maude Fulton.

Syd Chaplin is also preparing to put into production "Nightie Night, Nurse," by Robert E. Sherwood and Bertram Bloch. Chuck Reisner will direct.

"The Cave Man" is being adapted for the screen by Julien Josephson from the story by Gillete Burgess. This will probably be a vehicle for Matt Moore and it will be a wide deviation from anything he has done to date. Lewis Milestone will direct.

"Broken Hearts of Hollywood," a special that will have all the Warner players in its cast is to be the grand finale on the year's program. Roy del Ruth will direct and Bennie Zeidman will personally supervise the production.

King Baggott Signs a New Contract With Universal

King Baggott, associated with Universal for almost ten years, has signed a new long-term contract to direct pictures for that company, according to an announcement from Raymond L. Schrock, studio manager. Baggott left the company for a short time to direct William S. Hart in his current production for United Artists. He will return to Universal City when his present work is completed.

Barbara Bedford Opposite "Bill" Hart

Barbara Bedford has been chosen as leading woman for "Tumbleweeds," William S. Hart's first production for United Artists Corporation, which is now in work.

Universal to Produce "Gulliver's Travels"

UNIVERSAL is to make a big super-Jewel production of "Gulliver's Travels" adapted from the world famous story written by the English satirist Jonathan Swift in 1726. The production has been under consideration for som etime, but only this week Carl Laemmle cabled from Europe to start work on it.

"Gulliver's Travels" is composed of four different sections his visit to Lilliputia, his visit to Brobdingnag, where he is thrown in with the giants; his experiences in Laputa, an island city and fortress that floats in the air, and his trip to Huoyhnhym, the realm of the intelligent horses. It is not yet known whether Universal will embrace all four sections in the coming production, which it is said will be made on a larger scale than "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "The Phantom of the Opera."

Ginsberg Productions Lined Up for Season

The production schedule has been arranged for the product to be handled by the Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation during the season. In the Banner production series of six, two have already been released. They are "The Love Gamble" and "Wreckage." The third will be "Wandering Footsteps," featuring Estelle Taylor, Alec B. Francis and Bryant Washburn. It will be directed by Phil Rosen.

The fourth Banner will be "Checkered Flag," which will shortly go into production under the direction of John Adolfi. The fifth and sixth will be made under the titles of "Whispering Canyon" and "Brooding Eyes."

"Before Midnight" and "Big Pal" of the Royal Production series of six have been completed. They will be followed in order by "A Desperate Moment," "The Millionaire Policeman," "The Taxi Mystery" and "The Phantom Express."

Many Universal Features in Cutting Room

Several of the important forthcoming Universal features are now in the cutting rooms at the Universal City plant. Among the pictures now being edited and prepared for screening are "Stella Maris," which was produced by Charles Brabin with Mary Philbin starred; "His People," a feature directed by Edward Sloman; "The Still Alarm," a melodrama of the fire-fighters directed by Edward Laemmle; and "My Old Dutch," which Laurence Trimble directed.

Among the Universal directors who have completed pictures recently and are preparing to start new productions is Svend Gade. The company has about six features now in active production.

Adolfi to Direct Fourth for Banner

John Adolfi will direct "The Checkered Flag," fourth of the Banner productions for the season. The book of the same title by John Merserean was adapted for the screen by Charles and Fanny Hatton. The story is of the automobile industry and the speedway racing game.

Many Nations Represented in Fox Cast

Nineteen nations are represented in the cast and technical staff making "The Silver Treasure" for Fox. The picture was adapted from Joseph Conrad's story, "Nostromo."

THOUGH Tom Mix has only just completed "The Yankee Senor," he had already plunged into production on "The Best Bad Man," his fourth starring vehicle of the season for Fox from a story by Max Brand. J. G. Blystone is directing the new picture. In the past he has directed Mix in such pictures as "Dick Turpin," "Teeth," and "Soft Boiled."

Clara Bow has the leading feminine role in the new picture, while others in support of the star are: Cyril Chadwick, Tom Kennedy, Paul Panzer, and Frank Beal.

The three of the seven Mix pictures already completed are "The Lucky Horseshoe," which has already had a successful engagement on Broadway; "The Yankee Senor," which will be presented October 11th, and "The Everlasting Whisper," which will be presented later in the season.

Lieber Month Promises Big Returns

FIRST NATIONAL branch managers expect to exceed the success scored during the Eschmann month drive of last autumn with the Lieber month drive in honor of Robert Lieber, president of the company, which was announced for this fall late in August. Telegrams and letters from the field staffs express determination to show the biggest sales results ever obtained in a similar drive.

First National executives declare they have never had such an enthusiastic response from the field as that made following the August announcement.

Cunningham Signs With Metropolitan

Jack Cunningham, scenarist of "The Covered Wagon," "Don Q" and other successes has been signed by Metropolitan Pictures as head of the film editorial department. The new appointee will supervise selection of stories, research on selected plays and stories, the preparation of scenarios and continuities, the cutting of film and the writing of sub-titles.

"Rocking Moon" with Lilyan Tashman in the lead is the first of the pictures Cunningham will devote his talents to. Like the others of the Metropolitan pictures, it will be released through Producers Distributing Corporation.

Pathe Will Make Feature Version of Serial

Pathe has decided to make a feature version in six reels of "Wild West," their latest serial, made on the Miller Brothers 101 Ranch in Oklahoma, with Jack Mulhall and Helen Ferguson heading the cast. "Wild West" is based upon actual happenings in the early history of Oklahoma and was adapted for the screen by J. F. Natteford.

Clara Bow Opposite Tom Mix With Fox

Clara Bow has been loaned by B. P. Schulberg to the Fox organization and she will appear opposite Tom Mix in the latter's forthcoming production. Miss Bow will start work at once in order to be free later in the Fall to undertake her next featured role with Preferred Pictures.

Roland West Buys Picture Rights to "The Bat"

SCREEN rights to "The Bat," the Mary Roberts Rhinehart-Avery Hopwood stage melodrama, were acquired this week by Roland West. The price paid for the picture privileges was $75,000. West will produce the story for release by United Artists.

"The Bat," which scored as one of the most sensational stage successes of recent times, was the object of spirited bidding by several big picture companies. Its success on the stage ushered in an era of "thrill plays" in the American theatre. The play is said to have netted its sponsors over $1,800,000.

Negotiations for the deal under which Roland West obtained the film rights were completed by Wagenhals and Kemper, theatrical agents, who represented the authors. It is planned to have the screen version ready for release by United Artists in January.

Price President of Associated Exhibitors; Woody Now General Manager

ACCORDING to an announcement issued late Wednesday, Oscar Price assumes the office of President of the Associated Exhibitors, and the control of this organization passes from the hands of Pathe Exchanges.

The announcement is made with little surprise to the industry as it has been rumored for some time that such a deal was in the making. According to Mr. Price there will be no change in the personnel of the organization other than that of Mr. John S. Woody's relinquishing the post of president for that of general manager.

In his new capacity Mr. Woody will have complete charge of the selling organization while Mr. Price will lend his efforts to the production of pictures.

The program for production arranged by the Associated Exhibitors for the coming season is an elaborate one. The company has several special productions on hand that have not been announced to date in addition to the two feature pictures produced by Mr. Price prior to his entering the organization. These pictures feature Glenn Hunter.

Mr. Price stated that the new Board of Directors for the organization which will be announced next week composes some very prominent people.

Committees Agree on Contract

M. P. T. O. A. and I. M. P. A. Groups Reach Complete Accord on Form for Submittal

THE final meeting of the joint contract and arbitration committees of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and the Independent Motion Picture Association was held at the headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America at 1 P. M. on Wednesday, September 16th.

The work of the committees was completed and a contract form was agreed upon. The final form is virtually the same as recently promulgated with the addition of a provision limiting the time, after the rendering of the award by the local arbitration board, in which the award can be reviewed by the national arbitration commission, and a provision for the right to both the distributor and the exhibitor to challenge the arbitrators appointed or selected by the other side. Each side is limited to three challenges.

The committees will submit the contract to their respective organizations with a recommendation for its acceptance. The Independent Motion Picture Association of America will hold a convention in the very near future, at which time its contract committee will render its report and recommendation.

Copies of the proposed contract have been sent to all of the members of the Independent Motion Picture Association of America, to the presidents of the various theatre owner state organizations, the officers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, to Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and Mr. Nathan Burkan.

The picture, which is now in production on the Pacific Coast, will co-feature Virginia Valli and Eugene O'Brien, with Jean Hersholt, George Nichols, Boris Karloff, Bryant Washburn and Cissy Fitzgerald prominent in the support.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Buys Packard Novel

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has purchased the screen rights to "The Four Stragglers," one of the recent novels of Frank L. Packard, author of "The Miracle Man." The story offers a mystery plot centering about four odd characters. The work was first published by the Munsey publications and later in book form.

Thomson to Star in Story by Buckley Oxford

Fred Thomson has purchased the screen rights to an original story, as yet untitled, by Buckley Oxford. The story will be put into production with Thomson in the star role upon the completion of "All Around The Frying Pan," which Thomson is now making for F. B. O. release.

Carlotta Monterey Will Join Menjou Cast

Carlotta Monterey, well known as an actress on the New York speaking stage, will play opposite Adolphe Menjou for Paramount in "The King of Main Street." It will be her second screen appearance, her first having been with Richard Barthelmess in "Soul Fire."

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Mr. Basil Brady,
Pathe Exchange,
505 Pearl Street,
Buffalo, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Brady:

You will by now have received the daily statements of box office receipts for the showing of Black Cyclone here last week and will understand why we are so glad that a showing of this unusual feature was arranged in this theatre.

Your claims in regard to Black Cyclone are more than justified. The attendance grew steadily during the week thus proving that our patrons are not merely interested in the picture but found a refreshing change from the usual run of pictures.

It was particularly pleasing to us to find that the footage of Black Cyclone was such that we were able to present a well diversified program which included the Harry Langdon comedy (The Sea Squawk), two acts and a novelty film. Our only wish is that we might have more frequent opportunities to present pictures of this kind.

With best personal regards, I am

Very truly yours,

EASTMAN THEATRE,
Manager.

Broadway 'Phantom' Campaign

Joe Weil Puts Over Smashing Line-Up of Stunts for Astor Theatre Showing

AN exploitation campaign of unusual importance has been used throughout Greater New York during the past few weeks, heralding the premiere of "The Phantom of the Opera" at the Astor theatre on Broadway, put across by the exploitation department of Universal under the direction of Joe Weil.

The opening gun in this campaign was the persuasion of the Textile Color Card association, which has a membership of 10,000 in the textile trade, to name the predominating Fall color, "Phantom Red." The association sent a letter to its entire membership telling of the new color and enclosing a sample of the shade.

Universal circularized all millinery houses, cloak and suit manufacturers, resident buyers, etc., telling of the new color and offering an attractive window card to be used with a "Phantom Red" display.

Many exclusive Fifth Ave. establishments have tied-up with "The Phantom." Dutton's book shop has an attractive display, Brentano's, Sarnoff, the Astor Hat Shop, and many others have put in a "Phantom Red" window. Capezio's, a fashionable shoe shop on West 48th St., placed a few red shoes in their window for a tie-up and then, because of the instantaneous demand, gave the entire window over to a red display.

A window card showing Mary Philbin listening in on her radio set afforded a tie-up with all the Radiola stores in the Greater New York territory, 1,000 in all. These dealers gave prominent window displays on the new picture.

A manufacturer of lipsticks was induced to put out a "Phantom Red" lipstick which all the big drug stores along Broadway will soon be featuring.

Even the restaurants along Broadway felt that they could not permit the "Phantom" opening to go by unnoticed. The chef of the El Dorado carved a giant cake out of vegetables, showing a full-length figure of "The Phantom," which was placed in the restaurant's window.

A special book cover was made up of heavy manilla paper with "The Phantom of the Opera" in large bold red letters. These were furnished drug stores selling popular priced fiction and circulating libraries to place on all outgoing books. Hundreds of persons were seen on the subway, trolley cars, and ferries, ostensibly reading "The Phantom of the Opera."

Universal placed 200 copies of the photoplay edition of the book in hotel lobbies and public terminals where scores of people were seen reading it.

Twenty thousand "Phantom" post cards with trick printing which was not visible until held up to the light brought the message to beauty parlors, barber shops, hotels and a picked mailing list. It was figured that if the barbers and the beauty specialists could be interested in the new picture that Universal would have gained powerful advertising allies, through their well known conversational possibilities.

Double truck rotogravure sheets were distributed to the number of several thousand in the lobby of the Astor and by crews of boys who delivered them to stores in picked neighborhoods. Boys were also posted in railroad terminals with these sheets.

A special sniping campaign was used along all roads leading into the city backed up by space in the subways and railroad cars. Returning vacationists were made aware of the fact that "The Phantom" was ready for their inspection.

The Exploitation Department worked hand in hand with the Publicity Department on special stunts with the ballet girls who appear in the prologue at the Astor. Every New York newsaper made use of one or more picures of these girls taken on the roof of the Steinway building and the Heckscher building.

Don Nichols, manager of the Savoy theatre, Durham, N. C., arranged this attractive front display on "The Prairie Wife" (Metro-Goldwyn). The center frame was worked on a flasher.

Illuminated display piece for "Her Sister from Paris" (First National) at the Saenger theatre, Shreveport, La., built by George E. Findley. Lights threw the silhoutte on a lightly clad dancer on the small screen.

The walls of the Astor lobby have been entirely covered with plaster "stone" carrying out the dungeonlike atmosphere of the picture. A faint half-light adds to the general spookiness of the effect, and a red-silk clothed figure of the "phantom" lying in a niche over the entrance to the auditorium sends cold shivers up and down the spines of entering patrons. The ushers carry out the "spirit" of the picture by wearing red silk robes.

Auto Firm Gives Display to "The Tourist" Run

Something of a precedent for exploitation of two-reel comedies on Broadway has been established through a window display tie-up in one of the most prominent locations on the Great White Way boosting "The Tourist," showing at the Rialto theatre.

The display arranged by the Rialto theatre is in the big window of the Picard Motor Sales Company, Inc., authorized Ford Dealers, on Broadway between 51st and 52nd streets, opposite the Piccadilly theatre.

A life sized painted cut-out of Johnny Arthur, star of "The Tourist," showing him seated before a dilapidated Ford, the engine of which serves the tourist as his complete kitchen equipment, is featured in the window dislay opposite a new Ford coupe. In the foreground of the window are displayed ten stills from "The Tourist," mounted and each carrying a caption tying up the comedy, the Ford car and the Picard company. A card, the size of a one-sheet, mounted on an easel, announces prominently that "The Tourist" is showing at the Rialto theatre.

Womanless Wedding Stunt on "Marriage Whirl"

As a prologue to "The Marriage Whirl," Manager Geo. Rea of the Grand Theatre, Columbus, staged a unique presentation, "A Womanless Wedding." The bridal party consisted of the bride and bridegroom, best man, minister, choir boy and two young girl and boy attendants. All the actors were collegians, even the bride and her girl attendants being impersonated by college boys.

The prologue was inexpensive, being produced at the cost of six theatre tickets and the cost of renting wigs for the "young ladies." Flowers were also purchased for the wedding.

"Unholy Three" is Greater Movie Season Opener

"The Unholy Three" was the attraction which ushered in "Greater Movie Season" at the Imperial Charlotte. Manager Warren Irvin played it up as a special feature, stressing the fact that this film was also the opening attraction for the season at the Capitol theatre, New York.

A valuable publicity stunt was the throwing away of a thousand tickets from an airplane at Lakeview Park, among which were several passes, good for any of the three Paramount houses in Charlotte during the first week of the "Greater Movie Season." The railway company operating the street cars to and from the Park, carried signs on all their cars advertising the airplane stunt.

Splendid co-operation was received from the merchants of the city, fifteen of whom permitted the theatre to paint "Greater Movie Season is here—Let's go—" on their windows.

A week in advance all theatre employees wore ribbons reading: "It starts August 17." This teaser aroused curiosity, many asking for details. Balloons were used in lobby and some given to children. Banners and pennants decorated marquee, announcing "Greater Movie Season."

Dinosaurus Ballyhoo Given "Lost World" Showing

Rowland and Clark's theatres staged a rather unique street ballyhoo for "The Lost World" in Pittsburgh. Several days before the advance advertising of the picture at the Liberty theatre, a huge dinosaur, measuring 14 feet long, and towering 12 feet 6 inches in the air, mounted on a two-ton truck was put on the streets. A bellows arrangement, fed with red confetti belched forth apparent fire from his ferocious mouth. The animal was designed and built at the Rowland and Clark studios at Pittsburgh.

The effect on the people was not only startling, but as it was in advance of the campaign on "The Lost World," it led to much discussion.

A living model, attended by her maid, attracted attention to "A Slave of Fashion" (Metro-Goldwyn) at the Stillman theatre, Cleveland, in this window.

A vacant store building in Jamestown, N. Y., which Paterson & Woods, managers of the Jamestown Palace, decorated with stills and so on as a "museum" to advertise "The Iron Horse" (Fox).

Portland "Iron Horse" Drive

Oregon City is Scene of Heavy Campaign for Majestic Theatre Showing of Picture

An unusually comprehensive and far reaching campaign was put over very recently in Portland, Ore., by Charles E. Couche, director of publicity, and Frank Lacey, house manager, of the Majestic theatre in that city for the engagement of "The Iron Horse." They started the ball rolling three weeks in advance of the opening with an elaborate newspaper announcement and plenty of pertinent press notices.

A score of De Luxe painted boards 12 by 60 feet were arranged on the four main vacation highways. The boards were not merely painted, but had old style engine heads built of wood and beaver board projecting about two feet from surface of sign. The boards were brilliantly illuminated with flood lights at night, and constituted a valuable flash for the campaign. Forty ordinary 24-sheet boards were also utilized for "Iron Horse" stands.

The "Oregonian" — Portland's leading newspaper was tied up with the drive, and in a manner that secured over 200 inches of free space, including two front page stories. The Oregonian consented to act as host to local pioneers, who came to Portland by railroad prior to 1885. The newspaper also acted as host to orphan children at special matinees. The local lodge of Elks co-operated by providing transportation for the children at these performances.

The Union Pacific Railways responded liberally to an invitation for reciprocal advertising courtesies, and displayed special 8x10 "Iron Horse" ad cards throughout their shops, offices, etc. The railroads also allowed an advertising slip on the picture to be attached to every month-end pay check issued to their employees, approximating 10,000.

The Union Pacific helped put over the biggest advertising parade over staged in Portland. They furnished their 40 piece shop band to lead the procession, which consisted of section crew, floats, equipment, Indians and Portland's first railway engine. The old engine being transported on a tractor-drawn truck. The parade was ten blocks long and secured 260 inches of free publicity for the picture.

The parade was the climax of the advance campaign—being staged on Saturday morning immediately preceding the opening. After it was over, the band gave a concert in front of the theatre, where the engine was parked by special permit for the run of the engagement.

Motion pictures of the parade were made during its progress. These pictures were run at the three other big downtown houses. The orchestra at one theatre, and the orchestra of the biggest and most popular hotel cafe, put on "Iron Horse" musical novelties.

The local County Fair opening the week before the picture's opening, a booth was engaged, in which an "Iron Horse" trailer was shown to 60,000 people for five days preceding the opening engagement.

A number of display windows in the downtown section were also brought into play. One window using a trailer, and two displaying miniature model engines.

Oilcloth signs were used on the spare tires of taxicabs, and Portland street cars carried "Iron Horse" dash board cards as well. A distinctive feature of the drive was the broadcasting from local wireless station of an orchestra rendering "Iron Horse" musical novelty. This number comprised in its rendition, whistles, bells and imitations of railroad effects.

Special Bus Tour Exploits "Don Q" at Lockport

In his exploitation of "Don Q" at the Palace, Lockport, Manager Geo. T. Cruzen introduced a novel and forceful agent in the form of a Special Bus Tour which covered twenty towns and villages in surrounding territory.

The bus, one of the Parlor Type Coaches, with a seating capacity of 34 people, was chartered for a day and manned with a 22 piece band, a ballyhoo man, poster-man, six bill-passers and an extra helper. Bus was put on a running schedule of 30 miles per hour, with time of arrival, departure and stop-over in each town timed.

At the instant of arrival in a town the most prominent position was monopolized. The bill-passers in charge of poster-man flooded the community in all directions with heralds, while the poster-man sniped available one-sheet locations. Another one of the boys located window cards.

After the first selection by the band, the entire population was out en masse, whereupon the ballyhoo man proceeded to narrate the luxuries, appointments, etc., of the Palace theatre, stressing the point that it was built to serve, not only Lockport, but Niagara county as well. He finished his talk with an elaborate account of the merits of "Don Q," as well as those of future films to be shown at the Palace.

"Havoc" Heralds Dropped From Airplane Aloft

Among the many stunts employed to attract attention to the Cleveland engagement of "Havoc" was the distribution of heralds and passes from an aeroplane that soared over the entire city of Cleveland, on the day the picture opened. The heralds were 25,000 small cards bearing the following copy:

This Fell From An Aeroplane. If It Was a Bomb Havoc would be created in Cleveland during a war. See this greatest photoplay ever made—Now showing at B. F. Keith Palace theatre.

Display of live bees in the lobby of Keith's Palace theatre, Cleveland, for the showing of "Lightnin'" (Fox), in which a bee story figures prominently.

Three hundred of the cards had, imprinted across their face "This Ticket Good For One Admission." The backs of all the cards also bore a brief selling argument on the picture.

An extra large campaign on "Havoc" was waged in newspapers; the copy playing up principally the fact that this engagement constituted a world premiere.

The billboards were used for a veritable circus campaign of billing, a full showing being effected for one week preceding the opening.

"Night Life of New York" in Animated Display

The effective lobby display Manager Oscar White used on "Night Life of New York" when it played the Liberty, Greenwood, is well worth describing.

Cut-outs of buildings were placed against a sky background, one of the smaller ones being painted to represent a theatre with a tiny electric sign carrying the picture title. The effect was obtained by punching holes in the sign and backing it with a small electric bulb. A cement drive was put down in front of the buildings with three lamp-posts at curb of sidewalk. A motor car was parked in a small park at right which was covered with sand and green dust sown to represent grass, with compoboard trees and shrubs enhancing its realism. A small car read "Keep Off The Grass." Another small racing car was placed on street with a card reading: "Coming Monday—Lucky Devil." The action appeal of the display was increased by a train of electric cars, which kept circling around the block of buildings.

"Sally" Trailer Projected in Liberty Lobby

In the center of the lobby was placed a miniature stage, complete in every detail, with a screen and black curtains which were dropped when screen was not in use. A small toy motion picture machine was borrowed and placed outside on sidewalk, about six feet from screen. Permission was obtained from the city to cut off the lights around the theatre, so that when trailer on "Sally" and two or three others on coming attractions were flashed on small screen, they were clearly projected. Result was that sidewalk in front of theatre was jammed with people watching the exhibit.

A drug store window display of "Phantom Red" lipsticks, tying up with the engagement of "The Phantom of the Opera" (Universal) at the Astor theatre, New York City.

Trackless Train Receives Welcome in Twin Cities

The Trackless Train of the Metro-Goldwyn organization made stops at the Twin Cities last week and stirred the hearts of young and old alike. It was on hand for the opening of the Garrick under Metro policy Saturday and pulled out Saturday night for Des Moines and Omaha.

In Minneapolis it made a union depot of the Daily Star office. Friday afternoon a group of old men and women from Ebenezer home took a ride and one woman was nearly in tears because she missed it while another who made the trip was so pleased she refused to get off the train.

"Beggar on Horseback" is Given Dream Contest

The most noteworthy unit of Manager W. J. Melvin's campaign on "The Beggar on Horseback," was the Wierd Dream Contest conducted in the Daily News by the Plaza theatre, St. Petersburg.

Five dollars in gold and 25 pairs of Plaza theatre tickets were offered to the persons submitting the wierdest dreams. Stories were limited to 100 words and had to be sent to the photoplay editor of the News.

The winning dreams were published in a latter edition of the paper, along with the names of the winners.

Special Fight Film Given Sporting Page Ads

When the Educational Special on the Lewis-Mnnn Wrestling bout ran at the Washington theatre in Chester, Tenn., it was made the occasion of a very forceful appeal to the sporting element in the town through special adds in the sporting section of the Chester Times.

A two-column ad was placed in the Times calling the attention of the sport enthusiasts to this two-reel subject alone. The Washington theatre was satisfied that this special advertising appeal on a two-reel subject was productive of much interest.

Lobby display of miniature cut-outs on "I'll Show You the Town" (Universal) arranged by Manager Fred Walters of the Temple theatre, Toledo, recently.

Large Tarpon Displayed as "Rugged Water" Tie-up

In planning his campaign for "Rugged Water" playing the Imperial theatre, Jacksonville, fortune smiled on Manager Morrison, for in addition to having a great display of outdoor fisherman's paraphernalia in the window of a leading hardware and sporting goods store, a large tarpon, caught by the manager of the sporting goods department, was hung in front of store with a large sign reading:

The sign, which was read by hundreds of persons daily who stopped to look at the catch, proved an extremely valuable advertising medium for the attraction.

A card calling attention to the works of Jos. C. Lincoln, author of "Rugged Water," was placed on display in the Public Library.

Poster Stamps Popularize Tom Mix in Germany

That the Germans are rapidly being converted to film exploitation is amply attested by the receipt in this country of a number of stamps bearing the likeness and name of Tom Mix. The stamps, which are twice as large as ordinary postage stamps, are being distributed by movie theatres and throughout the German offices as well.

The stamps are the regulation perforated edge, gummed back article, printed in a deep purple. They bear an excellent engraved likeness of Mix in the center, with the words "Tom Mix, Fox Star," surrounding the picture.

Giant on Shetland Boosts "Beggar on Horseback"

As advance publicity for "The Beggar on Horseback," during the five days preceding its opening at the Sterling theatre, Greeley, Manager C. T. Perrin had a man, six feet tall, ride a little Shetland pony across the stage each night, carrying a banner reading, "Beggar on Horseback"—Next Week—It's a Scream." The tall man in a bathrobe and high silk hat made quite a contrast to the very small pony and as a result their appearance evoked lots of laughter from patrons. Produced at very little cost, the stunt played up strongly the humorous angle of the photoplay.

Dressing Room in Lobby for "Pretty Ladies"

The Imperial lobby, Asheville, during the recent run of "Pretty Ladies," looked like a dressing room at the Follies depicted in the photoplay. The effect was produced by placing a long table with several chairs in center of lobby, with cut-out of a woman back of each chair. Various toilet requisites adorned the dressing table, while a large colored drop with matching drapes added much to the effectiveness of the display.

In addition to the above, Manager Ernest Morrison used the usual newspaper and billing campaign.

Painted red hearts with poster cut-outs were the basis of this attractive lobby on "In the Name of Love" (Paramount) at the Rex theatre Sumter, S. C., of which John Hanson is manager.

Short Subjects and Serials

Fox Scenario Department is Busy With Stories

The Fox scenario department is busy turning out stories for four units, the Helen and Warren stories, the O. Henry stories, the Imperial comedies and the Van Bibbers, which are soon to be released.

The script for "The Peacemakers," the next of the Helena and Warren series, has been prepared, as has "The Hypothesis of Failure," next of the O. Henry series. The latter will be directed by Daniel Keefe, with Roy Atwell, Vivien Oakland, William Bailey, Kathryn McGuire and Harvey Clarke in the cast.

Another Imperial comedy story is being completed and will be put into production this week, with Sid Smith and Judy King in the leading roles.

New Screen "Find" Signed by Universal

Janet Gaynor, an eighteen year old Los Angeles girl, and a new screen "discovery" has been added to the Universal stock company, where she will play ingenue roles in Westerns. Her first role is the feminine lead in a two-reeler featuring Gilbert Holmes and Ben Corbett. She was a visitor at the Universal lot when she was discovered by Isadore Bernstein, western supervisor. Successful screen tests were made and she was immediately signed as a member of the company.

William Crinley to Direct Desmond Serial

Universal announces that William Crinley has been assigned to direct "The Radio Detective," an Arthur B. Reeve story to be produced in serial form with William Desmond in the name role. Crinley was given his first opportunity to direct by Universal about four months ago, when he took charge of a unit making 2-reel westerns. Previously he was an assistant director with the company.

Fox Short Subject Drive Shows Results

THE increased efforts of the Fox publicity department in connection with that company's short subjects are showing results in the growing tendency of newspaper editors to give space to news items about the briefer pictures and the general use by exhibitors of added exploitation material furnished with these releases, according to a report from Fox Film following a check-up of the short subject department.

According to this check-up reproductions of stories about Fox short subjects have increased 100 per cent in recent months and reports from the branch offices state that exhibitors are employing the theatre aid material to a much greater degree than heretofore. The O. Henry, Van Bibber and "Helen and Warren" comedies have been widely exploited by Fox.

Production stills from "The Invention," featuring Elinore King, released by Davis Distributing Division.

New Pathe Serial September 27

First Chapter of "Wild West" Heads List of Short Subjects Announced for Week

THE first chapter of "Wild West," Pathe's new 10 episode serial produced by C. W. Patton, will head that company's schedule of short subjects for the week of September 27th. "The Land Rush" is the title of the first episode of the play in which Jack Mulhall and Helen Ferguson are co-featured and which was produced at the Miller Brothers "101 Ranch" in Oklahoma.

Also on the program for the week of the 27th are two double reel comedies, a single reel comedy, an issue of Pathe Review, "Aesop's Film Fables," "Topics of the Day" and the regular issues of Pathe News.

"The Land Rush" is concerned with the opening of the Oklahoma territory in 1893. The action in this chapter of "Wild West" introduces the important characters of the play to be presented in two reel installments. Those who appear in support of Mulhall and Miss Ferguson are Eddie Phillips, Virginia Warwick, Inez Gomez, Ed and Fred Burns, and Gus Seville. The scenario for "Wild West" was written by J. F. Natteford and the picture was directed by Robert F. Hill.

"Your Own Back Yard," a Hal Roach comedy starring the "Our Gang" comedians, is one of the two-reel pictures on the program. Farina appears in the principal role in this fun-film directed by Bob McGowan. Farina is declared "out" by the gang because his goat ate up two radio sets and a bicycle and the dusky dot gets his revenge in a beautiful dream in which he becomes wealthy and spends his riches lavishly before the very eyes of the rest of the Gang.

"Love and Kisses" is a two-reel comedy featuring Alice Day, produced by Mack Sennett and directed by Eddie Cline. Raymond McKee plays the boy opposite Miss Day, and Sunshine Hart is a matchmaker. Jack Cooper is her son and her choice for Alice. Preparations for the wedding progress right up to the eventful day, which becomes brimful of excitement for the groom-who-would-be and the groom-to-be. Barbara Tennant plays the role of the matchmaker's daughter, and Vernon Dent appears as the family butler.

"The Big Kick" is a Hal Roach one-reeler directed by Fred L. Gniol. Billy Engle appears as "Dinky" Dubbs, Earl Mohan is "Cuckoo" Kelly, work dodger de luxe. The plot concerns Dubbs' efforts to make a knockout champion out of Kelly.

Pathe Review No. 39 offers: "Fireside Factories," how the peasants of Picardy manufacture cloth in their own homes; San Antonio, Texas, one of the series of American Cities in Pathecolor; and "Seeing Things," chapter one of "The Magic Eye" series photographed by Louis Tolhurst. "Hungry Hounds" is the cartoon comic of "Aesop's Film Fables."

Sennett Signs Lord to New Contract

MACK SENNETT has signed Del Lord to a new directorial contract, under which he will start work on a new series about October 15th following a vacation trip in the Northwest and east. Lord has made thirty-two comedies for release through Pathe during the past two years. Before returning to the studios Lord will look over the latest musical comedies on Broadway.

Century Releases "Crying for Love"

Universal exchanges this week released a new two-reel Century Comedy titled "Crying For Love." Eddie Gordon is starred and Blanch Payson plays the leading feminine role.

The story, written and directed by Noal Smith, centers about the courtship and marriage of a small, meek man and a woman who is tall and commanding.

"Inkwell" Reel to Be Hand Colored by Brock Process

Another Max Fleischer "Out-of-the-Inkwell" reel is to be produced in colors by the Brock Process, Red Seal, releasing these subjects, announces. The color process was used for "Ko-Ko Celebrates the Fourth," recently issued, and the reception accorded the picture has decided sponsors of the pictures to employ the same color in connection with "Ko-Ko's Thanksgiving," a forthcoming "Inkwell" film.

Short Subjects Publicized In National Magazines

Single reel pictures released by Educational are the subjects of two feature articles in the current issues of American Magazine and Vanity Fair. The article in American Magazine is by John Monk Saunders and deals with Louis H. Tolhurst and his "Secrets of Life" series.

In Vanity Fair Mr. Aldous Huxley, well known critic, devotes a long article to a discussion of "Felix the Cat," which he describes as his favorite dramatic hero.

Kathryn McGuire Has Lead in Fox Comedy

Kathryn McGuire has been assigned the leading role in "Failure," another of the William Fox O. Henry two-reeler series, which is being directed by Daniel Keefe under the personal supervision of George E. Marshall.

Fox offers "Transients in Arcadia," from the O. Henry story.

Production highlights from "The Land Rush," first chapter of Pathe's new serial "Wild West," produced at the Miller Brothers "101 Ranch," with Jack and Helen Ferguson in the leading roles.

Showmen Value News Reels

Day, of Kinograms, Reports "Topicals" Are Big Factor of Most Theatre Programs

DECLARING that he found that the majority of successful exhibitors unhesitatingly pronounce the news reel as important a factor as the feature itself in building patronage, Harvey Day, general sales manager for Kinograms who recently returned from a tour of the Educational Exchanges, which release the Kinograms reels, has made an extensive report to E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, in which he states that the topical reels are firmly established as indispensible units of every motion picture program.

In discussing the results of his trip Mr. Day said:

"The position of the news reel on every exhibitor's program is firmly established, and it will continue to remain so as long as there are motion pictures. This has come about in two ways, first, through the wonderful strides made in the last few years by the news reels themselves in quality of production, speed in getting the news on the screen and higher entertainment value, and second, because the public has created a demand for news reels by increasing interest, which has been brought to the attention of the exhibitor.

"In Milwaukee I talked with Tom Saxe, of the Saxe Amusement Co., and in Philadelphia with Frank Buhler, Managing Director of The Stanley Co., both of whom have devised valuable systems whereby they are in constant touch with their customers. I personally looked over hundreds of letters received in which the writers criticised, suggested or in some manner commented on the shows they had seen in the various theatres under the supervision of these gentlemen. In every one there was a mention of the news reel, showing that this portion of the program remained in their minds as vividly as the feature. Both Mr. Saxe and Mr. Buhler told me that their selection of news reels was given exactly as much care as that of their features, which is as high a compliment to the progress of this branch of the industry as one could expect."

Pathe Busy With Production

Directors Busy With New Comedies After Vacation Period at Roach Studios

WITH the vacation period at an end, production activities on Pathe comedies are booming at the Hal Roach studios. Executives, directors, stars and players are prepared to plunge into a busy season. F. Richard Jones, director general at the Roach lot is leading the rush, following a three weeks' vacation.

Among those who have just gotten under way are Leo McCarey, who has started production on a Charley Chase two-reel comedy, in which Katherine Grant has the leading feminine role. Robert McGowan is lining up his forces preparatory to launching another "Our Gang" comedy. He is scheduled to start production during the week.

Director Fred L. Guiol and Glenn Tryon are busy with a new story in which Tryon will be starred. Clyde Cook, Lucien Littlefield, Tyler Brooke and Jimmie Finlayson will start productions in the immediate future.

Fred Wood Jackman, who for the past five months has been busy with "Rex," the equine wonder in the production of "The Devil Horse," is getting down toward the final shots of that picture. Jackman is making the picture in Eastern Montana with Roy Clements as associate director and Yakima Canutt, Gladys McConnell and Robert Kortman handling the human roles.

Two additions have been made recently to the scenario staff at the Roach studios. They are C. R. Wallace, associated with Universal during the past two years in a scenario and co-directorial capacity, and Frank Terry, who has been identified with a number of the leading producers.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Life's Greatest Thrills"
(Universal—International—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

MORE thrills than there are in a feature, might well be taken as the slogan for this amazing novelty release, for it would be no overstatement of the facts. Few features within the memory of this reviewer have carried the genuine "wallop" that these two reels pack. And why not? For within the narrow space of two spools of film has been crowded the dramatic highlights of years of work by International Newsreel. Its outstanding achievements are all here. The only wonder is that no one has thought before of making a compilation of this sort.

The opening scenes show how a newsreel is put together—how the cameramen, editors, laboratory men and others put together these newspapers of the screen. Following this brief introduction we are led into such thrilling moments as the air flight over the Grand Canyon, the arrival in America of the ZR-3, the Los Angeles breaking through a smoke-curtin, a racing driver tossed to his death when his car crashes, the revolution in Berlin, the parachute drop, the close-ups of Mt. Vesuvius in action, Woodrow Wilson reviewing the American troops on French soil, the first pictures made of the pope, the earthquake in Japan, a cruiser among the ice floes, an accident-filled steeplechase, a ship pounding to pieces on the rocks, a storm at sea—but why enumerate more?

These scenes have a punch that no staged scenes could ever have, for each and every one bears the stamp of truth and reality—we know that it actually happened and get a corresponding "kick" out of it. This is, in every way, an outstanding novelty release.

"Somewhere in Somewhere"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

CHARLIE MURRAY and Lucien Littlefield, than whom there are no more seasoned screen comedians, are co-featured in this Hal Roach two-reeler directed by James W. Horne. It is a "war play" with its action centering about the farcial happenings to a pair of buddies in the trenches in France. They are sent on heroic missions and fumble and falter into ultimate success.

The incident which has been introduced here is familiar and over-familiar to the screen fans. After seeing this picture there is the feeling that perhaps the comedy producers would do well to leave the war out of their operations until such time as there is some bit of inspiration to employ it as a background for an idea which has fundamental humor. Surely there is no longer any fun left in the device which places a weakling soldier in the situation of going out almost single handed to meet the enemy—particularly when there is so much realism in the background.

The picture may succeed moderately well in the majority of theatres, but it cannot class as something uproarous or stimulating. Laughs that develop will result from individual items of action, such as when a shell, propelled by a wire, follows a fleeing soldier and eventually reaches its target in the seat of his pants, but nothing in the way of characterization or story continuity is there to carry a humorous mood. It all may be very funny, this jumble of tumbles, consternation over the pungent smell of a piece of Limberger cheese, and running away from shells, but this reviewer found it all distractingly dull and stupid.

The Cast

Patrick O'Brien.....Charlie Murray
Livingston Toots.....Lucien Littlefield
Captain .....Noah Young

Directed by James W. Horne

The Story.—An Irishman and a Boston chap are buddies in a forward trench on the battlefields of France. Toots is unskilled in the ways of a warrior and thinks the gas alert is a call to dinner. Later when a piece of Limber cheese is brought into the trench he rings the alarm for the men to don their gas masks. The captain sends the two boys "over the top" to establish a line of communication with the trench. Toots proves a great handicap to the more skillful O'Brien, but after several narrow escapes, including victories in races with shells, they succeed and are hailed as heroes.

Summary.—A very conventional slapstick affair with the battlefield as its setting. The material is worn and the incident familiar, though a pair of good comedy actors make every effort to produce laughs. The action moves along with some pace and the production is good.

"A Good Program Must Have Novelties"

"I Remember"
(Short Films Syndicate, Inc.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

VENTURINI has produced n this picture a visualization of Thomas Hood's immortal poem which is a charming pastoral study. It is, in effect, a recollection of boyhood days, with the subtitles in the form of verses from the poem, together with others that Hood overlooked.

The outstanding merit of "I Remember" is in the lovely rural backgrounds, many of which are exquisitely photographed. Through these scenes wanders a carefree boy, splendidly acted by an unnamed youth, whose trials and triumphs make up the thread of the story. He is accompanied in some of these by his little crippled brother, who lends a note of wistful pathos to the whole. In others, it is the childhood sweetheart who figures prominently. The ol' swimmin' hole, Sunday School, the swing in the highest tree, climbing for birds' nests, and such incidents make up the principal action.

"I Remember," then, is rather a novelty subject—partly a scenic with a novel twist, and partly a miniature drama. It should prove a pleasing contrast to a rough-and-tumble comedy feature of hair-raising melodrama, by virtue of its quiet charm.

"Flirting with Death"
(Red Seal—Two Reels)

THIS short subject, a sequel to "The Silvery Art," shows what can be accomplished on skis if you've followed out the instruction outlined in the above named subject.

Three daring climbers commence the task of climbing Mount Rosa, the highest point of the Swiss Alps. It's a hard climb, necessitating bridging chasms and banks of ice and snow. And then the descent, during which the men are tied to each other at first, for safety's sake, but break away at the finish and then it's a case of every man for himself. Pictorially the film leaves nothing to be desired.

This should prove an attraction in any house. —HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Fair Warning"
(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

AL ST JOHN has been a lot funnier in many of his comedies than he is in this one. He displays all his gymnastic ability, but his gags are hardly up to the usual standard he has set in the past. The story too, is a trifle weak and too slow in the telling. It is merely a vehicle to permit of his tumbling about and indulging in a lot of slapstick.

Al is the bank messenger entrusted by his boss with the delivery of valuable bonds much sought by a pair of ex-convicts. Those bonds and the theft of a costly pearl necklace, which also passes into the possession of Al furnish much of the comedy in the picture. The pearls become unstrung in a chicken coop and are consumed as hen fodder so Al delivers the pearls to their rightful owner via the fowls. The bonds also eventually find their proper destination after the crooks have switched a black bag containing a bomb for the original package. There's a lot of suspense lurking in those black bags and also some good comedy, but the comedian has done so much better in the past that too much is probably expected of him.

The Cast

The Bank Messenger.....Al St John
A Crook.....Otto Fries
Another Crook.....Bert Young
The Banker's Daughter.....Virginia Vance

A Jack White production written and directed by Stephen Roberts.

The Story.—Al the bank messenger is entrusted with the delivery of a bag of bonds to the home of the banker. The bonds are sought by a pair of crooks. All three arrive at the height of a lawn party and the crooks steal a valuable necklace from one of the guests. They slip it into Al's pocket and then substitute a black bag containing a bomb for the original package of bonds. Al eventually delivers both the necklace and the bonds after a series of episodes in which the crooks are bested.

Summary.—A slapstick comedy that offers St John an opportunity to display his acrobatic ability, but hardly up to the standard set by the comedian in the past. There are a number of good comedy situations however and they should provide some laughs in the neighborhood houses.

"Silvery Art"
(Red Seal—Two Reels)

THIS two-reeler should prove interesting both from the knowledge of skiing one draws from it as well the ocular appeal resulting from the beautiful scenes among the Swiss Alps, where the action takes place.

The spectator is initiated into the art of skiing from starting operation—attaching the skis to the feet— and thence the proper method of walking, skating, climbing and descending cliffs. The reel winds up with some fancy stunts.

"Silvery Art" will probably go better in the larger houses.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"The Ugly Duckling"
(Pathe—One Reel)

A HUMAN interest tale about the ugly duckling's sublime gesture of gratitude toward the young chicks which beg their mother to receive him into the brood, is revealed in this animated cartoon in the "Aesop's Film Fables" series produced by Paul Terry. It makes a fairly amusing and interesting reel.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Regional News from Correspondents

Portland

THE transfer of the control of the Acme Amusement Company into the hands of three prominent Maine amusement operators has been completed. The corporation is capitalized at $10,000 and owns theatres at Kennebunk and Vinalhaven.

Leon P. Gorham of this city and Wilfred Duffy and Howard Duffy, managers of the Old Orchard Pier, are the three new owners. Mr. Gorham is manager of the Maine Theatre Supply Company and operates motion picture theatres in Yarmouth, Gorham and South Portland.

The house at Kennebunk will be closed a week for alterations.

Arthur F. Kendall, leader of the Strand Theatre orchestra has completed an orchestral arrangement entitled "The Evolution of pieces between the dates 1894 and Jazz" which made a big hit at the Strand this week.

Permission has been sought to include this overture in the United States Marine Band program with credit given Mr. Kendall for the arrangement. The overture is composed of the most popular 1925 and opens with "The Bowery" and "The Sidewalks of New York." "Seminola" closes the selection.

Mary Bourbeau, assistant contract clerk for Universal, who broke her arm horse back riding, has just returned to work.

W. E. Branson, former booker for Pathe, is now on the road covering southern Nebraska. L. D. Chapman, formerly connected with the Educational Film Company here, has been made booker for Pathe.

Philadelphia

OFFICERS of the Stanley Company of America have been instrumental in forming the Stanley Musical Club of Philadelphia, the plan of which will be one of the most pretentious ever undertaken by motion picture interests in this city. The object of this club is primarily the cultivation of a fraternal spirit among the better class of musicians and it is planned to provide the public with high-class concerts on Sundays and such other times as the concerts will be available to those who otherwise would not be able to attend them. The officers of the Club are: Jules E. Mastbaum, honorary president; Leopold Stokowski, vice-president; Frank W. Buhler, general manager of the Stanley Company, second vice-president; Irving D. Rossheim, controller of the Stanley Company, treasurer. Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, has promised that his organization will give several concerts as part of the program of the Club.

Oscar Neufeld, president of the De Luxe Film Exchange was re-elected president of the Film Board of Trade for the fourth successive year at the September meeting of the Board. Mr. Neufeld has given unstintedly of his time and effort to bring about the present efficiency of the organization and has been largely instrumental in eliminating many of the evils that prevailed in the motion picture industry in Philadelphia prior to the functioning of the Board. Percy A. Bloch, manager of the Philadelphia exchange of Famous Players Lasky, was re-elected vice-president; Ben Amsterdam of Masterpiece Film exchange, was elected treasurer; and Jack Greenberg, secretary. The board of directors will be named by the chair at the October meeting.

Mel Sokolow, of the Paramount sales force, has returned to his duties after an illness which confined him to his home for several weeks.

R. Rosenbaum and James Clark, special representatives of the ad sales department of Paramount, were recent visitors on Vine Street and called a meeting of the sales force of the Philadelphia office to familiarize them with the forthcoming product.

It is understood that the Stanley Company is negotiating for the four theatres owned by the Whitehurst interests in Baltimore and in the event of being unable to acquire the Whitehurst holdings, has secured options on two desirable sites in Baltimore on which it is intended to build.

Ben Amsterdam, representing the independent exchanges in Philadelphia, has returned from New York, where he attended the meeting of independent distributors and has announced plans for the general observation of Independence Week, which will be held in October.

Jules Levy, one of the assistant general sales managers of Universal, was a recent visitor in Philadelphia. Mr. Levy at one time made his headquarters in the Philadelphia exchange as district manager.

South Philadelphia exhibitors are co-operating with the Business Men's Association of Philadelphia in order to put across a Special Movie Week during the latter part of September. It is the first time in Philadelphia that a business organization has tied up with the motion picture men to promote a sectional boosting campaign. The theatres will reciprocate the advertising which will be given them by the merchants and it is believed that the plan will work out for the general benefit of South Philadelphia interests.

Leonard Deery, shipper at the local office of F. B. O. was married recently to Miss Elsie Pettit, of Rosemont, Pa.

The Sherwood Theatre, 54th & Baltimore Ave., which has been closed while undergoing extensive improvements, reopened September 12th.

Indianapolis

REOPENING of remodeled and renovated theatres dominates the news from Indiana this week. Hoosier theatre owners show no lack of faith in business prospects for the winter from the amounts invested in enlargements and improvements.

The Circle symphony orchestra at Indianapolis is back in the pit with Bakaleinikoff directing, after being supplanted during the summer with name acts and jazz bands. The return of the orchestra was one of the features of the ninth anniversary week celebration of the Circle.

Kansas City

THREE youthful bandits held up the Miller theatre, one of the largest downtown houses in Wichita, Kas., Saturday night and escaped with $2,800. The robbery was the most daring one attempted in Wichita in several years.

"And they think it incongruous if a woman who has been in pictures for ten or twelve years plays anything else but 'mother' parts in a white wig and a fichu."

That was the outburst of Clara Kimball Young in Kansas City this week. Miss Young, who celebrated her thirty-fifth birthday Monday, said there no longer remained any doubt about her statement that she was "through" with the screen.

The arrangement of the Orpheum theatre, Kansas City, for staging "Charleston" contests each night this week not only proved a popular move, but was good for liberal newspaper support, including cuts and stories on the winners.

The honor in Kansas City of being first to the newspapers with the news that the destruction of the Shenandoah would be in a Pathe reel "now on the road" was won by Lawrence Lehman of the Orpheum theatre, or, rather, Fred Spear, his publicity man.

Every one was "brushing up" in anticipation of a big fall business along Kansas City's movie row last week. There was activity aplenty.

Louis Reichert, former P. D. C. branch manager, accepted a position as Warner-Vitagraph branch manager.

The Universal trade showing was held at Chillicothe, Mo., Tuesday, attended by a large number of small town exhibitors.

About 150 exhibitors and friends of the operators attended a special screening of "Manhattan Madness," which marked the graduating exercises of a class of the Kansas City School of Motion Picture Projection, operated in conjunction with the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri for non-union operators.

Sidney M. Katz, formerly with F. B. O., has been appointed assistant sales manager of that branch in Kansas City.

Roy Churchill, F. B. O. branch manager, contends that business is better right now than it has been in three or four years.

Fred Hershorn, Universal short subjects manager at Kansas City, became a benedict and left for Buffalo with the bride, Miss Mildred Wilson, to join the Warner-Vitagraph force.

Lloyd Willis, special Warner-Vitagraph representative, spent a busy week in Kansas City, as did C. S. Baker, who was on his way to San Francisco, where he will become Universal assistant branch manager.

An exhibitor of Garden City, Kas., called C. A. Schultz on the telephone—a distance of 400 miles—to congratulate him upon being appointed P. D. C. branch manager.

J. L. Grantham has been made assistant booker at the Warner-Vitagraph branch.

Earl Cunningham, Paramount exploiteer, is putting in a busy week on the road this week.

Rebecca Jofre, home office manager of the sales promotion department for Universal, was a Kansas City visitor.

W. E. Truog, Universal district manager, made a hurried trip to New York, while J. A. Epperson, Pathe branch manager, returned from a gratifying trip through the Kansas and Missouri territory.

Harold Cass, First National salesman, who covers his territory in a motor car, took his vacation last week and went on a tour with his car.

"Yep, my show's 'blown up'," said the voice of H. E. Schildhter, Madison, Kas., exhibitor to C. W. Allen, assistant branch manager of Warner-Vitagraph branch at Kansas City, "unless an airplane can be obtained."

There was no airplane, no fast train—merely a "used" model of Ford touring car belonging to Allen, who made the trip of 162 miles over bumpy roads in a little more than four hours.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were: F. G. Weary, Farris theatre, Richmond, Mo.; Roy Burford, Arkansas City, Kas.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee theatre, Lawrence, Kas.; Ben Levy, Hippodrome, Joplin, Mo.; S. E. Wilhoit, Jefferson, Springfield, Mo.

Last week marked much projection room improvement in theatres in the Kansas City territory. Peerless reflector arc equipment was installed in the Newman theatre, Kansas City, while G. E. High Intensity lamps were installed at the Orpheum, Kansas City. A new Simplex projector and Raven Haftone screen equipment was installed at the Grand theatre, Winfield, Kas. Two Simplex projectors were installed in the Plaza theatre, Leoti, Kas., while two Simplex projectors also were installed in the Pantages theatre, Kansas City.

Not in a long time has any exploitation stunt received the wide publicity and space given Metro-Goldwyn's trackless train in Kansas City this week. Aside from a "run-in" with a "hard boiled" traffic patrolman, who refused to let a safety zone be blocked, the 3-day visit in Kansas City was a pleasant and successful one.

St. Louis

WHILE hundreds of persons were enjoying the show at the Lindell Airdome, Grand boulevard and Natural Bridge avenue, St. Louis, one night recently a sneakthief gained entrance to the cashier's cage and escaped unnoticed with the evening's receipts $305.65.

Mrs. Lili Torline, 4938 Leahy avenue, cashier had bundled the money into a newspaper which she placed on a chair. She then departed from the cage for a few minutes. When she returned ten minutes later the money had disappeared.

Negotiations have been opened looking to the purchase of Stolberg Lake at Belleville, Ill., by a St. Louis syndicate. It is planned to convert the resort into a first class amusement park.

Harry Greenman, manager for Loew's State Theatre, Eighth and Washington avenue, was host to the orphans of St. Louis at a special performance of Charlie Chaplin's "The Gold Rush" the morning of Saturday, September 12. Arrangements were perfected for caring for approximately 4000 orphans, the capacity of the big first run palace. Every orphanage in the city sent its quota to the show.

Steve Kaiman, owner of the O'Fallon Park and Baden theatres has had plans prepared for a new theatre to be erected at 8200 North Broadway. Theodore Steinmeyer, International Life Building, is the architect and contractors will be asked to submmit bids this week. The house will be two-stories, 60 by 130 feet and cost upwards of $50,000. It will have 800 seats.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Lilly, formerly of Hannibal, Mo., have purchased the Irma Theatre, Bartmer avenue, from Dave Nelson and associated. The price paid has not been revealed.

Tom McKean, manager of the local F.B.O. office, accompanied by his wife departed Saturday, September 12, on a two weeks' vacation tour of the East. He will call at the home office before returning to St. Louis.

A local syndicate headed by Louis Dremer has purchased the Elite and Cozy theatres at Metropolis, Ill., from J. A. Weece. The houses have a total of 1150 seats.

W. W. Watts of Springfield, Ill., is vacationing in Cuba.

FOUR hundred members of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce who returned on Friday, September 11, from their four-day annual cruise were invited with their wives to be the guests of the Wilmer & Vincent Theatre Company in Harrisburg, in the Victoria theatre.

The cruisers accepted the invitation and the occasion served as a sort of a reunion of those who took the trip. During the cruise a Wilmer & Vincent camera man took motion pictures of all the important incidents. These and other film pictures of the cruise were taken under direction of C. Floyd Hopkins, Harrisburg, manager of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres, to be displayed in the Harrisburg theatres. Another feature of the cruise was a visit to witness a performance in the Keith Palace theatre, in Cleveland.

Peter Magaro, veteran motion picture exhibitor, of Harrisburg, gained the distinction of being the member of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce Cruise who traveled the longest distance in order to go along on the trip. Mr. Magaro was in Paris at the time he decided to make the tour with the Chamber, it having been his original intention not to return to America until late in the Fall. He altered this plan, however, and arranged to cut short his Continental tour to reach Harrisburg in time for the cruise.

Advertisements in the Easton newspapers state that the Fox Film Company has again selected the Strand Theatre in that city for the presentation of their "1925-1926 master productions."

On September 14, when Loew's, Inc., took over control of the Colonial Theatre, Reading, which they purchased from Carr & Schad, Inc., the Carr & Schad office force moved from the Colonial to the Arcadia theatre building. Carr & Schad control a number of theatres in Reading and Lebanon. Dr. H. J. Schad, president of the company, stated while it is the ultimate plan to build a new theatre with seating capacity of 3,200 on the site of the Arcadia and adjacent properties that have been acquired, the construction work cannot be started for several years because of leases held by tenants occupying some of the buildings that are to be razed.

A special added attraction to the program of motion pictures at Nixon's Academy, Hagerstown, Md., during the week of September 7, was a series of local films showing Hagerstown industries, stores, merchants and other business and professional men and scenes about some of the public schools. A number of free tickets for these shows were dropped from an airplane which flew over the city.

Marian Nixon, Universal leading woman

New projection machines and a large amount of other new equipment have been installed in the Opera House, Mauch Chunk, by the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, which controls the theatre.

The Chicago Stock Company, which was holding forth at the Park Theatre, Altoona, during the summer, terminated its engagement there.

Each day in its newspaper advertisements the Rialto theatre, Allentown, prints a local telephone number and announces "if this is your telephone number come to the box office and receive two free tickets."

As an added attraction at the Cambria picture theatre, Johnstown, during the week of September 14, Edna Wallace Hopper, the actress, appeared in person four times daily in an act written and staged for her by Raymond Hitchcock.

Carr & Schad, Inc., have just completed extensive alterations in the Strand theatre, Reading, to equip it for the presentation of combined vaudeville and picture shows. The stage has been made larger, a number of dressing rooms installed and the orchestra pit extended. New electrical devices have been provided.

The Savoy theatre, Bethlehem, which was formerly the Lorenz, and which was recently acquired by Lou Berman, of Philadelphia, is now being managed by Mrs. Bertha Emmett, formerly manager of the Colonial, a Wilmer & Vincent house in Harrisburg, and prior to that manager of one of the leading picture theatres in Allentown.

C. Wilbur Hoffman, camera man, has been employed by the management of the New Strand theatre, recently opened in York by the Nathan Appell interests, to film local things of interest in and around York. The regular showing of local events on the Strand screen is a new feature of the theatre's programs.

Denver

HICKMAN PRICE, representative of the fire prevention department of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, was a visitor in Denver last Tuesday. He spent a short time with the President and Secretary of the Film Board of Trade, after which a few fire drills were held. Mr. Price ar- Salt Lake Board in connection with his department. He left Denver Tuesday noon for Dallas, Texas.

Eugene O'Brien, featured player in First National's "Graustark."

Harry Nolan, district supervisor for First National Pictures, Inc., left early in the week for Salt Lake City, Utah, for a few days visit with the local branch of his organization in that city.

Dave Bader, personal representative of Carl Laemmle, President of Universal Film Corporation, has been a visitor in the city for the past few days spending most of his time in the local branch of Universal at Broadway and Stout. Bader arrived in Denver from Kansas City, Missouri, and will leave shortly for Oklahoma City. It is reported that he is arranging to put into force a system whereby all small exhibitors will be afforded an opportunity to review Universal products in the projection room.

Bill Mathews has arrived in Denver to take charge of the local office of Film Booking Offices. He will succeed Sid Weisbaum who was recently transferred to the San Francisco office. Bill has a host of friends in this territory who are glad to see him back. He was formerly salesman working out of the Denver office.

Charles Gilmour, manager of Warner Brothers, made a short business trip to Cheyenne, Wyo. Hugh Braly, manager of Famous Players-Lasky, motored to Chadron, Nebraska, for a visit to James Pace who owns and operates the theatres in that city.

H. I. Mason, former assistant manager of Warner Brothers, has been engaged by the local branch of Fox to assume the duties of booker. Since the taking over of Vitagraph Mr. Mason has been engaged in other lines outside of the industry. His many friends are glad to see him back and wish him the best of success in his new connection.

All Denver theatres enjoyed capacity houses Saturday, Sunday and Monday of last week for the reason that several railroads gave exceptionally low excursion rates into Denver. It is estimated that approximately 15,000 visitors were in the city during that time. Every theatre on Curtis Street was crowded. Another low excursion rate will be given in the near future.

S. H. Horner, owner and manager of the Emblem Theatre, popular suburban house of Denver, has been appointed by Mr. Huffman, President of the M. P. T. O. of Colorado, as a permanent exhibitor member of the Board of Arbitration succeeding Jacob Eppler who recently resigned from the Board. Mr. Eppler has severed his connection with the Ogden heatre and will leave for California in the near future. Mr. Horner is an experienced theatre owner and safe to say this selection is made with great satisfaction among his fellow exhibitors.

Les Weir, district manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, was a visitor in Denver for a few days having just arrived from New York City. While in Denver he closed contracts with the new State heatre of Curtis Street for practically the entire output of Producers. Mr. Weir will leave shortly for Los Angeles.

Albany

IF Arthur Whyte, of New York, and of the Peerless Booking agency, pays a visit to this section, let him bring his golf clubs for some of the exchange managers along Film Row are planning to take his measure on the links.

Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Schine are back in Gloversville, from a honeymoon spent during the last week or ten days, as the couple swung over New York State, with a day or so at Lake Placid, another in Richfield Springs, and two or three in New York City. During the time, Mr. Schine simply refused to talk business, but now that he is back home it's a different story.

The Rialto, in Glens Falls, which was badly damaged by fire some months ago, is expected to be in shape for reopening not later than November 1. Last Saturday witnessed the opening of Fred Mausert's new house in Glens Falls. The theatre was constructed out of an old church which Mr. Mausert purchased late in the spring.

E. J. Smith, district manager for Vitagraph, was in town during the past week, and after a conference with J. N. Klein, local manager, the two departed for Utica, where they saw Nate Robbins and some of the other exhibitors.

Joe Miller, who handles Renown product out of Buffalo, working as far east as Albany, was in town during the past week. Mr. Miller announced that Robert Wagner, of Little Falls, a former exhibitor, who became a salesman for Renown in this territory a few weeks ago, had tendered his resignation and returned to Little Falls. It is the general expectation that Mr. Wagner will later associate himself with some theatre in the capacity of manager.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Boyd, of this city, together with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stombaugh, of New York, have been guests during the week of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Leonard, of Syracuse, at their camp near Boonville. Mr. Boyd is local manager for Associated Exhibitors.

Charles R. Rogers, who is giving his personal attention to the making of a new series of Westerns starring Harry Carey for Pathe Release.

The fascination of Florida real estate is still manifest among the exhibitors of New York state. William Dillon, of Ithaca, president of the New York state M. P. T. O., has just returned from Florida, while Mrs. W. C. Carpenter, an exhibitor in Lake George, is planning to spend the winter in the south.

Ted O'Shea, local manager for Metro-Goldwyn, held a sales meeting during the past week, with Lester Wolf, Louis Mendley, and Alex Weisman, present. Mr. O'Shea's sister, Margaret, of Buffalo, has been spending a couple of weeks here as the guest of her brother.

The theatres in Syracuse are once more back on standard time, much to the satisfaction of the managers and owners. The city has been operating on new time up until September 11.

Joe Weidman, who with his brother, Charles, owns the Central theatre in Albany, is becoming more and more convinced that something must be done next year to save the motion picture theatres from the inroads and losses caused by daylight saving. While the summer has been but fair at the Central theatre, the fact remains, said Mr. Weidman, that the evening shows, despite advertising and every other effort, were confined to but one show a night, as it was impossible to get the people out on account of daylight saving.

Joe Saperstein, manager of Harmanus Bleecker Hall in Albany, encounters no trouble in securing entries in his Charleston dance contest, staged each Monday night, with the finals on November 2. But when it comes to getting amateur talent for each Thursday night, Mr. Saperstein employs scouts, and as a result is able to present some highly commendable acts. Through admitting children, unaccompanied by parents, free, at all matinees except on Saturday, Mr. Saperstein has been able to maintain good business throughout the summer.

Richard Bloomingdale, who has been with Julius Berinstein, at the Palace in Troy, has been promoted by Mr. Berinstein to the management of the Hudson theatre in Albany. At the Palace, Thomas Norris has been made manager, which allows Mr. Berinstein more time to give to the various theatres in this section that are being run by the Berinstein brothers. The Palace and Hudson theatres started off last week with double features, which will prevail each Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday from now on.

The Regent theatre in Albany is still closed, but will reopen the latter part of this month, by which time it is expected that the work of redecorating and otherwise improving the house, will have been completed. While this work is in progress, Herman Vineberg will devote his entire attention to the Albany theatre.

Mr. and Mrs. Alec Herman, were in Sharon Spa, a week ago, visiting Mrs. Herman's mother who is spending a few weeks there.

Dwight C. Leeper, vice-president Richmount Pictures who recently returned from Europe.

Charles L. Reed has taken over the theatre in Windsor, according to letters received on Film Row. Visitors along the Row last week included Julius Byck, of Tannersville, as well as G. H. Garvey, who has theatres in Clinton and Oriskany Falls. It was Mr. Garvey's first trip to Albany in quite some time, and with the numerous changes that have taken place along the Row, it was necessary for him to introduce himself in some places.

Louis Schine was in New York city during the week. Vic Warren, of Massena, who is busy these days in putting up a business block as well as in looking after his theatre, was also in New York during the week.

Harry Hellman, owner of the Royal theatre in Albany, is planning to make certain improvements to his summer camp on Crooked Lake, in order that he can spend weekends during the fall, when there is good partridge shooting nearby and when the surrounding mountains will be a blaze of color. The camp is known as Camp Neil, being named after Mr. Hellman's son. Incidentally, the Royal is observing its sixth anniversary this week, and both Mr. and Mrs. Hellman are the recipients of many congratulations. The theatre is one of the best run of any in this part of the state.

Sol Manheimer, manager of the Robbins theatres in Watertown, used to be a film salesman, so it it not to be wondered at that when some of the exchange managers and salesmen from here, hit the northern city, that he sees to it that they have a good time. There is always a plate of cheese and crackers and maybe something to wash it down. Mr. Manheimer is using fourteen models this week in connection with the showing of "The Dressmaker from Paris," at the Olympic. At the Neighboring Avon, vaudeville and pictures will be shown from now on. Mr. Manheimer reports business as having been good throughout the entire summer.

Keeping his admission prices on Labor Day the same as on any other day, Julius Berinstein, of the Colonial in Albany, pulled a good stroke on Labor Day, and packed his theatre even during the afternoon, so that the gallery was even filled. The price of admission was ten cents. It must be that many of those who attended expected to pay holiday prices, for nine out of ten put down more than a dime for their admission and appeared surprised when they were told that no increase prevailed.

Alec Papayanakos, of Canton, his brother James, of Gouverneur, and still another brother, Harry of Potsdam, are now setting the pace in that part of northern New York in pictures shown and in business done. This is not to be wondered at, however, when one stops and reminisces a bit for years ago, when movies were in their infancy, it was the Papayanakos brothers that provided entertainment for Watertown and in return started the groundwork for the fortune which later came their way.

When Claude Fredericks, owner of the Capitol theatre in Pittsfield, Mass., ran "The Covered Wagon" a year ago last Labor Day, he established a house record that lasted for exactly one year. On the recent Labor Day, Mr. Fredericks, playing "The Coast of Folly," made a new house record and one which he says he is now out to smash a year hence.

Bob Landry, of Ogdensburg, used "The Ten Commandments" as his feature for four days last week while the city was filled with persons attending the county fair. In conjunction with another party, Mr. Landry also has a theatre in Malone, and here he played "The Ten Commandments" for three days.

Otto Eigen is still devoting himself to his novelty store in Sharon Springs, and will probably not return to the motion picture theatre. Mr. Smalley is running Mr. Eigen's house, but whether he will keep it open throughout the winter is not known.

Perhaps Alec Weisman and Ted O'Shea, of the Metro-Goldwyn exchange didn't get a thrill last week as they were driving back to Albany through the Adirondack region. All of a sudden, out of the brush near North Creek, jumped a couple of deer and further along appeared two red fox. Mr. O'Shea and Mr. Weisman stopped with C. H. Wade, who runs a theatre and a hotel in North Creek. Mr. O'Shea is still talking of a wonderful bookkeeping system installed by Mr. Wade, at an expense of $1,200.

Bob Yates, of Lake George, was in town Tuesday on his way to New York. Louis Buettner, of Cohoes, was in Syracuse last week, attending a meeting of the Albany and Buffalo zones. George Dwore, of Schenectady, secretary of the Albany zone, was unable to be present.

Buffalo

A PITIFUL condition arose the other day when the champion pinochle shark of New York state was taken into camp by an amateur. The champion, one Walter Hays of Buffalo, vice president of the Mark-Strand interests, has been having things his own way on the trains between New York and Buffalo for lo, these 20 years, until he met up with Charley Hayman of Niagara Falls, who, it seems, also plays a wicked game when he gets warmed up. But the worst part of this contest was that the champeen advised his best friend, Eugene Falk, secretary-treasurer of the Mark-Strand organization, to lay his wad on the well known Hays' pinochle ability with the result that the Falk bank roll faded away. J. H. Michael, sparring partner, for Charley, bet on the Cataract City kid's tricks to win and as a result made enough to pay his expenses at the Syracuse meeting of the boards of directors of the Buffalo and Albany zones. Moral—Every champeen gets a knockout some day.

E. S. Sharaf has resigned as Syracuse representative of the Buffalo Paramount office. George E. Williams, exploiteer, is in charge of a handsomely decorated Paramount booth at the state fair in Syracuse.

Joe Schuchert, Sr., has been bitten by the Florida real estate boom bug and has gone to that state to take a wallop at some land deals. Joe owns the Colonial and Columbia theatres in Buffalo.

Henry Lally, Dunkirk fillum magnate, has also "cleaned-up," a barrel of coin of realm in Florida lots.

Ben Wallerstein, manager of the Broadway theatre, Buffalo, was host at a party given in honor of Harry T. Dixon, F.B.O. manager in the Hotel Statler, Saturday evening, September 12. It was surprise party for Harry, who was marched right into the banquet room by Basil Brady, Pathe branch manager. There was a goodly representation of exchange men and exhibitors. Harry gave a pathetic speech which moved everyone present to tears. Because of this condition there was no response.

Buffalo exhibitors will be interested to know that their old friend, Bill "Victrola," Mack, former Pathe manager who left town a few years ago to take over the Philadelphia office of the same company, is now short subject sales manager at the home office. Congratulations, Bill. Theatre men in this neck of the woods used to hear all the new stories from Bill, who used to get the boys shaking with laughter and then he would guide their hands in a signature on a fat contract.

Al Beckerich, manager of Loew's State, Buffalo, landed on the front page of the Evening News with a photo of himself and an army of newsboys, through a tie-up with the News on a free screening for the boys of Jackie Coogan in "The Rag Man."

Frank Noel of Akron, O., has been appointed director of publicity at Keith's theatre in Syracuse, succeeding Nelson Mirick of the Salt City. Ruby Belle Mason, former Buffalonian, has been engaged to preside at the console of the new organ. The house is now operating under its new combination policy at 50 cents top, instead of $1.

Manager J. Berkowitz is tickled pink with the success so far of First Graphic Month which was launched September 1 to celebrate the company's third anniversary.

Fay's theatre in Rochester has tied up with the Rochester Herald in a Local Lafs Contest. Each week the offerings of the ten best are filmed on the Fay screen.

Obeying a court order, the Buffalo city council has granted a permit to build a motion picture theatre at 822 Tonawanda street. It is reported that this house will be leased by the Shea Amusement company.

Frank Moynihan has joined the sales staff of Freedom Film corporation of Buffalo. Richard C. Fox, manager, has signed up the new Arrow product 100 per cent. with the Michaels Theatres Enterprises, operating the Plaza, New Ariel, Avon and Cameo theatres in the Queen City of the Lakes.

Nothing like being an all around theatre man. The other night when the operator fainted in the book at the Cataract theatre, Niagara Falls, Manager Eddie Weinberg sprang at the projection machine and stood by until the end of the show.

Jess Kaufman, who has been representing Chase Pictures corporation of Buffalo in the Syracuse territory, has resigned. He has not as yet announced his plans for the future.

Vassiliadis Bros., have taken over the "Linden Theatre" Jefferson Ave., near High St., and are planning big improvements all around. They will continue operating the theatre while improvements are being made.

They also operate the Strand Theatre on Clinton St.

San Francisco

G. C. PARSONS has returned to Film Row in the capacity of exchange manager after a year's association with the National Theatre Syndicate. Prior to this time Parsons was for a good many years manager of the Goldwyn office, but at the time the consolidation of Metro and Goldwyn took place, he affiliated himself with the National Syndicate and Frank Voigt took over the office. Mr. Voigt's health, however, has been very poor for some time and it became imperative for him to resign.

John Spickett, owner of the Palace Theatre, Juneau, Alaska, paid Film Row a visit recently.

Charles Muehlman, manager of the First National Exchange, returned from New York after attending a convention of managers.

Finding the Turk street quarters too small for their increasing business, the Producers Distributing Corporation found it necessary to obtain larger quarters. The old Selznick office at the corner of Golden Gate and Leavenworth had possibilities and appreciating this, Manager M. E. Corey personally worked out a floor plan whereby this corner has now been remodeled into an ideal film exchange.

A serious fire damaged the Orpheum Theatre at Red Bluff putting this house temporarily out of business. Plans by Opera House Ass'n are under way for the immediate repair of same.

Negotiations for a new theatre building in the Hestor District on the Alameda in San Jose, have been completed by the H. R. Roth Realty Co., on the Victor W. Benson property. Ennos Lion and E. Rosenthal, former theatre owners of San Francisco, are to lease the building, which will contain a thousand seats and which will be used for motion pictures only. It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy within six months.

Max Blumenfeld announces the opening of a San Francisco general headquarters office located at 298 Turk street. This circuit has grown very rapidly within a short year and a half. It now constitutes eight theatres. Joe Blumenfeld, son of the managing director of the circuit, will be in charge of the San Francisco office.

Mortimer M. Thomas, who has been connected with the Golden State Theatre and Realty Corporation and in fact one of the organizers, disposed of his stock in the corporation to a group of his present associates about Aug. 26th. The transaction is understood to have involved upwards of $100,000. Thomas retains his individual theatre holdings, the deal in question embracing only the interest in the G. S. T. & R. Corporation.

G. N. Aaronson of the Western Poster Co., in Seattle, spent a couple of weeks in San Francisco at the local office.

Independent Exchange that has for some time operated at 281 Turk street, have taken over the more extensive offices heretofore occupied by the Producers Distributing Corporation at 294 Turk street.

The Red Seal Corporation of New York represented by General Sales Manager Thomas O'Brien, is opening offices on the Pacific Coast. Their San Francisco headquarters are with the All Star Exchange and Abe Markowitz has been appointed manager.

R. M. Ford, for a large number of years associated theatrically in San Francisco and more recently at the Broadway Theatre in Oakland, has just purchased the interest of Mortimer Thomas in this theatre, which now makes him the heaviest stockholder in that house.

Joseph Bauer, formerly of the Wigwaum Theatre, has just returned from Alaska with his family, where they spent the summer.

L. Borg states construction is well under way on the Parkway Theatre, Park Blvd. and East 19th street, Oakland, a new 1,000-seat house, being built by the West Berkeley Theatres, and Golden State Theatres Corporation.

The Robert Morton Organ Co. have opened offices on Golden Gate avenue. The old office of Nat Magner and the adjoining store are being made into one large office.

Mr. Hull of the Ely theatre at Ely, Nevada, and B. B. Byard, Eureka, Cal., both paid visits to this city in quest of pictures.

Miss Edna Escher, Pathe, Los Engeles cashier, stopped off between boats, both coming and going to Vancouver, where she went on her vacation visiting friends in Seattle and Portland.

Rex Midgley of the American Theatre in Oakland left for New York in company with some of the First National delegates, where he will be gone for approximately a month.

Atlanta

F. A. LEATHERMAN announces this week the appointment of Florey W. Russell as salesman in the North and South Carolina territory. Mr. Russell is a native of North Carolina, one of the best known service men in the south, and an authority on musical instruments. He will have offices in the United Film Building, Charlotte, N. C. and will endeavor to make the North and South Carolina exhibitors more widely acquainted with the merits of the Reproduco Pipe Organ.

L. J. Davies, who for the past five years has been general representative for F. A. Leatherman and the Reproduco Pipe Organ line, has been given charge of the Birmingham territory for the company. Mr. Davies will move immediately to Birmingham with his family, and plans to open a branch office there, where he will welcome his many friends and endeavor to take care of their musical necessities.

M. C. Coyne, otherwise known as "Mike," formerly Atlanta manager of United Artists office, later road manager in the south for "The Ten Commandments," and more recently exploitation man of the southern territory for Greater Movie Season, has been appointed by United Artists Corporation as their exploiteer in the Los Angeles and San Francisco exchanges. Mr. Coyne will have charge of the exploiting of all United Artists' product. "Mike" has demonstrated his intention of becoming a good Californian by recently buying a farm near Los Angeles, and has become thoroughly settled there.

John L. Crove, former manager of the Lyric Theatre, Atlanta, who has been affiliated with Famous Players Lasky corporation for the past several years as managing director of various theatres throughout the country, has completed arrangements with the Beaux-Art Amusement Company of Dallas, Texas, whereby he will organize and direct for the season a dramatic stock company to play in the Circle theatre, Dallas.

In spite of the fact that the extreme heat under which Atlanta has been suffering all summer continued and even seemed to grow more intense on Labor Day, and added to the continued absence of orchestras in the pits of all local picture houses, theatres unanimously reported one of the biggest Labor Day businesses they have known in a period of several years' time.

Information from Miami is to the effect that David and Myron Selznick, former executives of the Selznick Pictures Corporation, now bankrupt, are in Miami at the present time promoting a motion picture studio to be located there.

Lee L. Castleberry ,of the Bell Theatre, Gadsden, Alabama, who is one of the most popular exhibitors in these woods, was in the city this week on business.

J. F. Worsley, formerly with Grosset and Dunlap company, and who is well-known to local film folk, was visiting in Atlanta this week. Mr. Worsley recently resigned managership of a Florida theatre.

George Jones of the local Metro-Goldwyn exchange, is authority for the statement that cigars are not the proper smoke for aspiring young bookers. His many friends in the industry will be pleased to know that George has recovered from his trying experience, which experience he says justifies him in the expression of his opinion on the subject.

Fanny Lee Zimmerman, secretary to Arthur Lucas of the Educational Exchange, left town Saturday for a two-weeks vacation. Miss Zimmerman is traveling through the Carolinas in her car, and expects to return to Atlanta within ten days or so.

C. D. Haug, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, has been in the city several days this week, following his activities in various Georgia points in connection with one of their big features.

F. S. Shepard, who represented F. B. O. in the Georgia and Tennesee territory, has resigned from his position on account of ill health. Mr. Shepard leaves this week for the East.

F. L. Davie, manager of the local F. B. O. exchange, plans to take a two weeks' vacation beginning next week. Mr. Davie has not decided yet where he will spend his much needed rest.

Cleveland

HARRIS WOLFBERG is in town, working out of the Cleveland Metro-Goldwyn office. Wolfberg is a home office representative. He expects to be in this territory for several weeks. This is not the first time Wolfberg has been out here. Some six or seven years ago he was manager of the Foursquare exchange in Cleveland. He was also associated with the local Famous-Players-Lasky exchange at one time. So there's a wholesale greeting going on, with Wolfberg as the central figure.

Gillett of the Strand Theatre, Tooele, Utah, and Don Carrothers of the C. & A. Amusement Company of Pocatello, Idaho.

Canada

WHEN Lambert Hillyer, First National director, made "The Knockout" in Northern Quebec, a number of lumberjacks, log rollers and river men were engaged to appear in the picture. Noted among these jacks were the Letang Brothers of Gatineau Point, Quebec, and since the time last spring when they shot the rapids on logs they have been busy filling engagements throughout the Ottawa Valley. Not long ago they put on the stunt of log rolling at the Brighton Beach regatta, Ottawa, and their last appearance of the season was on Sunday, September 13, at Luna Park, Aylmer, Quebec, where they staged their log riding specialty.

Starting September 12, a reduced scale of prices went into effect at the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, the manager of which is Leonard Bishop, but even under the new schedule the admissions are no lower than those charged by houses playing both vaudeville and pictures. The Regent shows pictures exclusively. The prices now range from 65 cents for loges and 50 cents for the orchestra floor down to 25 cents for children.

Rodolph Pelisek, for years the conductor of the Regent Theatre orchestra at Ottawa, Ontario, returned to his post of duty at the theatre on September 12 after an absence of two months in which he was seriously ill in a hospital at Montreal, Quebec. During his illness, the orchestra was directed by Rodolph's brother, Joseph Pelisek.

A startling development occurred at Chambly, Quebec, a few nights ago in Columbus Hall when the discovery was made that the moving picture projection machine had been stolen from the booth. The theatre was well filled with patrons and the show was about to get under way when it was found that the machine was not in its place. No trace of it has been found either. It was valued at $1,250.

Independent Films, Limited, Toronto, has been making excellent headway during recent months on its avowed independent basis. The company has offices in Toronto, Montreal and other cities. The company has signed for the Canadian distribution of the 12 Gotham Productions in the 1925-26 schedule to follow the six Gotham features previously booked. L. Rosenfeld, formerly with the Allens at Toronto, and J. Levine are identified with the Independent Films, Limited.

Exhibitors of Calgary and Edmonton, Alberta, interviewed Hon. Alex. Ross and Attorney-General Brownlee of the Alberta Provincial Government at Edmonton a few days ago to enter objections regarding the stringency of the examination regulations for projection machine operators. A request was made for a board of three or more examiners in place of the one inspector at present who issues licenses. Arrangements have been made for a board of appeal to reconsider several cases of license applicants.

Omaha

THE old Majestic theatre in South Omaha has been remodeled and decorated and is now called the Tivoli. A new pipe organ has been installed and new seats, new stage and other theatre equipment provided. August Herman, who has been assistant manager at Rialto theatre of the Blank Syndicate, is looking after the management of the new house for the present time.

Earl A. Bell, recently appointed branch manager here for Warner Brothers, is on the job. According to the contracts coming into the office, Mr. Bell is "on the job" in every way.

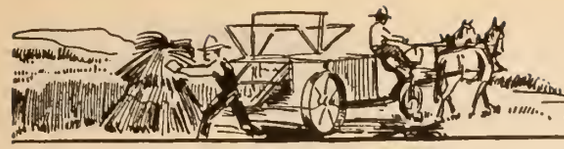
Miss Rutland is a feature dancer in musical comedies. The couple will reside in New York. Mr. Stuckel is now handling the publicity work at Carlin's Park here.

Butte



THROUGH a contract signed recently between Merle Davis, lessee of the Ansonia Amusement company theatres, that include the Broadway, Ansonia and Empress theatres of Butte, and C. F. Parr of Salt Lake, district manager for the Producers Distributing corporation, the entire output of the company has been arranged to be shown at the Broadway. The Producers films will begin with the season opening the first of September.

The hot summer days are passing into history and once more the theatres are crowded to capacity. The Rialto theatre made a big hit all summer by using tons of ice over which the big electric fans of the Rialto, played to keep the theatre cool and many sought the popular theatre just to cool off as well as to enjoy some of the fine programs that Manager W. J. Sullivan always has on his programs.

This is Paramount Week, a celebration of their eighth annual and the various theatres all over the state are tied up in a universal exhibit of the Paramount pictures in which Butte and Anaconda join. The 8th, 9th and 10th will be devoted to the celebration. Paramount salesmen have been working hard to see that the company not only receive the felicitations of all their friends but that these congratulations can be gilt edged with a large cash value.

During the summer Miss Harriet McConnell, motion picture star for the Hal Roach Motion Picture company, visited Butte in company with her mother. During the brief visit in the city City Passenger Agent Cooke of the Union Pacific escorted the distinguished guests on a tour of Butte. Miss McConnell expressed herself greatly interested. She has been working on a picture at Lodge Grass, Montana.

During August, as a special treat and a compliment to the crippled children of Butte and vicinity Manager W. J. Sullivan of the Rialto theatre gave an invitation to attend the afternoon performance. In addition many of the contestants who have appeared at the Monday evening song contests, were on hand to give a special program for the guests.

Des Moines

SEVERAL thousand dollars damage resulted from a fire which injured the interior of the Family Theatre at Davenport last Sunday. The theatre is one of the Blank circuit. The fire which started in the projection booth destroyed the booth and did damage to the seats, walls and screen. The operator was also badly huft. The house will be redecorated, the seats gone over, the screen refinished and new booth supplies provided. The whole job of refurnishing the Family Theatre has been given by Mr. Blank to the Exhibitors Supply Company of Des Moines. Two new Simplex machines with Peerless arcs have been purchased.

Changes have been taking place in the personnel of the Des Moines film exchanges. At Famous Players Bill Curry and Merrill Anderson have been added to the booking staff from the ad sales department. A. H. Blank made a flying trip to New York on First National business but, following telephone conversation with Des Moines he took the opportunity while in New York to converse with officials of the musicians union. Union musicians and stage hands walked out of Blank's houses, the Capitol, Des Moines, Strand, Rialto, Palace, Garden and Majestic on September 10.

Omar J. Kenyon, manager of the Majestic theatre for the last five years, and R. B. Armstrong, of New Bern, N. C., a theatrical producer, have leased the Majestic and opened the new season September 13.

The Majestic is owned and has been operated by the A. H. Blank interests. The house was closed last Saturday night, however.

It is the plan of the new firm to install "The Majestic Players" in the local theatre to present musical comedy programs. Principals will be changed every two weeks and the entire company will change places with other companies occasionally in order to give the public an opportunity to see new faces.

There will be four shows each day and entirely new programs each Sunday and Thursday.

Detroit

B. F. KEITH'S Temple theatre here exploited Pathe's "Our Gang" two-reel comedies in the newspapers, bill boards and in screen announcements. The first picture proved pleasant and held the audience in rapt attention. Incidentally other Pathe subjects are used at this house: Pathe News, Aesop's Fables, and Topics of the Day.

Lew and Ben Cohen signed one of the biggest contracts of the week when they contracted for 100 per cent Warner Bros. product in their houses here, the Colonial, Rex, Victory and Coliseum.

W. S. Butterfield predicts the biggest season so far on the occasion of the fall opening of his 35 theatres in Michigan. He credits the general prosperity of the country for the public's increasing desire for entertainment.

Keith vaudeville is now being played at the Orpheum, Bay City, in addition to pictures. Before only pictures were presenteed.

New Butterfield theatres are under construction in Pontiac, Owosso and Bay City.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan will hold their convention in Grand Rapids, October 7 and 8.

George Davidson and S. K. Decker are busy rolling up new business for A. B. C.

The East End theatre, on East Jefferson avenue, is being torn down to make way for a new theatre seating 1,000. Glenn Watkins will operate the new theatre.

Detroit's newest theatre, the Roosevelt, out Gratiot avenue, will open this week. It is one of the chain operated by the James H. Robertson Enterprises. It is reputed one of the finest residential theatres in the middle west. It will seat 2,000 and present pictures and vaudeville. The latest equipment has been installed to make it ultra-modern.

Preparing for the opening of the new Michigan and State theatres, the former to seat 5,000 and the latter almost 4,000, the John H. Kunsky organization has made several promotions in its personnel. George W. Trendle remains general manager and attorney with increased responsibilities. Thomas D. Moule, supervising manager of the Capitol, Madison and Adams, has been promoted to be general supervising manager of the Capitol, Madison, Adams and State. Malcolm C. MacInnes, of the Adams, will go to the State as manager; Bertram W. Winstanley, assistant manager of the Capitol, becomes manager of that house; Russell C. Chapman, house manager of the Madison, becomes full manager of that house; and Rex W. Minkley takes over the managership of the Adams. Howard O. Pierce will remain in charge of advertising and publicity and stage direction and presentations. Herbert Straub, director of the Madison theatre orchestra, will direct the orchestra at the new State.

New England

INDEPENDENT Films, Inc., has closed up its offices at 128 Meadow street, New Haven, and brought its entire force to the Boston offices except Louis Astor, who was manager of the Connecticut offices. He remains to look after the Independent interests in Connecticut.

Manager Harold Eskine of the Franklin-Film Booking office remains in Connecticut to look after his firm's interests but the offices at 134 Meadow street have been closed and the staff transferred to Boston.

A Montague, treasurer of the Independent Films, Inc., is back at his desk at 10 Piedmont street, Boston, with a splendid coat of tan and a new sparkle in his eye. He spent several weeks in Northern Maine with rod and line and with a better assortment of fish stories than ever before.

Mrs. M. S. Ayer, owner of the Exeter Street Theatre, Boston, returned from Paris on Tuesday and stopped for a few minutes to greet friends along the row on her way from the pier to her home.

Warner Brothers have purchased the Cameo theatre at New Haven from David Brand and have already assumed management of the house.

Louis Gordon, nephew of Nathan H. Gordon of the Olympia circuit has resigned from the Paramount Theatres and has become interested in theatres in Bristol, Manchester and Torrington, Conn. He was formerly with the booking department of the Olympia Theatres.

Al Somerby, manager of the Bowdoin Square Theatre, and Howard Athenaeum in Boston is the recipient of all kinds of congratulations upon the advent of a daughter at his home. Al was recently feted by a group of friends upon the completion of a quarter century as manager of the two Boston houses so that present felicitations mark the second great event in his life in a single year.

But Al is dividing honors with James McManus of Marlboro, general manager of the Elm Amusement circuit, who is likewise receiving good luck tokens from his friends, due to the arrival of a son and heir in his home. Between Al and James, the Row is being plentifully supplied with fragrant Havanas.

Gus Shaffer of the Famous Players-Lasky company, who leaves soon to take up his duties as special representative of Paramount in Germany, was tendered a little surprise party by a host of business friends and associates during the week and presented with a huge stein to take along with him to his new fields. The stein stands about eighteen inches high and Gus promised to fill it to overflowing when he reaches the other side of the pond, just to let the boys back home know what they are missing.

James Greeley of Portland, Me., formerly manager of the Opera House in Bangor, has joined the United Artists as special representative.

Phillip Markell has taken over the Magnet Theatre at 301 Washington street, Dorchester, which was formerly operated by the Buckley interests.

Arthur Lockwood has bought the property and taken over the Circle Theatre at South Manchester, Conn. This house was formerly owned by John Sullivan.

Power's Theatre at Caribou, Me., was visited by fire on Labor Day resulting in the closing of the theatre until extensive repairs are made, probably a matter of several weeks. The fire started in the balcony from undetermined origin and badly damaged the balcony and rear of the main auditorium before being put out. As a result of the blaze the town will be without motion pictures until repairs are made.

William Farnum, temporarily back on the legitimate stage, will appear in the title role in "The Buccaneer," a play based on the life of the pirate Morgan, at the Tremont theatre, Boston, commencing Sept. 14.

Charlotte

N. MERRIWETHER, Manager of the New Concord Theatre, Concord, N. C., a Warner Brothers house, was in Charlotte the past week and made a trip around Film Row visiting his many friends.

Mr. Maydanis, who operates the Liberty Theatre, at Oxford, N. C., a colored theatre, was a Charlotte visitor the past week buying product for Fall and Winter use and setting in dates.

Frank Bryan and R. D. Craver spent Labor Day at the lake at Rockingham, N. C., fishing, and now the managers in Film Row are hearing innumerable fish stories from these two nimrods.

A. B. Huff, General Manager of the Broadway, American, Orpheum and Rose Theatres at High Point, N. C., was a Charlotte visitor the past week. Huff states that he expects to have one of the best seasons in the history of High Point.

J. M. Davis, owner of the Capitol and Iris theatres of Salisbury, N. C., who has been ill for some time, is able to be out again, so we understand.

Rufus Davis, Manager of the Liberty Film Exchange, has now become a resident of Charlotte. His wife has joined him here and they have set up house-keeping in Dilworth. We understand that the Metro-Goldwyn office will handle the physical distribution of the Liberty Film Exchange and they will open for business on September 15th.

George Glegg, district auditor, of Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., is in Charlotte to audit the records of the Universal Exchange at this point.

W. S. Scales, of the Rex and LaFayette Theatres, of Winston-Salem, N. C. was a Charlotte visitor the past week to arrange dates on the new product for the coming year.

The Metro-Goldwyn office has a visitor in Mr. Berry, the auditor of their company.

The Broadhurst Theatre, of High Point, N. C., a beautiful $100,000 structure opened its doors on Monday, September 7th. This is one of the most modern theatres in this section. It is beautifully decorated and has every modern device obtainable. The theatre is owned by the Liberty Amusement Company, and Geo. W. Crater is manager.

The Charlotte Theatre, at 23 W. Trade Street, opened its doors at 10 o'clock September 7th. This picture house is modernly equipped throughout, has a seating capacity of 500 and all seats are of the air cushion variety. With the opening of this house a new plan of picture production will be produced in Charlotte. Big pictures previously shown here will be brought back for return engagements at this house. The charges for admission will be popular prices, 10 and 20 cents. Harry K. Lucas, the manager, states the plan has proven very satisfactory in many other large cities. The theatre will be one of the theatres operated by the Sunset Amusement Company, of Atlanta. The slogan of chairs, ventilation and projection is enforced.

Houston

ABE SILVERBERG, manager of the Folly theatre says: "back to pre-war prices" and has cut the admission of the Folly to 10 cents for adults. This is the only theatre in Houston with a 10 cent admission price. Mr. Silverberg says "a theatre can be run on a 10 cent admission base and no better proof is wanted than the fact that I reduced the admission price of the Crown theatre" (Mr. Silverberg is also manager of the Crown) "from 30 cents to 15 cents several months ago and since that time my business has been wonderful and I am sure that I can operate the Folly at a bigger profit with the lower admission price." The admission price of the Folly was 15 cents for adults before the reduction. The same picture policy will be used as heretofore.

Famous-Players will film another picture in Houston. The first picture "North of 36" was filmed in Houston last fall and another Paramount company is on its way to Houston to film "Woman Handled". It will be filmed on the Bassett Blakley ranch the scenes of the first picture and part of the thousands of head of cattle used in that picture will also be used in this production. The company plans to remain in Houston for about four weeks.

A. L. DeBuer who was connected with the Howard theatre, Atlanta, Ga., for several years has moved his family to Houston where he has accepted a position with the Interstate Amusement Company who control two theatres here.

Gene Finley former publicity manager of the Palace and Old Mill theatres is in Houston on a business trip. Mr. Finley is at the head of his own company who have several pictures which are being shown throughout Texas and Oklahoma.

Work on the Jesse H. Jones new million dollar theatre has been resumed and the basement is ready for the cement. This theatre is being built for Famous Players and will be one of the finest in the south when completed. As yet it is unnamed.

Sam Abrams and family have returned from a week's vacation spent in Dallas and other north Texas towns. He made the trip in automobile.

Mrs. Edna W. Sauners has returned from a motor trip through the middle west. She has reopened her office and is getting affairs lined up for the coming opera season.

Minneapolis

EARL LORENTZ, two years with the Metro-Goldwyn staff, has resigned to take a position with Paramount.

Sam Sandon of the Sandon theatre, Blue Earth, looked over the fair during the week.

Smith and Trimble of the State theatre, Devil's Lake, are putting in an orchestra for this winter's expected rush of prosperity business.

Archie Miller of the Grand theatre, Devil's Lake, isn't worrying much about the coming season. He got 20 bushels of wheat to the acre from a little farm of only 1,000 acres that is only a side issue with him. With wheat selling well above $1.50 a bushel it looks as though Archie would not have to hock the base drum to get his overcoat out of pawn.

The new F. & R. theatre at Fargo is said to be coming on at a great rate and will soon be in shape for opening.

Milton Pay of the Colonial theatre, Sioux Falls, is expecting to put in an orchestra this winter after several years without one in the lean period.

Benny Berger of the Metropolitan theatre, Grand Forks, is shedding fewer tears than usual this year, according to Morris Abrams and it looks like he must be almost making a little money. They say luck has to be too good to be true before Benny turns off the cascade.

Former District Judge Robert S. Kolliner of Hennepin county was called in as a seventh arbitrator in the case of W. M. Miller of the Western Theatres incorporated and the F. & R. Film company the other day. The three representatives from the Exhibitors' Association and three from the Film Board of Trade were unable to come to an agreement on the matter of a contract Miller declared was void.

The disagreement arose over the matter of a film ordered by Miller from F. & R. which was delivered to him by Vitagraph, now in the hands of Warner Brothers. Miller declared that his contract had been assigned to Vitagraph without his consent and insisted he was relieved from further obligation. The F. & R. company asserted that it had merely hired the Vitagraph company to handle its delivery of the film and that it still held the contract.

Judge Kolliner decided that the contract had not been assigned and that Miller must make good on it.

The question of whether a theatre owner has as much right to a dance hall license as a non-theatre owner is considerably agitated in Minneapolis just now. W. A. Steffes sought to acquire such a license for the operation of a dance hall in connection with his new theatre on Broadway which will soon near completion.

Other theatre owners in North Minneapolis insisted that if he got a license they must have one too and then opposition to the granting of dance hall licenses to theatres popped up in spite of the fact that Minneapolis already has one large combination of this kind and a new one has recently gone in at the Tower in St. Paul.

The matter was threshed out before a city council committee and later before the council itself on a minority report but at last information there was virtually no hope that Steffes or the others would get the license.

Les Davis of First National is back from a little trip to Litchfield and vicinity.

Mrs. A. B. Muller of the Rex theatre at Maple Lake brightened the Pathe office here recently.

Bob La Piner had a good idea go wrong on him the other day. In his exploitation work for F. & R. he sought to put over one on the "Iron Horse" by suggesting that the theatre manager promote an "Iron Horse" sundae in St. Paul drug horse.

"I can't do it," the man came back. "I'm only running it Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday."

Bill Biesel, new exploiteer of United Artists here, is getting his feet under him in the Twin Cities and will soon make a little visit to surrounding territory.

Finkelstein & Ruben have taken over the Lyceum theatre at Brainerd which for several years has been run by Clinton and Meyers, and the Lyceum and Rex theatres at Virginia. The Garrick there is already owned by F. & R. This ends the price war at Virginia.

Thief River Falls, Minn., is not going to let its motion picture man fall a prey to "large financial interests." The city council has passed a resolution to limit the number of motion picture houses in the city to two, the Lyceum and Majestic, owned by H. A. Brummond.

Jack Rothschild, veteran film man in Minneapolis, has begun business as a theatre broker under the name Rothschild Theatres company. It will buy, sell or lease theatres and now has the Old Mill, Minneapolis, and the Orpheum at Forest Lake.

The new theatre at Little Falls is to be opened by William Anderson, A. J. Hand and Herbert Griff. The building is being remodeled now and will soon be ready.

E. E. Gomersall of the Fox organization is back from his conference with Jimmy Grainger in Chicago.

Vincent Soweija has sold his equipment at Swanville, Minn., and gone to work for the New Lyric theatre at Little Falls, which leaves Swanville without a picture house.

The Majestic theatre at Lake Benton, Minn., has been purchased by L. W. Liddle of Carthage, S. D., from Caristen Gehlsen.

Otto Parlitz is running his Crystal theatre at Glencoa, Minn., six days a week, keeping it dark on Thursdays.

The Shen theatre at Lakeville was reopened recently by Robert Shen.

The old Olympia theatre operated by O. S. Adams at Sioux Falls has been taken over by Rehfield & Knapp and named the Royal.

J. F. Cubberly of Finklestein & Ruben's outlying theatres, took a trip into Dakota during the week.

Ben Ferris in his new job as director of all F. & R. advertising has been giving special attention to "Drusilla With a Million" at the Capitol theatre, St. Paul.

M. L. Finkelstein, senior partner of the Finkelstein & Ruben organization, has gone to Europe. He sailed on Sept. 16 for Cherbourg and will take a three weeks' vacation on the continent with several New York leaders of First National. Although the trip is to be an outing without any definite business in view it is safe to say that the Minneapolis theatre man will look over some of the foreign product with a view to possible use in this locality.

Frank Buckley of the Princess and Capitol theatres at Superior has been visiting around in Minneapolis.

Pat Dowling of Los Angeles studios of Christie Comedies paid a call on Jack O'Toole of Producers Distributing Corporation in Minneapolis during the week.

Fred Knispel, division representative of Producers Distributing corporation also paid a visit in the Minneapolis office of that company in his new capacity. He was formerly one of the Minneapolis staff until Cecil Mayberry came along and grabbed him for an assistant.

M. Radwin of the Regent Theatre in Eveleth, Minn., took in the Fair in the Twin Cities last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Dilley of the Grand Opera House at Northfield drove up again last week. They are getting to be regular visitors in the Twin Cities.

The safe in the Minneapolis office of Warner Brothers was tapped for $40 the other night and now there is a great deal of rushing to get all work done in the daytime and leave the office to the exclusive use of the world of yeggdom at night.

Thomas A. Burke, manager of Warner's was off on a trip through Fargo, Fergus Falls and nearby places when the excitement was going on.

C. J. Howard, associate sales manager of Pathe's office here has resigned effective September 12. They say he is going to California.

F. L. McMillan, of the Princess theatre in Winnebago, said it was the best Fair Week he had ever seen in the Twin Cities.

Morris Abrams, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, is just back from a visit to Devil's Lake, Fargo, Grand Forks and Aberdeen. He reports that both North and South Dakota are going wild over the prosperity brought them by the fine crops of last year and this.

H. L. Walker of the Rialto, Lyric and Orpheum theatres in Aberdeen is putting in a new $12,000 pipe organ in his Rialto theatre.

Carl Michaels, old Twin City exchange man, has gone to Southern Minnesota and Wisconsin territory for Metro-Goldwyn which has also put Max Berenson on its staff. Max will handle North Dakota.

Lou Metzger, manager of the company's complete service contract department, visited Manager Dunas at the Minneapolis office during the week.

Film Booking Offices took occasion during Fair week in Minneapolis to hold open house for all exhibitors who happened to be in town for the big Minnesota State Fair and Livestock Exposition. Eph Rosen and his staff had their hands full most of the week.

Among those who paid their respects were Mr. and Mrs. Ole Viste of the Murray theatre, Slayton, Minn.; Harvey Thorpe of the People's theatre, Crosby, Minn.; Harry Nelson of the Princess theatre, St. James, Minn.; Manager Joffe of the Lyric at Kenyon; Mrs. Peterson of the Happy Hour at Excelsior, Minn.; George Clow of Ogilvie, Minn.; Manager Ankrum of the Gem at Balaton, Benson of the Community theatre at Minnesota; Ed Kienholtz of the Eagle theatre at Buffalo, Minn.; Ed Buckley of the Idle Hour, Olivia.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Timber Wolf

(Fox—4809 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

BUCK JONES makes a ten-trike in this film. It's a Western far above the average, there's the usual melodramatic punches, hard fighting and fast riding, but the story is much stronger in point of direct human interest and clever characterizations than one is accustomed to find in this type of picture. Buck is simply great as the reserved, yet strenous man of action, who knows what he wants, and gets it, the "it" in this case being a girl, hard to woo and manifesting extreme dislike for Mr. Jones to the extent of bashing his face and checking him with a bullet. Buck cuts the Gordian knot by abducting her, and the cave-man method wins out. The star is also all to the good when he goes on the war-path and demonstrates his right to the nickname of "Timber Wolf" by tearing into and eliminating his foemen.

THEME. Melodrama, Western logging camp atmosphere, with silent hero, who defeats enemies through sheer fighting ability, and wins girl by cave-man methods.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The good photography and fast action. Buck's battles with the villain and latter's confederates. His kidnapping of heroine.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can safely boost this as an uncommonly good Western, a winner for Buck Jones, showing him in one of the best roles of his career.

DRAWING POWER. A sure-fire attraction wherever first-class Westerns are in favor.

SUMMARY. A Western of superior brand. Has plenty of melodramatic power and stages customary thrill stuff, but plot values are of particularly high grade for this sort of picture. A fine Buck Jones vehicle, with star in unusual role of woman-tamer.

THE CAST

Bruce Standing	Buck Jones
Reenee Brooke	Elinor Fair
Babe Deveril	David Dyas
Joe Terry	Sam Allen

The Timber Wolf (Fox)

PRESS NOTICE

LOVERS of thrilling Western melodrama and the many admirers of Buck Jones, can look forward to a decided treat when that star's latest picture, "The Timber Wolf" is featured as the principal attraction at the ——— Theatre on ———. Besides the usual hard fighting and fast riding episodes for which all Mr. Jones' vehicles are noted, this one offers an unusual love story in which the hero kidnaps a girl who thinks she hates him, and teaches her to love him in the end.

It's a great film with a splendid cast, with Elinor Fair as the fascinating heroine and Dave Dyas, Sam Allen, William Walling and Robert Mack supporting the principals.

CATCH LINES

They called him the "Timber Wolf" and he lived up to the nickname when the time came for demonstrating how he could fight.

From intense hatred this girl's mind turned to love.

The Great Sensation

(Columbia Pictures—4470 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

REGISTERS as a good average program attraction, with William Fairbanks executing several of the lively thrill stunts for which he is famous, and more comedy stuff to balance the heroics than is usual in this star's vehicles. The melodramatic sequences are built upon the scheming of a couple of crooks to pull off a jewel robbery, and these are well handled, rounding into a rattling climax, the hero having a strenuous mixup with the underworld villain and his confederate, from which he naturally emerges victorious. Bill, disguised as a chauffeur in the employ of the girl he loves, who is aware of his identity and invents all sorts of disagreeable jobs for him to tackle, gets a lot of fun out of these situations.

Pauline Garon plays the mischievous heroine prettily.

THEME. Melodrama, with comedy relief and hero who poses as chauffeur for girl he loves, defeats crooks and regains proceeds of jewel robbery.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Wreck of heroine's auto. The comedy bits. Fast action. Fairbanks' high dive from cliff to rescue girl. His rough house scrap with crooks in finale.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill this as a rapid melodrama, with comedy episodes that get the laughs. Stress the thrills, Fairbanks' stunts, particularly dive from cliff, jewel robbery scene and hero's fight with crooks.

DRAWING POWER. Should please patrons in neighborhood and small houses.

SUMMARY. O. K. as program attraction. Fast-moving melo, with lively comedy here and there. Suspense well developed, with Fairbanks doing customary thrill stunts, battling with crooks, and winning girl.

PRESS NOTICE

A PICTURE which more than lives up to its suggestive title, "The Great Sensation" is listed as the big screen attraction at the ——— Theatre on ———. It's a rousing melodrama, with fast action all the way, balanced by crisp comedy and pleasing love interest. William Fairbanks is seen as a wealthy chap who, disguised as a chauffeur, works for the flapper he falls in love with, eventually winning her, after saving her from drowning and the wiles of a crook who steals her mother's jewels.

Pretty, vivacious Pauline Garon is the heroine.

CATCH LINES

You know what William Fairbanks is capable of in the line of executing marvelous stunt work. Watch for his high dive in this picture as well as other extraordinary feats.

He had everything he wanted in this world, except a certain girl's love.

The Haunted Range
(Davis Distributing Div.—4900 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A GHOST mystery angle introduced into this picture renders its plot a bit different from that of the usual Western, even if the spook turns out after all to be just the villain in disguise and not a visitant from spirit-land. Outside of which there are the customary scrapping thrills, spectacular riding stunts, and so on, which one looks for in open air adventure tales. The action rattles along at top speed, with never a hitch, the racing event, won by the hero after his ill-wishers have tried all sorts of dodges to bump him into eternity, including the dynamiting of the road-course, is unique and startling, and, taken as a whole, the feature ought to prove an excellent program attraction.

Ken Maynard and his clever horse Tarzan are a well matched pair, the star rides well, puts lots of ginger into his work, and the equine actor earns plenty of applause. Alma Rayford is an exceedingly attractive heroine and Harry Moody a strenuous performer in the heavy role.

THEME. Western melodrama, villain playing ghost to hide cattle-thieving operations.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Rapid, well sustained action. Exploits of horse Tarzan. Maynard's riding stunts, his fights with Slade. Racing scene. Roundup of rustlers.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Ken Maynard, Tarzan and Alma Rayford. Title has advertising value, boost the ghost angle as something new in Westerns. You can safely praise the picture as a galloping melo, alive with thrills and offering an appealing romance.

DRAWING POWER. Good stuff for any house where lively Westerns are in demand.

SUMMARY. A rousing Western, with a ghost mystery issue which lends variety to plot. Puts over numerous melodramatic punches, offers many fast riding and fighting situations. Has romantic values. Stunts of Ken Maynard and his horse enjoyable. A good program attraction.

THE CAST

Terry Baldwin	Ken Maynard
Judith Kellerd	Alma Rayford
Alex Forester	Harry Moody
Charlie Titus	Fred Burns
Executor	Al Hallett
Ralph Kellerd	Bob Williamson
Terry's Horse	Tarzan

Author, Frank H. Clark. Director, Paul Hurst. Photographed by Frank Cotner.

SYNOPSIS. Terry Baldwin's uncle leaves him a cattle ranch on condition that he clears the dead man's name of a murder accusation and eliminates a ghost that haunts the property. Failing this, the ranch goes to Alex Forester, half-brother of deceased. Judith Kellerd and her brother Ralph live on the ranch. After many adventures Terry proves Buck Slade, leader of cattle-thieves to be the supposed spirit, rounds him up and his gang and weds Judith.

The Haunted Range (Davis Dis. Div.)

PRESS NOTICE

"THE Haunted Range," a Western picture with a ghost angle, of exceptional melodramatic power, is billed as the big screen attraction at the ———— Theatre on ————. The film is brimful of exciting action and suspense, with a well developed love romance furnishing sentimental interest, is beautifully photographed and speeds into a splendid climax. Ken Maynard is the star, and, with the assistance of his wonder-horse Tarzan, does some great work in the perilous riding line.

CATCH LINES

A ghost has no business on a cattle ranch! That was hero Terry Baldwin's idea, and he refused to be scared away by an angry spirit. But it took considerable battling on his part before he solved the mystery of the Haunted Range.

Mystery, melodrama and romance. They're all present in this picture, with a thrill in every foot, lightning action and a climax that will please everyone.
